Schools give layoff notices to 113 staffers

By Dennis O'Connor
staff writer

The Board of Education unanimously voted Monday to give layoff notices (pink slips) to 113 Plymouth-Canton staff members — 34 less than last year.

Staff members receiving layoff notices have been employed by Plymouth-Canton Community Schools approximately 3½ years, according to Superintendent John Hoben. The list includes 94 active teachers, eight teachers currently on leave of absence or going on leave, nine special education teachers and two nurses.

The board unanimously had voted to give notification of possible layoffs to 23 administrators in late March. Decisions on formal pink slipping of administrators will take place at the next regular board meeting April 26.

LAST YEAR, the board gave pink slips to 147 staff members during its 1981-82 budget-reduction procedure. There were 121 recalled, however, and 26 still remain laid off, according to Norm Kee, assistant superintendent for personnel.

Pillo Polo pandemonium?

Resident arrested in area pyramid scheme

By Teri Banas
staff writer

One Canton resident, along with three others, were arrested last week in two raids on homes where police allege pyramid schemes were operating.

The raids on two Westland homes last Thursday were the result of undercover investigations by the Livonia Police Department in cooperation with a special organized crime unit of the Michigan State Police.

Police from Westland, Canton and Redford Township converged on the homes in the 30000 block of Joy Road and the 7800 block of Gary Street within a half-hour of each other and arrested four alleged organizers of the schemes. Some 16 other participants were reportedly involved, however, none of them was charged, police said.

Police said the two operations were related, with some of the principals involved in both.

Charged with participating in a pyramid or chain promotion game and conspiracy to participate in a pyramid or chain promotion game were Donald Osterwind, 45, of Westland; Tsakos Adamandios, 28, of Redford Township; Jack Redwood, 28, of Westland; and Rosemary Globke, 33, of Kingsley, Canton Township.

Both charges are felonies. If convicted, a suspect could face up to seven years in prison. The conspiracy charge, upon conviction, also carries a fine of up to $20,000 while the intent charge carries a maximum fine of $10,000.

Osterwind and Adamandios, arraigned in Redford's 17th District Court last Friday, stood mute on the charges and each was released on a $3,000 personal bond. Judge Robert Brang entered pleas of innocent on their behalf. An April 20 exam was set for the two men.

Redwood and Globke were arraigned in Wayne County's Out-County court last weekend by Judge James Garber of the 35th District Court. Both stood mute and pleas of innocent were entered on their behalf. They were released on $10,000 personal bonds each and both will return later this week for preliminary exams.

The arrests followed by one week another Westland pyramid bust in which police arrested three men.

Lt. Richard Ericson, head of Livonia's police intelligence bureau, said the arrests were the beginning of a "vigorous" police action to quell the growing popularity of the illegal pyramid games in the suburbs.

He anticipated that recent police crackdowns could cause potential operators to become "gun shy" in attempting other scams.

Those arrested last week represented a variety of occupations, including a short order cook, a homemaker and a Chrysler Corp. employee. Ericson said students from Franklin High School in Livonia also were participating. The students, however, were not charged by police.

Police said the bust at the Osterwind home in Westland at 7:30 p.m. Thursday occurred shortly after the party was moved from Adamandios' home in Redford Township.

At 8 p.m., police moved in on another party at Redwood's home, shortly after it was moved from the Globke home in Canton Township, police said.

According to Capt. Robert Robertson, head of the criminal investigation unit of the Michigan State Police, participants in the Osterwind-Adamandios group allegedly were being asked to contribute $50 for an ultimate $400 "payoff." The second group required a $500 contribution for a $4,000 "payoff," police alleged.

Ericson said most of the participants ranged in age from 25-45. "They looked like the typical suburban families," he added.

As of this week, Ericson said there was no decision made by the Wayne County prosecutor's office as to whether others will be charged.

Police said the four arrested were supposedly nearing their "payoff" time that night. Police believe they were "co-captains" in the games who were moving up to the "captain" spot in the pyramid structure.

JOHN BARNETTE: "This has cost me a fortune." Barnette stands outside a "temporary" trailor where he conducts business.

Poole, tow operator tangle over ordinance infractions

By Arlene Funke
staff writer

A two-year-old feud with Canton officials has John Barnette running his towing business from a chair outside his locked building on Sheldon south of Michigan Avenue.

Barnette, a partner in John and Dude's Towing Service, is in violation of the township's zoning ordinance. He has been occupying a "temporary" trailer for too long, and his permanent building lacks water and toilet facilities.

The violations date back to 1980. On April 7, 35th District Court Judge James Garber fined Barnette $150 for failing to obtain an occupancy permit and sewer tap-ins.

Barnette subsequently locked his doors and moved his business outdoors. He says he is trying to comply with regulations, but township officials are "harassing" him and "bleeding" his finances.

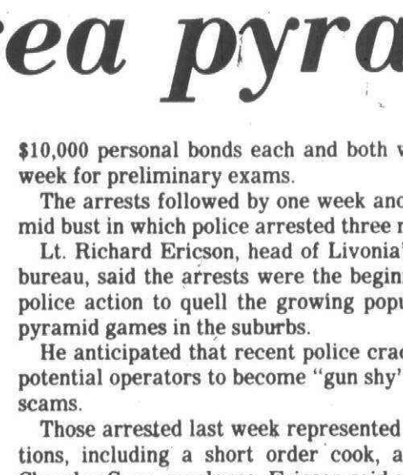

"We have given him two years to rectify the situation," said Garber. "He has to realize he has to comply with the rules."

WHETHER BARNETTE may legally operate the business outdoors (a phone and a chair are his "office") is in question.

"That's a gray area," said Supervisor James Poole.

Poole added he is planning to file a libel suit against Barnette and the Detroit News for allegations which the tow operator made in a newspaper article last Friday. The comments dealt with past political campaigns.

"We certainly encourage businesses to be in a permanent building, but I don't know of any law that prohibits a pay phone (outside)," said chief ordinance official Aaron Machnik. "We would like him to complete his building."

JAMES POOLE: "He (Barnette) has been told he will get a permit as soon as he hooks up his water and sewer. He's asking me to break the law."

BARNETTE MAINTAINS Poole has the authority to issue a temporary occupancy permit, so the building could remain open. Poole disagrees.

"He has been told he will get a permit as soon as he hooks up his water and sewer," said Poole. "He's asking me to break the law."

Barnette says he has had repeated difficulty getting his blueprints approved, causing additional expenses.

It will cost about $9,000 to run a pipe to the sewer line and he has been unable to obtain financing to cover construction costs, Barnette said.

Tap fees, already paid, were $4,500, he said.

Currently, Barnette is waiting for warmer weather to allow the project to go forward.

"This has cost me a fortune," said Barnette.

ACCORDING TO records, Barnette ran afoul of the ordinance department in 1980.

Barnette was cited by the ordinance department in March 1980 for maintaining a trailer in violation of a decision by the zoning board of appeals. In September 1980, he was ticketed for failing to obtain a certificate of occupancy.

Also at issue was the sewer tap-in.

Barnette pleaded guilty and was fined $500. Garber said the fine would be suspended if the building was brought into compliance by July 1981.

The owners of a ranch-style house on 10 acres in western Canton are Mike Hermann (left), daughter Tammy, 3, and wife Barbara. The Hermanns bought their dream house in a home exchange with the Simons. The Hermanns kept three dogs (Smokey, Kahlu and Benji) in the deal.

Families find their dream properties — in an exchange

By Arlene Funke
staff writer

Take my house . . . please.

No, that isn't a variation of a Henny Youngman joke. Two Canton families "swapped" houses about a month ago, and everyone seems to be pleased with the results.

It all began when Mike and Barbara Hermann found their dream property — 10 acres with a ranch-style house on Gyde Road in western Canton.

The Hermanns, who had been living in a four-bedroom colonial on Bannockburn in Carriage Hills subdivision in Canton, wanted a country setting so they could have horses.

Meanwhile, the Gyde Road couple — Ken and Rita Simon — had put their house up for sale and were awaiting the birth of their first baby.

THE HERMANNS offered to buy the Gyde Road house, then urged the Simons take a look at the Bannockburn house. The Simons looked, liked it and decided it would do.

"We've been looking for 2½ years," said Hermann, a salesman for Kasle Steel in Dearborn. "I'm a city slicker. My wife is the country girl."

Mrs. Simon explained her family's move was prompted by a "shift in priorities.

"It was the prospects of only one income after the baby was born," she said. "The timing was right. We like the (new) home — we like it a lot."

'The timing was right. We like the (new) home; we like it a lot.'
— Rita Simon colonial owner

The two husbands "pretty much talked through a deal," said Mrs. Simon. "It was a fluke kind of thing."

THE FAMILIES, who hadn't been acquainted prior to the house purchases, worked out most of the details. Lorraine Kornegger, a real estate agent with Earl Keim Realty on Farmington Road in Livonia, handled the sales.

"The interesting thing about this is that I didn't find anybody (real estate colleagues) who had had this experience," she said. "I talked to a lot of people, (and) nobody had property exchanges."

The moves occurred simultaneously about a month ago. Both homes are about the same size — 1,800 square feet, according to the families.

THE HERMANNS gained a three-bedroom ranch with a spacious "great room" with fireplace, sitting on 10 acres. They paid $99,500.

They're pleased because the new home is close to Barbara's job with a Michigan Bell Telephone plant in Plymouth. The couple have a daughter, 3½.

The Simons' pet Labrador retriever, Kahlu, remained with the Hermanns, where the dog would have more space.

The Simons got a four-bedroom colonial with spacious kitchen, fireplace and other features at $65,100.

They also were happy to remain in Canton. Ken Simon, a systems programmer for a group of hospitals, has joint custody of a 5-year-old daughter by a previous marriage.

"We didn't want her schooling to be disrupted," explained Mrs. Simon. "We all sort of took a loss (on sale price). But in the long run, we won."

AS THE Simons await the birth of their baby, the Hermanns are making plans for their new spread of land.

"We going to build a barn and have horses," said Hermann, with a laugh. "I've ordered 200 fence posts. I got (Simon's) tractor.

"The neighbors on both sides welcomed us," he continued. "They brought us a cake. The hospitality is unbelievable."

Businessmen fined in ordinance cases

Numerous hearings followed and some progress was made. In July 1981, Barnette moved into his building without permits.

Garber said the district court is under pressure from higher court levels to clear up long-standing cases. The case was settled last week.

Garber $150 of the original $500 fine, waiving the remainder.

"He had done some things, no question about it," said Garber.

BARNETTE IS no stranger to controversy.

He became a candidate for township supervisor in 1980 to "get even" with officials, then later dropped out of the primary race. He said he had run for office when the township board decided to seek bids on towing services.

Barnette's firm had performed that function exclusively for a couple of years, towing away impounded or damaged vehicles. Poole recently instructed the police to split the township's towing business between John and Dude's and Haverstick Towing of Westland.

"I'm the third or fourth supervisor (Barnette) has accused of picking on him," said Poole.

In these times of highly sophisticated — and highly competitive — little league organizations, it's nice to see children participating in games simply for the fun and exercise.

And it really doesn't matter who wins.

The game is called Pillo Polo, and the inventor is Chuck TenBroeck, a Canton resident and branch manager of Security Bank and Trust on the corner of Canton Center and Warren roads.

Pillo Polo is similar to hockey, but is played with a soft, foam-rubber ball and special foam-tipped sticks for safety reasons.

TenBroeck organized the league as an after-school activity for students, grades K-3, at Miller Elementary School. They compete at 7:30 p.m. Mondays at the Miller gym.

The event is run primarily as a fall and winter activity — during the off-season of Miller's popular T-Ball program. Volunteer coaches are parents from the Miller PTO, and the cost is minimal. "The purpose is to go out and play. We don't keep track of the goals," said TenBroeck. "It's just to have a good time. The coaches, a lot of times, don't even remember who won or lost the game.

Staff photos by Gary Caskey

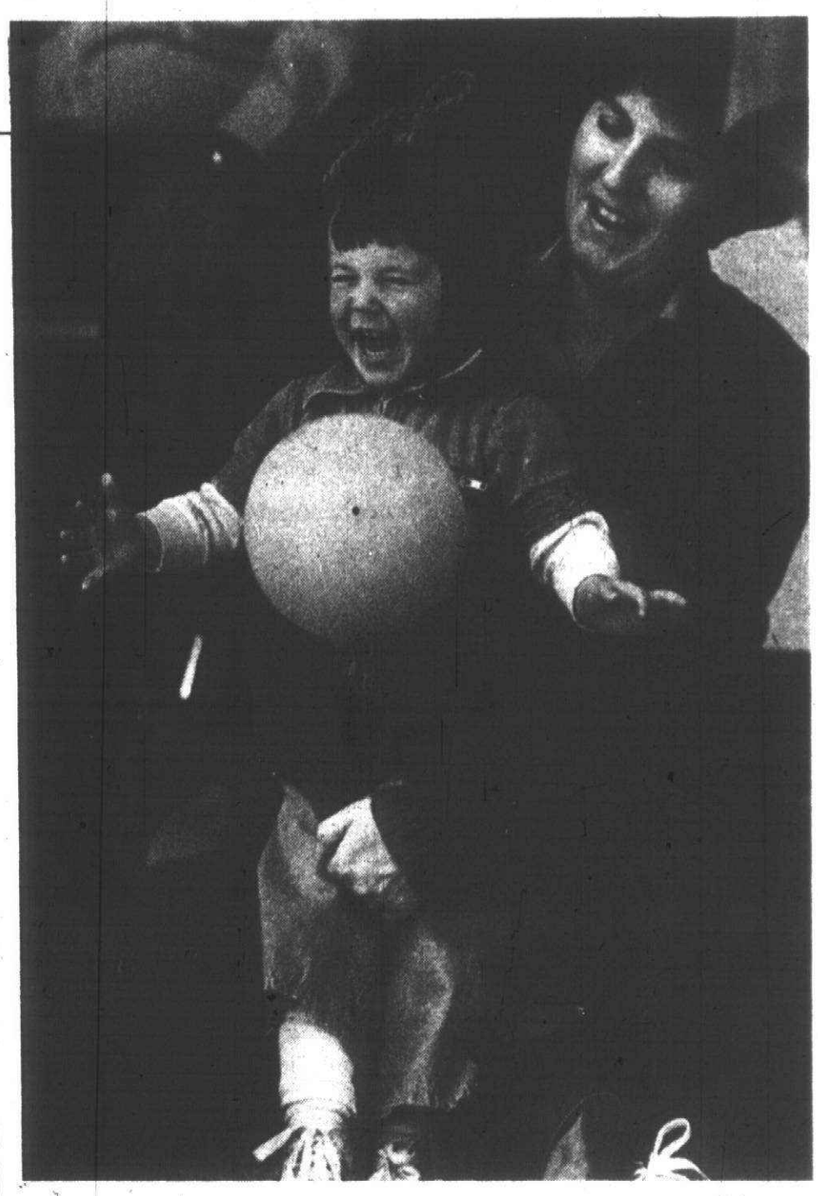

"It's the first time there's an athletic program for kindergarteners where they have the skills to play for fun."

The Pillo Polo league includes 10 teams, 12 members on each squad, according to TenBroeck. Six actual playing positions exist on the floor, but team members who aren't playing at a particular time stand along the sidelines and help keep the ball in play when it's hit out-of-bounds.

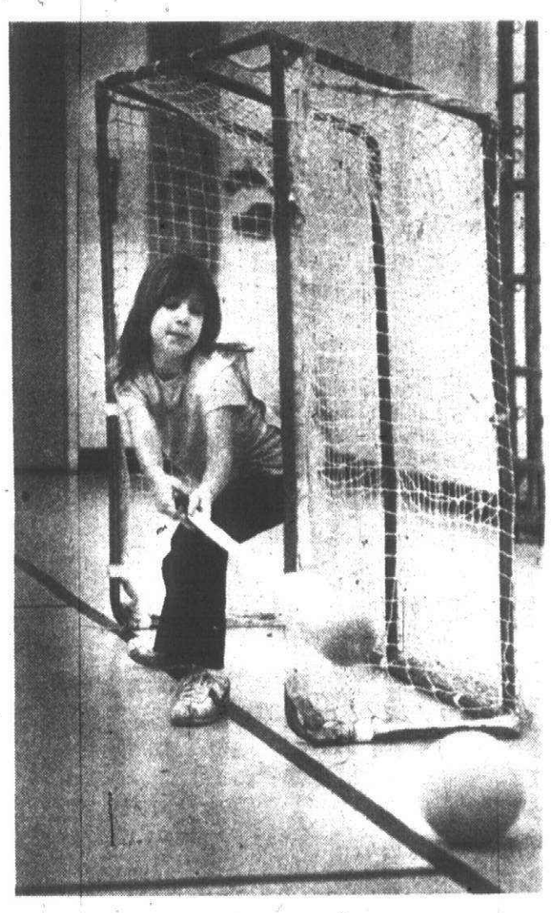

Other elementary schools which are interested in getting a Pillo Polo league started may contact TenBroeck — through Miller school — for more information.

"I offered to any school to come out and set up a program, but no one ever called," TenBroeck said.

For more information, call Miller at 981-4231.

Michigan residents rate schools 'above average'

Asked to rate the quality of the public schools in their community, four out of every 10 Michigan adults (42 percent) gave the schools an "A" or "B" on a report card rating scale.

Another 33 percent rated the public schools a "C", while 14 percent gave schools a "D" or "E."

The ratings were part of an extensive public opinion survey with 802 adults in the state, conducted last Dec. 7-10 by the staff of the State Board of Education's "Project Outreach" program.

RESULTS of the survey were released by Phillip E. Runkel, state superintendent of public instruction, State Board of Education President Barbara Dumouchelle and Project Outreach Director Ned S. Hubbell.

Michigan residents rated the schools significantly higher than a nationwide sample of adults did in the 1981 Gallup poll, according to Runkel. Michiganians also gave significantly fewer "failing grades" to schools than those found by Gallup pollsters.

Compared to other state-supported services, eight out of every 10 persons (82 percent) opposed reducing state allocations to public schools, the state Michigan survey revealed.

The typical Michiganian both praised and criticized the public schools, but praise exceeded criticism. Those interviewed praised school curriculum, teachers, school facilities and special programs or services.

DISLIKES focused chiefly on school discipline, some teachers, some curriculum weaknesses and school financial need.

The latter — school financial need — was named the biggest problem facing local school boards last year.

Forty-seven percent felt public schools have enough money to provide a good school program, while another 38 percent believe the schools need more funds. Only 6 percent of the survey respondents feel the schools have too much money.

Asked to rate how public schools spent available funds, 5 percent said "excellent," 35 percent said "good," and 32 percent said "fair." One out of every five adults in the state (19 percent) gave schools a "poor" rating in school spending practices.

The opinion survey found a vast majority (69 percent) favored changing the school tax collection period from December to mid-summer.

SURVEY participants also were asked to react to a list of 10 possible ways school districts could save money.

Only two of these cost-cutting procedures were favored: reducing the number of school administrators (72 percent favored this) and reducing bus transportation costs by increasing the walking distance of students (53 percent support).

Most vigorously opposed suggestions were reductions in special reading services (84 percent opposed), reducing student counseling services (78 percent opposed), and increasing class sizes by reducing the number of teachers (71 percent opposed).

OTHER SURVEY findings:

- 70 percent favor having students pay for driver education in public schools.
- Majority support was evident for sending students in low-enrollment vocational education classes to a nearby school that offers the classes, and for sending students in low-enrollment, advanced high school classes to a nearby school, rather than dropping those courses entirely.
- Residents are nearly equally divided between the options of school district consolidation vs. voting more millage to remain a separate school district. Some 48 percent of those polled favored consolidation, and 41 percent were opposed. Forty-four percent would pay more millage to remain as a separate school district, but 46 percent are opposed.
- Overwhelming support was given to the concept of more citizen involvement in public schools, with volunteers serving as aides in classrooms, libraries, lunchrooms and on playgrounds. One out of every three persons polled said he or she would like to become such a volunteer in the schools.
- 83 percent of adults favored public schools' providing retraining and job skill classes for unemployed adults; 66 percent also endorsed the idea of permitting adults who have not completed high school to enroll in regular, daytime high school classes, if there is room.
- 57 percent favored the use of schools as public meeting places for senior citizens, even though students occupy part of the building. However, Michigan adults strongly opposed, by a margin of 2-1, having public schools provide child care services for pre-school children.

Schools pink slip 113 staffers

Approximately 60 teachers may be laid off before the 1982-83 school year, according to estimates by Hoben — although 113 will receive notification.

Estimates show a reduction of about 20 teaching positions from proposed budget cuts, another 20 positions from teachers returning from leaves or reassignment of laid-off administrators, and another 20 positions from declining enrollment, Hoben said.

Plymouth-Canton schools lost approximately 400 students in enrollment last school year. Projected declines in enrollment are ahead of last year's pace, Kee said.

The board voted, 5-0, on the 113 notifications. President Carol Davis and Trustee William Decker were not at the meeting.

MEANWHILE, the board postponed a scheduled workshop on Monday and now will hold a special meeting where six administrators, who recently received possible pink-slip notification, have asked for a hearing. The meeting will be closed to the public.

After the hearing, the board may open the meeting and discuss goals and objectives for the 1982-83 school year, time permitting.

Lolly Buikema, principal of Miller Elementary School, voiced her concerns over the possible administrative layoffs. She spoke at the citizens' comments portion of the meeting, representing the 46-member Plymouth-Canton Administrators Association (PCA), the administrators' union.

Some 12 administrators from the a PCA were given possible layoff notification, Buikema said. This represents 26 percent of the educational leaders who directly supervise students and teachers, Buikema added.

The board should consider the consequences of each budget cut, Buikema said.

"Parents of our students are speaking to us in loud and clear voices: They want increased instructional accountability plus improved management of student behavior," Buikema said. "The administrators whose jobs are in jeopardy have major responsibilities in these areas."

2 withdraw, support cop in race

By Sandra Armbruster

editor

The race to fill one seat on the Wayne-Westland school board is shaping up as a faceoff between an incumbent who works as a school teacher and a challenger who is a Westland police lieutenant.

Although four Westland residents filed by the Monday deadline, two said they plan to withdraw from the race to strengthen opposition to the incumbent, Thomas Barrett.

The four had filed by the Monday deadline for the June 14 regular school election when voters will fill one four-year term on the board. The district also includes part of Canton Township.

James Brennan and James Hedges told the Observer Wednesday morning that they plan to withdraw from the race. Deadline for filing notice of withdrawal is Thursday at 4 p.m.

Instead, both said they would support challenger Dewey Combs, a Westland police lieutenant.

OPPOSITION to five current board members, including Barrett, surfaced nearly three months ago when a group called Taxpayers United Together began a recall movement against the five.

Brennan and Hedges said that they reached a decision to withdraw after an organizational meeting Combs held Tuesday night. Brennan, 35, said that he attended the meeting and then talked with his supporters.

"It's best if there is only one candidate against the gentleman in office," said Brennan, a Westland resident for most of the last 30 years. "I feel that with my people supporting Combs he has a better chance of getting elected.

"This way we can control more votes."

Wayne-Westland School District

The district serves southeast Canton

Brennan said that he considers Barrett the strongest member of the seven-person board. He added that its "very possible" he (Brennan) will be a candidate next year when there will be two vacancies on the board.

Hedges, 46, said that he decided to withdraw after listening to a tape of the meeting attended by his wife and after talking with Combs Wednesday morning.

According to Hedges, both he and Combs have the "same convictions and feelings" about changing the board. Hedges said he was concerned that his candidacy would take votes away from the challengers and that by withdrawing from the race, he could "guarantee that Combs will be elected."

"This is in the best interests of all the people in Westland," said Hedges. "I did get started a little late, and rather than hurt any chances of (a challenger) getting elected, I'm going to withdraw."

Hedges, a Westland resident for the past 12 years, added that he would be interested in the next opening on the board, whether it came as a result of the recall or the next regular election.

"I'm not giving up at all. I will be back," he said.

COMBS SAID that he didn't ask Brennan and Hedges to withdraw. He said that about 75 people turned out for his organizational meeting. He admitted that "someone did mention that a field with a lot of candidates favors the incumbent."

But Combs, 45, said he didn't consider four persons running for one seat a large field. He added that Brennan and Hedges withdrawal makes possible election "easier, especially if they throw their support behind me."

Dissatisfaction with the way the school board handled the renegotiation of the teachers' contract as well as the proposed kindergarten through grade 14 program prompted Combs to run for the board, he said.

This is his first try for public office, but Combs thinks he can be a "strong enough person to have some influence" on other board members.

"One vote won't be able to do it alone, but I think I can sway other board members to get them to vote the way people want them to vote," he said. "They've lost it over the years — they've lost contact with the people whom they represent."

Combs describes himself as a "typical voter/taxpayer/citizen who is concerned about the same things that other people are."

Combs said he doesn't think that the entire 32 mills renewed by taxpayers last year were needed.

Teachers prepare back-to-school day

A program called "I've Been Back to School" is being planned for next month to acquaint community leaders with the real world of today's classroom.

The event is sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton Education Association (PCEA).

Leaders from various walks of life will be invited to participate in a day-long program that will feature teachers working side-by-side with adults in classroom activities.

"I've Been Back to School" is scheduled for May 27 as part of the teachers union's community relations program.

Teachers who will act as hosts are to arrange to be with the leader throughout the school day.

"LESSON plans" will be given to the leader who will be helping teachers with classroom activities as well as other functions which take place during a typical school day.

The PCEA is contacting industrialists, law enforcement officials, business persons, city officials, media management, bankers, religious leaders, and others.

"We believe the project will provide greader citizen involvement in understanding educational needs," said union president Mickey Edell.

"It also should provide the Plymouth-Canton public with community leadership views on the schools — based on actual participation in classroom activities."

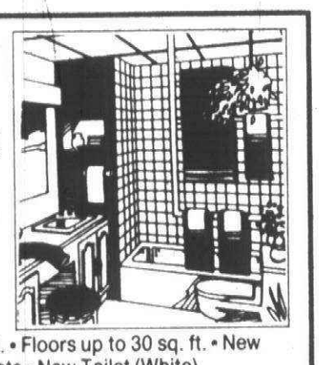

LORI MANOOGIAN, of Isbister Elementary, is coordinating the "I've Been Back to School" program.

"We have received the endorsement and cooperation of Superintendent Mike Hoben," Manoogian said.

A few helpful hints

Now's the time to prepare bikes for spring riding

At this time of year bicycles are coming out of winter hibernation as owners prepare to enjoy the benefits of cycling as sport, recreation or for commuting.

Although a safe bicycle is important year round it is most important that the bicycle be in top shape when it hits the road each spring.

Suggested actions which should be taken to prepare a bicycle for spring and summer use have been recommended by Larry Loiselle, of Jerry's Bicycles on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth.

Loiselle, whose background includes 22 years of retail bicycle store experience, has completed Schwinn, Raliegh and Sturmey-Archer factory-training courses.

He presently is serving as secretary of the National Bicycle Dealers Association and as president of the Bicycle Dealers Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Before starting to make adjustments, Loiselle advises that the owner may want to take a polishing rag and remove the dust and greasy film which may have accumulated over the winter. Cleaning up the bike will make the rest of the check more enjoyable and make it easier to spot trouble areas.

THE SEAT OF the bicycle can be tested by grabbing the nose of the seat and firmly trying to move it up and down, side to side. Tighten if necessary.

Handle bars can be tested by placing the front wheel between your legs (you are in front of the bicycle, facing the rear in the upright position) grabbing both ends of the bars and firmly try to twist the handlebars from side to side and up and down. Tighten as necessary.

The rider's correct position on the bicycle is very important to the total feel, control, safety and enjoyment of the bicycle, added Loiselle.

"As you are sitting on the saddle your knee should be only slightly bent at the pedal's lowest position."

TO TEST THE fitness of the crank, pedals and steering column, said Loiselle, use these procedures:

- For the crank, grab the crank at the end of one of the pedal arms, move in side-to-side direction. There should be no wobble. Repeat this procedure at the 6 a.m., 9, noon, and 3 p.m. positions. The crank should spin freely and be tight against the crank arm.
- To check pedals, simply spin. There should be no binding. Also examine for breaking or broken rivets or missing rubbers on the pedals.
- The steering column's check can be done in two ways. Those bikes with caliper brakes, apply the front brakes and while holding the rear end of the bicycle firmly put slight forward and back pressure on the bike. If loose, it needs some attention.

Using the second method (for non-caliper brake bikes), straddle the bar on the bicycle and then grab the handlebars at the extreme end. Exert slight upward pressure. There should be no looseness.

Now, in both cases, lift up front end of the bicycle and swivel the handlebars. There should be a smooth turning action.

IF YOUR BICYCLE is equipped with a light set, Loiselle said, make sure it is operating and renew batteries as needed.

Check to be sure that any fenders, bags, flags, bells, horns or other accessories are firmly attached (not rubbing) and in working order.

All new bicycles for street use are required by law to have reflectors.

It would be wise, Loiselle added, to review local light ordinances concerning bicycles and also to review all safety rules regarding bicycles.

"After all, a safe bicycle is not safe if ridden unsafely. It is your responsibility to obey these rules. It also is common courtesy to your fellow cyclist, pedestrian, and motorist."

FOR GEARS and the chain, check all controls to make sure they are firmly attached to the proper spot. Check the control wires for wear, frays or breakage. Replace as needed.

Then lubricate using light oil or spray lubricant, applying to all pivot points and points of entry of wire into the casing.

If rusted to a frozen position you may have to remove and replace the control wires. With a 10- or five-speed unit it is necessary to lubricate the pivoting joints on the gear changers.

On a three-speed about one-half teaspoon of oil or 3-4 drops in the rear hub through the lubricating hole will be sufficient.

Lubrication of the chain should follow a cleaning of the grit and old oil from the chain. The chain lubrication procedure should be repeated every 1-2 months during the riding season.

Test the gears to make sure they are working in all positions. You can do this by either riding a short distance or having a friend lift the back while while you run through the gears.

A BICYCLE may be equipped with one of two types of braking systems — caliper or hand brakes, or coaster or pedal brakes.

If the bicycle is equipped with caliper brakes, first inspect the cables for any fraying or broken areas. Damaged wires should be replaced.

Then check the handles to make sure they are firmly attached to the handlebar. The actual caliper unit should be attached firmly to the frame.

The brake shoes should be equidistant from the rim, and the rubber pads should be plyable enough to dig your fingernail into them and leave a mark.

Hardened shoes will decrease the effectiveness of braking. Using a light spray lubricant, apply lightly to the pivot and friction points (at the handle, on the caliper, and where the wire enters the casing).

Then check the effectiveness of each brake independently. Do this by rolling the bicycle forward applying pressure to the handle. Too much lever travel, and the brakes should be adjusted tighter.

If the bicycle is equipped with coaster-sytle brakes, ride the bicycle in a safe area. In applying the brake the pedals should rotate three to five inches before the brake is activated. The same is true in engaging the drive mechanism.

If you must rotate the pedal more than three to five inches you may require internal service, Loiselle said.

IN CHECKING wheels, tighten axle nuts, then lift the front of the bicycle up slightly and spin the wheel, checking for trueness.

Also inspect the rim for dents or flat spots.

Feel each spoke for tightness; then grab the top of the fork near the wheel, slightly move the wheel in a side to side direction with the other hand, and the wheel should spin freely with no side to side play. Adjust as needed.

Repeat the same procedure on the rear wheel.

Any questions about safety or making a bicycle mechanically sound can be asked of any NBDA professional bike dealer.

Suggested rules for safe bicycle riding

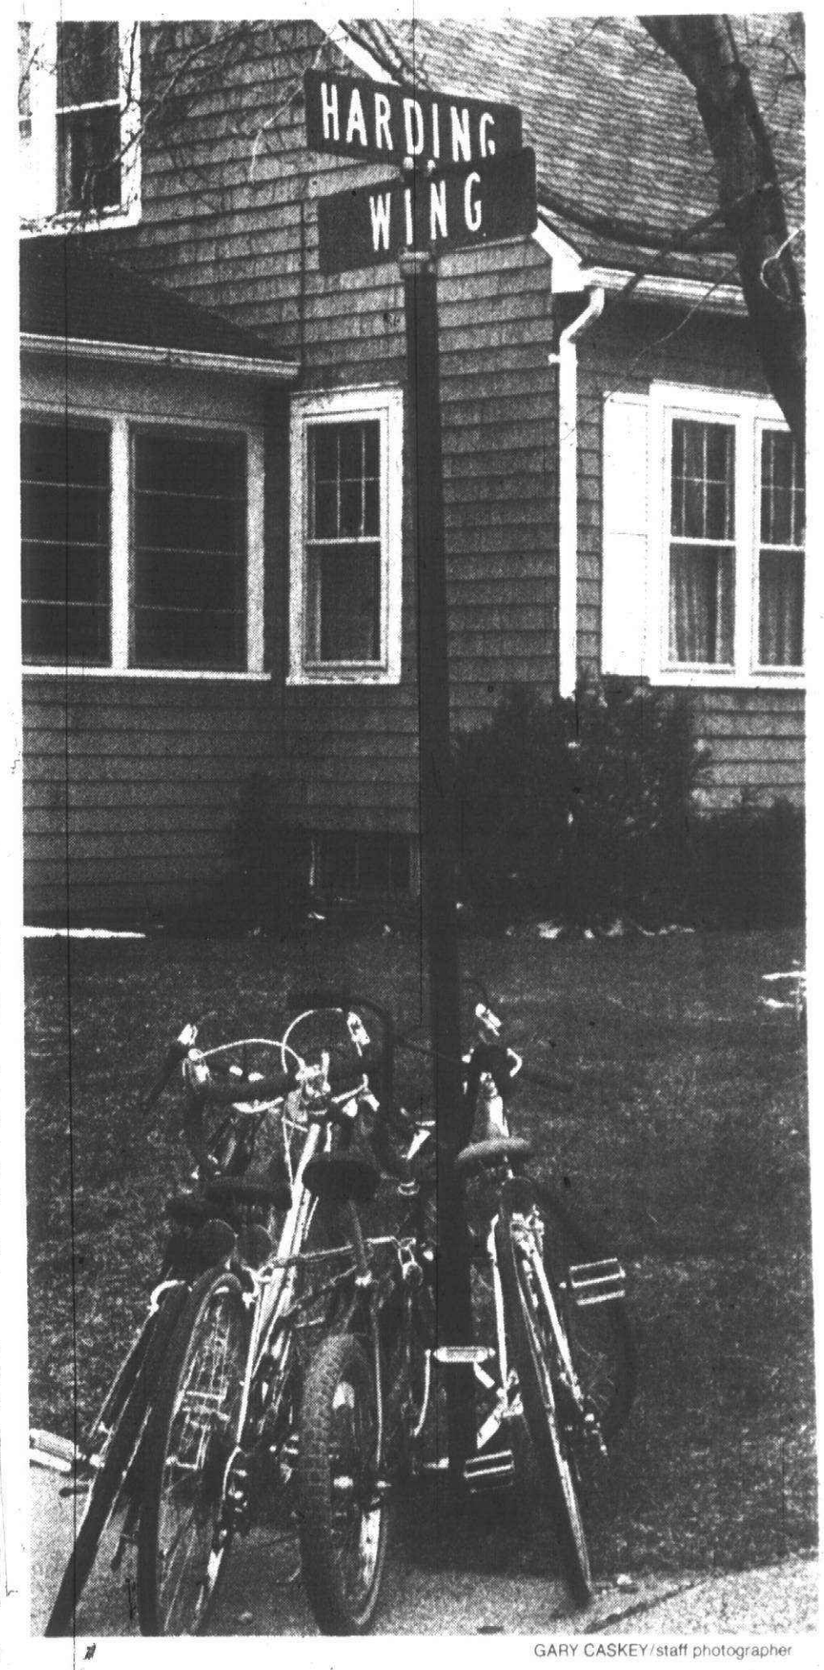

With the arrival of warmer weather, bicyclists will be hitting the streets throughout the city and township.

The National Bicycle Dealers Association (NBDA) reminds cyclists that a bicycle is considered a vehicle and riders are obligated to follow the laws of the road.

Larry Loiselle, secretary of the NBDA and operator of Jerry's Bicycles on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth, says riders should be responsible for and courteous to all riders on the road.

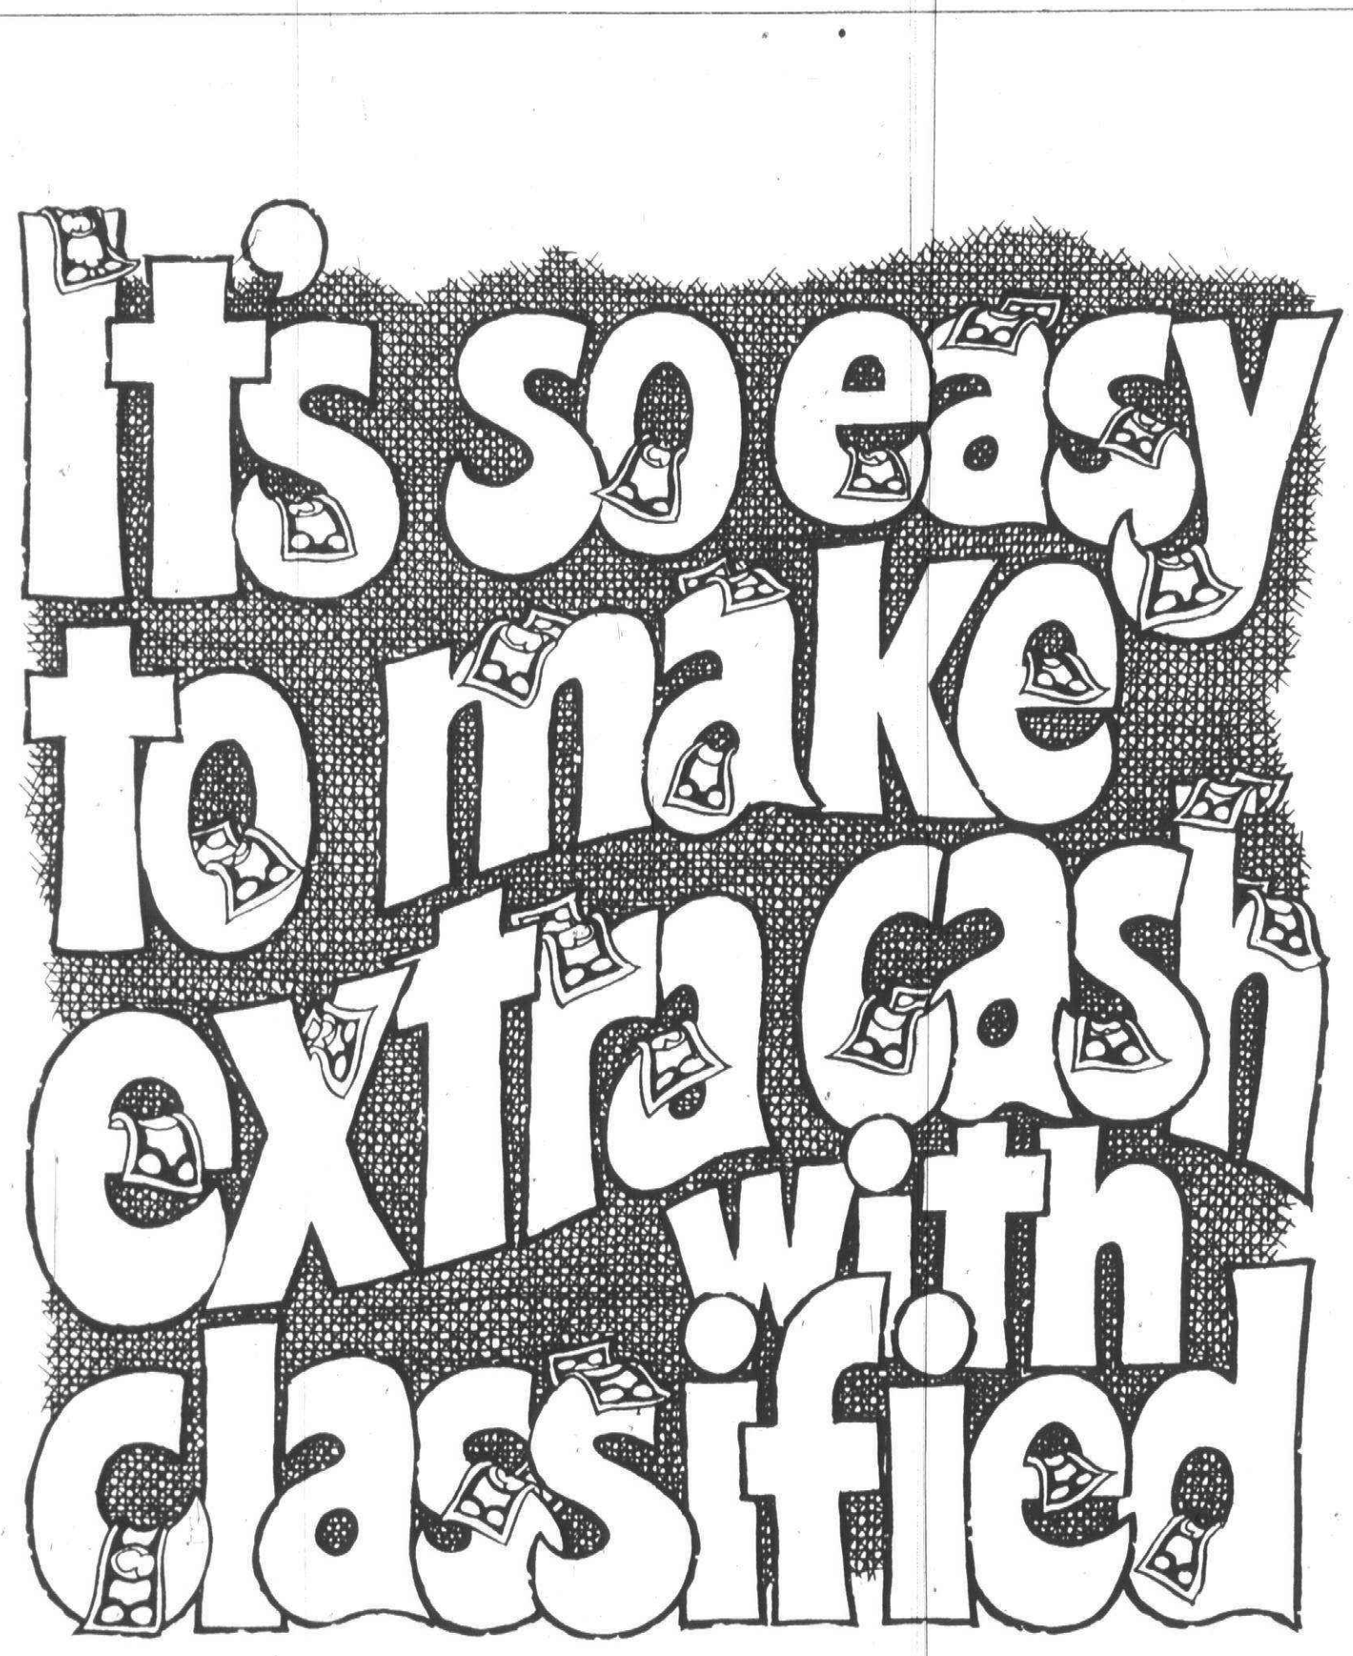

Loiselle says the NBDA suggests the following 12 basic "rules of the road" should be followed by bicyclists:

- Obey all applicable traffic regulations, signals, signs, and markings.
- Keep right; drive with traffic, not against it. Drive single file.
- Watch out for car doors opening or for cars pulling into traffic.
- Never hitch a ride to a truck or other motor vehicle.
- Use hand signals to indicate your intentions in stopping or turning.
- Drive a safe bike — have it inspected to insure good mechanical condition.
- Don't carry passengers unless the bike is intended to carry more than one. Bulky packages should not be allowed to interfere with control of the cyclist's vision.
- Observe all local ordinances pertaining to bicycles.
- Watch out for drains, grates, soft shoulders and other road hazards.
- Be careful at intersections, especially when making any kind of turn.
- Protect yourself at night with required reflectors, lights, and sounding devices. Wear light-colored clothes.
- Drive your bicycle defensively — watch out for the other guy.

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Now that warm weather has arrived, bicycles will be pulled out of garages and basements for use. But first, bicyclists should make sure bikes are in good operating condition and should brush up on rules of safety and courtesy.

Ballot may be loaded with referendum issues

With the 1982 general election seven months away, Michigan politicians and residents are circulating at least 10 petitions in hopes of placing constitutional amendments or new law proposals on the Nov. 2 ballot.

Seven petitions, all dealing with money issues, are proposed amendments to the state constitution. Petitions must be signed by 250,000 registered voters in order to be placed on the ballot.

Here is a synopsis of each proposal and the person to contact:

CITIZENS for Property Tax Relief and Quality Education, sponsored by Rep. Calude Trim, D-Davisburg, and Rep. Roy Smith, R-Saline. This proposal calls for exempting 100 percent of all school operating taxes on resident homesteads for persons 62 years of age and over and for exempting 75 percent of school operating taxes on homesteads. Limits would be $1,800 for houses and $2,500 for farms, indexed annually based on the growth of residential and agriculatural assessments.

It guarantees local control by local school boards, reimburses each school district 100 percent for any loss due to the exemptions, requires assessment of agriculture and forestry properties on use, holds business and industry harmless from any tax to replace the costs due the exemptions beyond the sales tax.

To replace lost local revenue, the sales tax would be increased one percent, and there is a possible 0.8 percent increase in the income tax unless the Legislature makes further cuts in state spending.

For petition information, contact Trim at 625-5516.

"CUT" — Citizens United for Tisch — is sponsoring the Tisch III tax cut.

It calls for rolling back property taxes to the 1980 level in 1983. Thereafter, property taxes would be cut 12 percent a year for three years.

Homeowners whose income is $8,000-$12,500 per year would have their tax bills further cut in half. Persons with incomes of $8,000 or less would not pay any property taxes. Senior citizens (62 years and older) with income less than $15,000 would pay no operating school tax and have their income limits adjusted for inflation in future years. Increases in property tax values on residential and agricultural property are limited to 3 per cent a year.

For petition information, call Gwenda Dempsey 683-2026 from 1-3 p.m.

PART-TIME Legislature, a second Tisch project, is lengthy.

It requires the Legislature to adjourn by the third Friday in May, ends legislative pensions, takes away pension rights of current legislators, caps legislators' pay increases, provides a $90 week stipend during non-session weeks to legislators who attend 80 percent of the sessions and takes away the Legislature's power to increase tax rates or to broaden a tax base. It requires tax increase changes to be approved by voters.

It also assigns administrative duties to the lieutenant governor, who currently is required only to preside over the senate.

Same contact as CUT.

WELFARE Limitation Cut is sponsored by Berrien County Commissioner Nancy Clark and state Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph.

This proposal seeks to hold payments for Aid to Families with Dependent Children (ADC) and general assistance in Michigan to the average payment for similar programs in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Clark says this proposal would save Michigan at least $200 million a year because records show that benefits in Michigan were 91 percent greater than in Indiana and 56 percent reater than in Ohio in 1980.

For petition information, call Nancy Clark at 616-983-1981.

CITIZENS for an Improved Ballot, sponsored by Lt. Gov. James Brickley, would amend the constitution to empower the governor to appoint Supreme Court Justices, Court of Appeals judges, members of the State Board of Education and the governing boards of the University of Michigan, Michigan State University and Wayne State University.

All appointments would have to be approved by the Senate. The governor would also appoint a nine-member Judicial Nominating Commission, of at least four lawyers, which would submit names to the governor for for appointment to Supreme Court and Appellate Court vacancies.

It calls for retention elections of Supreme Court justices every eight years and Appellate Court judges every six years. All education boards would be increased from eight to nine members to avoid tie votes, and their terms would be decreased from eight to six years.

For petition information, write Citizens for an Improved Ballot, Box 10115, Lansing, 48901.

THE DEATH penalty proposal, sponsored by Oakland County Procesutor L. Brooks Patterson, would amend the Michigan Constitution to permit the death penalty in murder convictions.

For petition information, call Patterson's office at 858-0650 or at Oakland Republican headquarters in Birmingham at 646-8414.

REORGANIZING the Detroit Water Board, sponsored by Oakland County Drain Commissioner George Kuhn, would amend state law to give suburban customer communities majority representation on the Detroit Water Board, whose seven members are now appointed by the mayor of Detroit.

It would set up a mechanism for suburban governments to make their own appointments.

Petitions are available at the County Drain Commission office in Pontiac, 858-0958, and at most local city and township halls.

A FIVE-YEAR mandatory prison sentence for persons who commit felonies against senior citizens (persons age 60 or older) would go into effect under a proposed state law.

No parole or probation would be permitted. The five-year mandatory sentence would be in addition to any other sentence imposed by the court. "Mandatory sentencing is a proven deterrent against crime," according to the sponsor, state Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods.

Petition forms are available from Sen. Hertel, State Capitol, Lansing 48909, or from the honorary co-chairpersons, Marilyn Turner and Mickey Lolich, c/oWXYZ-TV, Box 789 Southfield 48037.

CAP — Citizens Against Pornography — is seeking voter enactment of a bill to define and prohibit obscenity, providing for prison sentences of up to four years and fines of up to $10,000.

Petiton forms are available from Citizens Against Pornography, Box 20012 Ferndale 48220, or from state Rep. Jelt Sietsema, State Capitol, Lansing 48909.

MICHIGAN NUCLEAR Weapons Freeze Campaign is an advisory referendum which would call on the federal government to propose to the Soviet Union the stopping of production of nuclear arms.

For petition information, call the Detroit campaign office at 577-5053.

Publicist joins county exec race

Harry A. Stearnes, a Wayne County publicist, has joined the race for county executive as a Republican.

Stearnes, 58, of Plymouth, is assistant public information officer for the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

He is the first person to announce for the Republican nomination. A half-dozen Democrats are actively seeking the majority party's nomination, though only Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara has announced formally.

Voters will nominate candidates in Aug. 3 partisan primaries and elect the state's first county executive under a home-rule charter on Nov. 2.

STEARNES PLEDGED to bring the county's auditing procedures in line with the state's, if elected. He wants to expand the county road patrol into areas willing to finance its operation.

"Possibly a few townships will be willing to support their local sheriff as opposed to their present policies of sharing costs with neighborhood communities," he said.

Stearnes began his writing career at 15, working for the Wayne County Review. He attended the University of Michigan, fought in the Pacific during World War II as a paratrooper and studied journalism after returning to Eastern Michigan University. He has been an editor, publisher and photographer. He is also a pilot and contributes a week each year as a safety scuba diver for the Detroit hydroplane races.

HIRING practices will get a lot of his attention, he said, promising to clean up hiring practices in general county government and the semi-autonomous road commission.

"Firm employment 'specs' will be adhered to. There will be no more vacilation in hiring tests. If a prospective employee fails to qualify within the guidelines required of a particular position, then he or she will not be hired. There should be a reassessment of present position specs," he said.

Stearnes wants the Wayne County General Hospital Board of Institutions to have an autonomous operation of the hospital.

"The Board of Institutions must currently have its administrative programs approved by the board of county commissioners and a myriad of committees before it can take action; often it's too late to achieve its goals. Autonomy will add efficiency and responsibility," Stearnes said.

HE ATTACKED the Wayne County Road Commission, saying the three-member group's tendency toward "good-ole-boyism" must be constrained.

"Too often employees have been hired with temporary work permits 'fresh off the boat' without consideration for those unemployed Americans who have lived and paid taxes within the county all their lives," he said.

He added he would not dismiss county employees haphazardly without regard for their labor contracts, civil service standing and dedication. Aside from an unwarranted dismissal being unfair, Stearnes said, it could lead to years of costly court mediation.

Forms available for 4th parade

Applications now are being accepted from groups and individuals who wish to enter the Fourth of July Parade in Plymouth.

The parade is being sponsored by the Plymouth Jaycees which also will be hosting the 10,000 meter run, the fireworks display and a children's bike contest.

The theme for the 1982 Fourth of July Parade will be "America, Michigan and Plymouth Work Together."

Entry forms are available from Plymouth City Hall, Plymouth Township Hall, the Dunning-Hough Memorial Library, the First National Bank of Plymouth, and Sir Speedy Printers on Joy Road in Canton.

Entry forms also are available by writing Nick Smith, 7278 Haggerty, Canton 48187.

The cost of the parade and fireworks this year for the Plymouth Jaycees is $5,200.

The Jaycees are encouraging band sponsorships this year to help underwrite part of the $5,200 expense.

Any individual or business wishing to make a contribution may send a donation to the Jaycees in care of Fred Eagle, 14728 Ronnie, Livonia 48154.

This year's parade will start at 1 p.m. on July 4.

Witten family thanks donors

To the editor:

We would like to thank the people, churches, organizations and everyone else who donated money to the "Linda Witten Walt Disney World Trust Fund."

Linda had a great time on the trip. We spent three days at Disney World and a day at Sea World. Linda also got to see the Atlantic Ocean, Gulf Coast and oranges growing on orange trees.

This also was Linda's first jet plane trip which she thought was just wonderful.

Again, thanks to everyone who helped make Linda's Disney wish come true. It was deeply appreciated.

A special thanks to Dan Isakson who started Linda's fund and also to Michigan Saving Bank where the fund was located.

Unions help our lifestyle

To the editor:

Regarding Steve Barnaby's column, Cracker Barrel Debate, in the April 5, issue — I strongly suggest Barnaby look around and see how many of his neighbors are out of work, spending life savings to survive, losing homes and possibly going hungry because of his type of mentality.

If he looks around he will notice the American sewing machine, motorcycle and television industries have all but disappeared, and a large percentage of the clothing, shoe, and consumer electronic industries (to mention a few) are disappearing also. Yet Barnaby says spend your money wisely and buy a foreign car.

Everything is relative, Barnaby. If you earn a decent wage in Detroit it is probably because the United Auto Workers (UAW) indirectly drove it up. If you are going to buy Japanese cars, why don't you work for Japanese wages?

I was a union member 25 years ago, but haven't been one since and haven't had the desire to be one again. But I have never lost sight of what unions, in general, and the UAW, in particular, have done for the standard of living of Americans.

I, too, would like to use a loftier word for Barnaby, but "dumb" will have to suffice.

Resident mad about CEP play

To the editor:

I am writing to register a complaint and a strong protest for the profanity used in your presentation "Mame," the high-school play April 1-3 at the Plymouth Salem auditorium. I was in attendance with my wife and two children last Saturday evening and was embarrased and incensed at the dialogue coming from the lips of the students.

To create an environment that calls upon high-school students to utter such vulgerisms is, in my judgement, in very poor taste and ethically wrong.

Grandmother defends principal

To the editor:

I read in the Observer where some parents are trying to get a school principal, Carrol Nichols from Tanger Elementary School, fired for slapping a grade-school student, Swane, for mouthing off.

To keep order in schools some measure of discipline has to be followed if a student gets out of hand.

Parents and taxpayers, who don't want their money wasted and who want their children to get a good education and put a stop to constant disruption by rowdy students in the future, should wake up before it's too late.

They should speak up in defense of a principal who has the well-being and interest of the majority of the students in mind, and who is trying to do his job under difficult circumstances. He should get their support not condemnation.

I'm a native Detroiter, born and raised in the city of Detroit, in my 60s. I have seen what happened to schools in Detroit over a period of years.

Detroit schools are a good example of what could happen in Plymouth-Canton schools — where teachers are not only threatened, but also beaten and sent to a hospital, students are molested and raped in rest rooms, most of the school doors locked, and corridors patrolled by guards.

Is this the kind of an atmosphere most parents want for their children?

I think not. These parents who believe that their children can't do any wrong will regret their opinions when they, themselves, are old and in poor health and find, because they did not teach their children to respect a teacher or a principal, the children in return will not respect their parents when they grow up.

That teacher or principal, in a way, takes the place of a parent when the child is in school. There is too much permissiveness by parents. That is why our children are going wrong.

Discipline is practiced in any field of employment and in life in general. The sooner children are taught that good manners and a smile will get them further in life than showing off and a bad temper, the better they will be.

When my sons were young, every school year when a semester started I went with them on the first day of school. I told their homeroom teachers or school principal that they had my permission to put them over a desk or a chair and take their belts off and blister their behinds if they misbehaved during a class.

I also informed my sons that the same was awaiting them at home if they complained.

I was never called to school. They were good students, and no school personnel took advantage of my permission to abuse my sons. They were never harmed or crippled in school. They grew up into wonderful young men whom any parent could be proud of.

I have grandsons attending Plymouth-Canton schools. I worry what the future holds for them if delinquency is allowed to run rampant.

Student aid cut means tax loss

To the editor:

Tim Richard's column of April 1, "If Reagan Slashes Aid to Students," is laboring under false impressions.

Social Security benefits for students age 19 to 22 have been cut 33 percent. Student checks for the months of May, June, July, and August 1982 will not be sent, and effective Sept. 1 the benefits will be cut 50 percent. This has been accomplished. The problem is now.

It's doubtful that the state of Michigan will increase taxes for this reason when it is having difficulty in balancing the budget.

Student loan programs also have been cut, and applications for loans are not being accepted.

Reduction in student aid will have far-reaching effects. Reduced education means reduced earnings potential which means reduced ability to pay taxes.

Shakespeare needed a good copy editor

In Shakespeare's day, many people couldn't read or write — including some printers. These printers looked at each letter in the handwritten manuscripts and selected type that seemed to match it. Since they had no idea what the words meant, mistakes were often made. Things got so bad that Shakespeare finally published his own authorized versions of his works.

Braking story

By 1927 four-wheel brakes were standard equipment on cars. Other common features by that time were air cleaners, gas filters, oil filters, automatic windshield wipers and rear-view mirrors.

It's time for dogs' heartworm tests and steelhead fishing

Our tough little puppy didn't flinch as the veterinarian's lab assistant twice poked a needle into her front leg to draw a blood sample.

The test result came in a few minutes: negative on heartworm.

"Do you have any pills left from last year?" the lab lady asked. We did, so our tough little puppy will be a healthy tough little puppy this year.

Heartworm continues to be a problem in this state, the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association reports. Dogs are infected when bitten by mosquitoes carrying immature stages of the parasite. As the parasite lives off the dog's heart, the dog loses stamina, coughs and suffers shortness of breath.

It takes six months before a heartworm infection can be detected in a blood test. Our pup is more than eight months old and spent a lot of time outdoors last August and September, so a heartworm check was in order.

A healthy dog should start taking a daily pill May 1, we were advised. But don't begin giving last year's leftover pills until your dog has had this year's test.

And because our tough little puppy is heavier than her "big brother," we have to give her a different dosage than the old-timer.

It's a small price to pay for keeping her healthy.

THE WIND is one of our cheapest and most fun ways to travel, as you'll find out at 8:30 p.m. Friday at the American Youth Hostels' fund-raiser in Ford Auditorium, Detroit.

John Biddle will show two films, the first on a 1,000-mile catamaran race, the second of a hot-air balloon ride over France's wine and cheateau country. Warren Miller's film, "Have Windsurfer, Will Travel," will round out the show.

AYH will use proceeds to develop hostels (inexpensive places to stay overnight) in Michigan and promote outdoor recreation. Tickets at $4.50 for person under 18 and $5.25 for others are available at the AYH office at 3024 Coolidge, Berkley, as well as at sailing shops, Hudson's, Ford Auditorium and CTC ticket outlets.

HURON-CLINTON Metroparks have a heavy schedule of nature and farm programs the week of April 17-21. All are free, but call the individual park office for advance registration. In each case, there is a vehicle entry fee of $2, or you can buy a season pass to all metroparks for $7.

- "Sounds of a Spring Evening," 7 p.m. Saturday, Oakwoods Metropark near Flat Rock in southern Wayne County. Naturalists will help visitors identify sounds of amphibians, woodcocks and owls. 697-9181.
- "Three Decades of Nature Programs," 10:30 a.m. Sunday, nature center of Kensington Metropark near New Hudson. A slide program will review work of former naturalists and kick off the nature center's 30th anniversary celebration. 685-1561.
- Bird Eggs of Farm and Forest," 2 p.m. Sunday at the Kensington Farm Center at the north end of the park near Milford. Naturalists will explore the nesting process of wild and domestic birds, examing nesting, egg-laying, incubation and hatching. Baby chicks may be hatching. 685-9105.

SEMTA fare hike goes to hearings

A package of fare hikes will be the subject of public hearings in Oakland County by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

Fares would be increased 15 cents for large buses, park & ride express buses and commuter rail, and more for small-bus routes.

The increases would take effect July 1.

Hearings will be held:

- At 1 p.m. Tuesday in the Southfield Parks and Recreation Building, Room 223-224, 26000 Evergreeen.
- At 7:30 p.m. April 26 in the Kimball High School auditorium, 1500 Lexington, Royal Oak.

A downtown Detroit hearing will start at noon April 26 in 614 Veterans Memorial Building, 151 W. Jefferson.

SEMTA FACES a $41 million revenue "shortfall," according to General Manager Gary Krause, because of state and federal funding cuts.

"Although fare increases will certain help," he added, "they are not a solution.

"To avoid having to cut service by two-thirds, we must have a guaranteed source of revenue. We will soon be approaching the Michigan Legislature for permission to place either an income or property tax question on the ballot in the tri-county area. This appears to be the only possible solution for saving public transit in this region," said Krause.

UNDER THE rate proposal, large bus fares would rise 15 cents to 90 cents. Park & ride and limited fares would rise 15 cents to $1.10. Commuter rail would go up 15 cents to $1.30.

"SEMTA connector" small bus fares would rise 30 cents to $1.80. Local connectors, such as those in Birmingham, Ferndale and Waterford, would go up 35 cents to $1.30.

SEMTA's half-fare policy for senior citizens and the handicapped would be unchanged, though they would be increased as base fares are increased.

Other fare proposals call for reducing the youth fare discount from 25 cents to 20 cents off regular bus fare and from 50 cents to 40 cents off connector fares. Still another proposal is to charge 10 cents for transfers.

MEANWHILE, Gov. Milliken signed a bill to assure the 90-10 split of state transportation revenues between roads and public transportation.

A State Court of Appeals decision held that vehicle weight taxes earmarked for SEMTA, when combined with state transportation taxes, would give SEMTA more than 10 percent of the constitutionally established transportation fund.

The bill frees $8 million from an escrow account for SEMTA and guarantees the 90-10 split. In addition, the bill extends for nine months (to Dec. 31) SEMTA's current taxing power.

County Youth Home gets increase in staff

Wayne County commissioners have approved an increase in Youth Home staffing as the home threatens to be overwhelmed by new inmates.

The board acted in the wake of juvenile arrests in drug-related crimes in Detroit's Jeffries housing project.

"The Youth Home is already bulging with juvenile offenders," said James Lee, director of the facility.

"The fact that the state has been lax in accepting 91 of their own wards has compounded the situation."

COMMISSIONERS, in last week's Ways and Means session, agreed to fill eight vacant positions and hire three additional juvenile group leaders to replace those who are on worker's compensation.

The action will cost the county an additional $275,000.

According to the county's fiscal adviser, Edward E. Bobowski, the Wayne County Juvenile Court, which runs the Youth Home, has left the positions vacant to meet their mandatory savings limit required to balance the 1981-82 budget.

"The facility," he said, "has been maintaining its supervision of juveniles through the use of overtime. I can see little advantage or savings in continuing that procedure. It will cost us just about the same whether we hire more people or pay those already on the staff for working extra hours."

THE HOME, operated around the clock, houses 191 boys and 27 girls. Of them, 91 are state charges.

Commissioners Mary E. Dumas of Livonia and R. William Joyner of Plymouth, in a joint motion, have requested a meeting with the State Department of Social Services and the courts to determine whether present staffing and licensing procedures are antiquated.

Speakers highlight positive messages

Toss out those gloomy thoughts and settle down for some positive vibes from the tube.

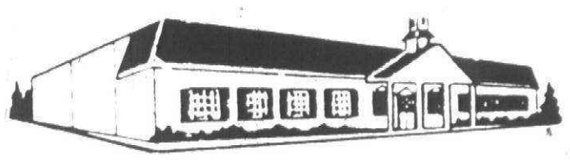

More than 30 members of Toastmasters International, a non-profit group of budding speakers, recently prepared 60-second spots to be aired over the local cable channel 13.

Each message is a "positive thought for the day."

Members of two Toastmasters clubs in the Plymouth-Canton area, as well as other clubs in southeastern Michigan and northern Ohio, took part in the project.

Toastmasters is an organization whose members are working to improve their communications skills. For more information about Toastmasters, contact Marc Sullivan at 455-1635, or Mike Gresock at 455-8148.

Officials should organize meeting priorities

Dennis O'Connor

NOTHING is more frustrating than listening to a local government board try to make decisions which should take 15 or 20 minutes in two or three hours.

In the case of Canton Township Board meetings, the time problem simply is a lack of proper organization.

It seems that items which no one knows about often are placed on the agenda. And if a decision must be made, the board usually lacks enough information to make that decision.

TAKE LAST TUESDAY night's meeting, for example. A meeting that should have taken 15 minutes to complete ended more than two hours past its 7 p.m. starting time.

The meeting began when a manager from Meijer Thrifty Acres came before the board with a request to open an arcade of 33 video machines at the massive shopping center.

You had to feel sorry for the Meijer official. He would have done anything to find out if the board approved or objected to the proposed arcade, simply to let his supervisor know whether to proceed with the project.

THE BOARD COULD NOT give this gentleman a straight answer, however, because it didn't have Meijer's arcade application and other important information available to make a proper decision.

Why would anyone put Meijer on the agenda, have this official come to the meeting, yet not have the proper information to make a decision?

It was embarrassing.

So, to avoid further embarrassment, the board voted in favor of the arcade, contingent on safety regulations. Yes, the board approved an arcade without seeing an application for it.

Then there was Peter Newell, president of Omnicom of Michigan. Now, Newell isn't one of my favorite business people.

Still, I even felt sorry for Newell as he sat for more than one hour waiting to answer questions from Canton's Omnicom Advisory Committee. Unfortunately, someone put this item on the agenda, but the committee never came to the meeting. I wonder whether the committee even knew it was part of the meeting. Newell's time was wasted.

THE TOWNSHIP BOARD should not meet three times a month anymore.

Back in the early and middle 1970s, there was a need for more and longer meetings because of the community's rapid growth.

A meeting two months ago lasted 37 minutes. Why have that meeting at all?

And when a meeting is planned, it should be properly organized so no one's time is wasted.

Many persons laughed at Supervisor James Poole when he asked for a public hearing on snow removal and tax problems. Many believed these meetings were politically unwise. Poole caught a lot of heat from angry residents at each meeting.

But at least residents were given a chance to ask questions and learn about the issues facing the township. Problems were not solved, but persons left with a better understanding of the issues.

Township officials should consider only two meetings per month and regular public hearings on important issues.

Such a format would generate interest, help prioritize and organize agenda items, save some embarrassment, and, most importantly, save everyone's time.

Amusements tax is not a wise move

The Michigan Legislature will be making a big, fat mistake if it approves a 4-percent amusements tax next week, just as it made a big, fat mistake in raising the cigarette tax 10 cents a pack last week.

Granted, the state treasury has a cash-flow problem. Granted, we don't want to dismantle our colleges and universities. Granted, the 84 percent of us who are still working are pretty well off. Granted, some kind of new state money must be raised.

Yet it seems like unpolitical foolishness for a political body in need of money during a depression period to pepper us with one tax increase after another.

CONSIDER:

- Local property taxes continue to rise despite the weak real estate market. There are logical reasons for it, but most folks look only at the bottom line, their tax bills.
- The cigarette-tax increase already approved will mean Michigan has one of the highest taxes on "coffin nails" in the nation. The Legislature's own calculations show that a quarter of the potential revenue will be lost due to interstate smuggling. And it's patently unfair to stick cigarette smokers with combined federal and state taxes equal to nearly half the price of the product.
- The income tax will have to be raised about 1 percent, at least temporarily, to see the state through hard times. Most of us accept that responsibility.
- The deterioration of our freeways, highways, roads and streets must be addressed. Gov. William Milliken had the courage and wisdom to suggest road funds be raised through the income tax — in short, do the entire job in one fell swoop. Legislative leaders said no. Now the Legislature faces the prospect of having to raise gasoline and weight taxes later in the year.

AND SO, WITH four different kinds of taxes already due to rise, why pepper the people to death with talk of a fifth tax hike, on amusements?

The dollar amount of these tax hikes — at least the four state tax hikes — won't be terrible, considering that Michiganians are due to get a $2-billion tax cut from the federal government this year. But the psychological impact of seeing four different state taxes go up in a single year is too much.

On top of it all, the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) announced many, many months ago it would have to ask legislative authorization to go to the ballot in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties in November 1982 to seek new money.

Because of declines in federal and state subsidies, SEMTA faces a two-thirds cutback without new local revenue. With so many other taxes rising, SEMTA's chances seem dim. By 1983 public transportation in the suburbs is likely to be back where it was in 1963 — practically belly-up.

THE AMUSEMENTS tax has little to recommend it, on its merits.

There is no machinery in place to administer it, either at the state level or in business. Video-game parlors will need to have their equipment changed or else plan to absorb the entire tax.

If levied, the amusements tax would be too late to capture anything from season ticket buyers to Tigers and perhaps football games. Movie ticket lines will slow down as change-making is complicated by the fact that a $3.50 ticket will go up to $3.69. Or else theaters will round off the price — upwards.

Local government already has its hand in the cable TV companies' pockets. The state shouldn't dip in, too.

As tough a decision as it is to raise taxes, the Legislature would be better off taking one big bite of the bullet by raising the income tax rather than picking, picking, picking on one subgroup after another.

Everyone's complaint

Steve Barnaby

Every season, a trend is born. A few years back it was meditation. After that, the Lamaze birth method was the rage.

The pop psychology craze of 1982 is "burnout."

It wins hands down over all other popular maladies of modern American life. Forget cellulite, allergies or the abuse of video games.

Those of you still "into" those things just aren't with it.

The mail pieces on my desk and in my wastebasket all tout seminars and workshops on "burnout," a subject that far outranks any other current social condition.

Notice conversations in which you are involved.

Talk of breaking the smoking habit or running "for a better you" draw only yawns and blank stares.

But what really turns on a conversation over cocktails or a beer is burnout.

And, unlike other trends, burnout has a companion — coping with stress.

MANY OF THOSE attempting to move in the fast lane have been slowed by their failure to see impending burnout — whether it be on the job or in the home — caused by a lack of mental dexterity in "coping with stress."

Now all this may sound a little ridiculous. And it probably is just that.

But many folks have fallen for the ploy, keeping psychologists, social workers and management consultants in the money.

Even unions have taken to using the phrase in reference to the workers' plight.

Frankly, I think it's all a bunch of baloney, which, on its face, may be humorous, but which also has its more somber side.

BURNOUT has become an alibi for laziness and an excuse doing a lousy job. A conversation overheard in a restaurant a while back is instructive:

One teacher to another:

"I just can't see how I'm going to be able to stand this much longer. The students are running wild, the parents don't care and we certainly don't get any support from the administration," said the first.

Replied the second:

"I know what you mean. If we're not careful the same thing is going to happen to us that happened to Bob. We're just going to burn out."

"Get burned out? I've felt that way for years," protested the first.

Now, I remember the days when teachers, cops and other assorted public servants were working for too few bucks and under rotten working conditions.

Those folks had a real beef. They fought for equity and, for the most part, won it.

But burnout?

I very seriously doubt it.

Maybe many of us have become disillusioned because the good old American dream isn't what it was cracked up to be.

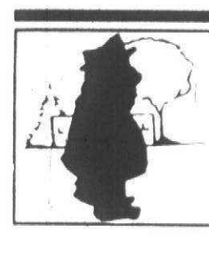

BUT BURNOUT implies resignation, a lack of willingness to fight on.

I pray to the Almighty that burnout is just another pop trend, destined for obscurity in another year.

Otherwise this country could be in bigger trouble than we realize.

Today, more than ever, we must summon up the resolve to recover economically and once again compete in the world marketplace.

Otherwise, the burnout wish will be come a reality.

The writer puts scenery on the stage

Across the desk the other morning came a copy of an editorial in Editor & Publisher, the newspaperman's bible.

In it the editor expressed a cynical opinion that modern-day journalists are developing their own expressions that lead only to many superfluouos words and clutter up a news story.

He paid particular attention to the use of expressions suh as "Mr. Jones said with a huge smile." He argued that the phrase "with a huge smile" was not needed and added not a thing to the story. He emphasized it would be better had the writer written "Mr. Jones said," and let it go at that.

As he read the editorial, the Stroller had to smile because it appeared that the Editor & Publisher editor had read one of the Stroller columns or features in which he consistently uses the expression that the interviewee answered with a broad smile or a frown.

THIS ISN'T a new fad among up-and-coming journalists. It was part of the education the Stroller received more than a half-century ago from one of the wisest old editors he ever has known.

One afternoon when the Stroller was just cutting his eye teeth in the newspaper field, the old editor, Charlie Weiser, talked to him about writing styles. And he had a novel way of putting his point across.

"Would you enjoy a play in the legitimate theater if there were no scenery on stage?" he asked.

When the Stroller answered "no," the old editor, with a glint in his eyes, said, "Well, it is the same with a feature story. You have to set the stage for the reader. You can do that by writing 'Bill Jones leaned forward on his desk, pounded his fist on the top and said — .'"

He then pointed out that the reader now had a scene before one word was spoken. He also stressed a simple "Mr. Jones said" would be as interesting as saying a black cow has white spots, its tail wags and it gives milk. The writer must set the scene.

The old editor was a stickler for action in stories. He wanted our paper to be a live recording of the day's events and its features.

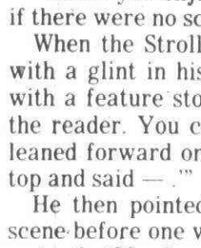

THE OTHER important lesson he gave the Stroller was in these terse terms:

"Nobody gives a damn about your opinion. You just write the opinions of others. You are not to make the news. You are just to record it."

Through the years, The Stroller has tried to fulfill the edicts of the old gent — the last of the brown derby era — and he hasn't found it difficult. In fact, it has helped him over many a tough spot in his reportorial duties.

So no matter what an Editor & Publisher bigwig has to say, the Stroller will stick with the lessons he learned from the old editor back home.

Like the old-time religion, it was good enough for him, and it's good enough for me.

Did you know that the University of Michigan campus in Ann Arbor features a unique underground law library some 77,000 square feet in size? There are actually three levels below grade, yet it is so designed that a 150- by 26-foot sloping skylight provides natural lighting to all three underground levels. The finished area houses 180,000 volumes.

Creativity

Writing courses again vogue on campus

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Creative writing — short stories, poetry and drama — is alive and well in an age of computers and technology.

"When I came here in 1967," said Arthur Lindenberg, Schoolcraft College English instructor, "there was one Creative Writing course. Now there are two (English 205 and 206), and next fall we are adding a third — English 70, Imaginative Writing for non-transfer students.

"These are mostly students in business, vocational and technical areas who have an interest in creative writing, but they might be frightened off 205 and 206, or they might lack the grammatical skills.

"Imaginative writing is not only a means of giving pleasure, but using imagination can lead to new techniques in problem solving," said Lindenberg, who developed the course during a one-semester sabbatical leave in 1980.

"I'VE GOT to support him," agreed Larry Ordowski, assistant dean of arts and sciences.

"Art thinks there is a group of potential (English 70) students out there who are not necessarily interested in transfer programs (going on to a four-year college). He has developed the course. He has a mailing list of 250.

"And Art is a drawing card in himself, with his style and his concern for the student. He puts in a tremendous number of hours one-on-one. He picks students up where they are and takes them as far as they can go," Ordowski added.

"He is constantly looking at what has been done and how it can be done more effectively."

HIS NEW English 70 course will begin with the keeping of a personal journal, then go on to what he calls a "polarity exercise."

"In a polarity exercise, you take some routine activity you do every day, say, making breakfast. But you write about it from the points of view of a) someone who hates you and b) someone who loves you.

"You develop self-perceptions. Some students develop these exercises into poems or short stories.

"Another exercise is called 'creative lying.' You take something that has happened and describe it differently — for example, a marriage proposal that is rejected rather than accepted."

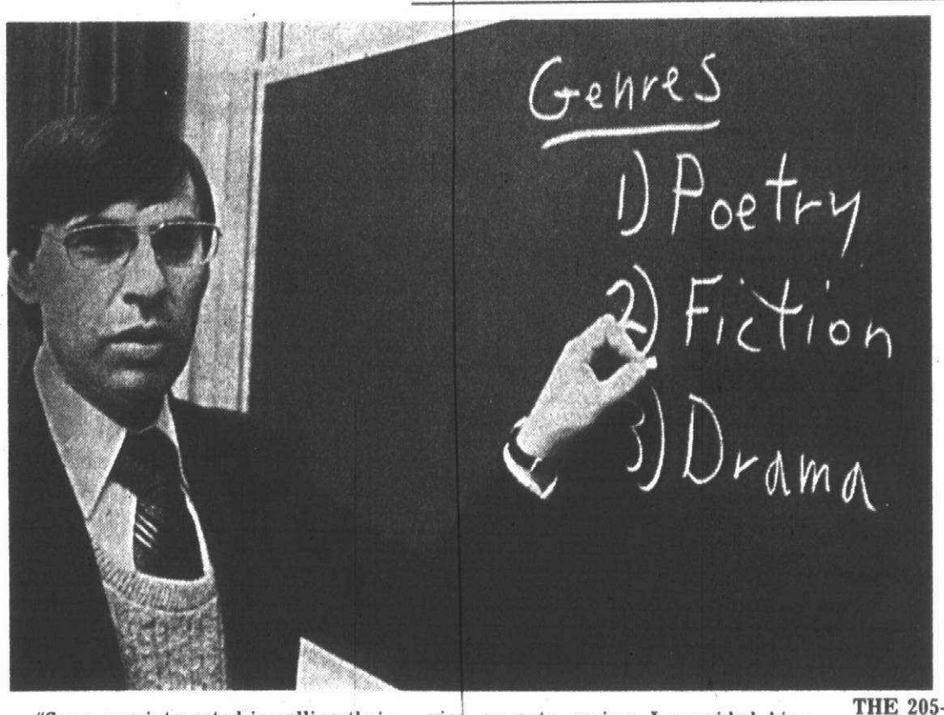

IMAGINATION, he explained, is an intellectual quality of use to more than poets and fiction writers.

"Imagination is any kind of thinking not based on logical cause and effect. You use unconscious insights, approaching a situation by other than logical methods. All great scientific discoveries occur by stepping outside the problem and using speculation."

English 70 will be offered for three hours credit on Mondays and Wednesdays next fall. Lindenberg's belief that there's a market is based on conversations with non-transfer students who felt intimidated by English 205-206.

LINDENBERG'S current English 205 and 206 creative writing students include traditional students fresh from high school, but also a couple of physicians, an elementary teacher on leave, housewives and retirees.

"They come to creative writing for a number of reasons," he said. "They are individuals who write but who feel isolated. Their friends don't understand what they're doing. They want to meet similar types of persons.

'Imaginative writing is not only a means of giving pleasure, but using imagination can lead to new techniques in problem solving.'
— Art Lindenberg

"Some are interested in selling their work. A doctor is working on a complex novel. They learn the commercial aspects to freelance writing — how to prepare a manuscript, how to approach editors.

"Some are successful in selling poetry, although that's a matter or persistence more than anything else.

"One student started a freelance service on auto racing. I provided him some leads to editors, and one magazine now has him on a retainer.

"A former sailor on a nuclear sub is writing a TV script.

"Some just want an elective that's different. I've had students come back here to take the course because they couldn't get into courses at Wayne State University."

THE 205-206 sequence opens with a series of exercises to develop rapport, "a sense of trust with other students," he said.

That sense of trust is important because after the fourth week, nearly every session is a writers workshop. In a typical session, three students pass out copies of their current projects — poems, short stories, novella — to others in the group.

Barbados: It's a land of sun, beach and luxury

contributing travel editor

PRESIDENT REAGAN didn't mention rum punch, so I assume that he didn't play aboard the Jolly Roger in Barbados. The Jolly Roger is one of two boats that ferry tourists daily up the warm west coast of the island, with a ho-ho-ho and a keg of rum.

Barbados, on the eastern edge of the whiplash of Caribbean atolls, is one of those islands that has its belly in the warm waters of the Caribbean and its back in the deeper, cooler waters of the Atlantic.

The capital city of Bridgetown was listed last August by London's World Business Weekly as the most expensive of all the 100 business centers surveyed worldwide, a fact that should be noted but not taken too seriously by the tourist.

The president's party may have spent 3.5 million on planes, ships and personnel to Barbados, but the tourist can still choose a reasonably priced vacation there on his own or through the Best of Barbados package.

Business travelers and tourists stay at the classy-and-comfortable Barbados Hilton, on 23 acres of flowers and sand at the southern point of Carlisle Bay, or at the luxurious Holiday Inn down the street. Both charge world-class prices, and look across the clutter of boats on the Bay to Bridgetown.

Travelers on a budget can stay on the same stretch of street at the locally popular Island Inn, with its good West Indian table, for much less.

BARBADOS WAS a British colony from 1625 to Independence Day 1966, so its British-West Indian culture attracts many travelers from the United Kingdom, usually for several weeks at a time.

Many rent apartments or stay in small hotels on the southern coast between Bridgetown and the Grantley Adams International Airport, with an open-sided car called a Mini-moke for leisurely short-run transportation.

Others pick the ritzier west side of the island, where dozens of small, luxurious hotels have a St. James address. The beautiful and expensive Sandy Lane Hotel is one of the best, its collonaded 18th century entranceway making a low line against the beach.

But smaller, still-luxurious hotels like the Coral Reef Club spread their spacious rooms across the same beach a short distance away, with a view across umbrella tables and beach chairs to the same glorious emerald sea. (Claudette Colbert's house, where the Reagans visited, is just north of here in St. Peter.)

You can see the Jolly Roger from St. James when it anchors off-shore mid-afternoon to serve steak dinner and to encourage its passengers to leap into the blue-green water.

You can identify the tour boat by the skull and crossbones on its mainsail, and by the clutter of boats collecting passengers for small side adventures like parasailing and water skooting.

Pirate ships look very much at home in Bridgeport, a quaint little town that looks like it might still be waiting for the sailing ships to come back, in spite of the air-conditioned modern buildings mixed with the Victorian gingerbread rooflines.

CRUISE SHIP passengers spend a day in the duty-free shops, at historical sites in town or photographing the inter-island fruit boats and the fishing boats along the Careenage.

The Careenage, a French word meaning "to tip a ship and clean its hull," is an inland waterway to the very heart of town.

To do the island justice, hire a driver like Randolph Brathwaite to drive you from Bridgetown through St. James to Speightstown and across Cherry Tree Hill to the Atlantic Coast, timed to stop for lunch at the old well-loved Atlantis Hotel, especially on Sunday when Enid Maxwell presides over a wonderful Bajan buffet.

You could retreat from civilization to a clean simple room here, but most Atlantic lovers turn the southeast corner of the island to the Crane Beach Hotel, with its restored suites on a cliff high above the sea, or Sam Lord's Castle a national trust monument on 72 acres, surrounded by smaller villas and run by Marriott Hotels.

Samual Hall Lord lured ships to Cobblers Reef and then plundered them, so you could be said to be following historic precedent when you finally board the Jolly Roger at its dock near Bridgetown.

THE JOLLY ROGER leaves daily at 9:30 a.m. island time, which means whenever the vans deliver passengers from island hotels.

Tourists swarm aboard like pirates, climbing the stairway to an open sun deck, finding shade under the canopy or clustering around the forward sail.

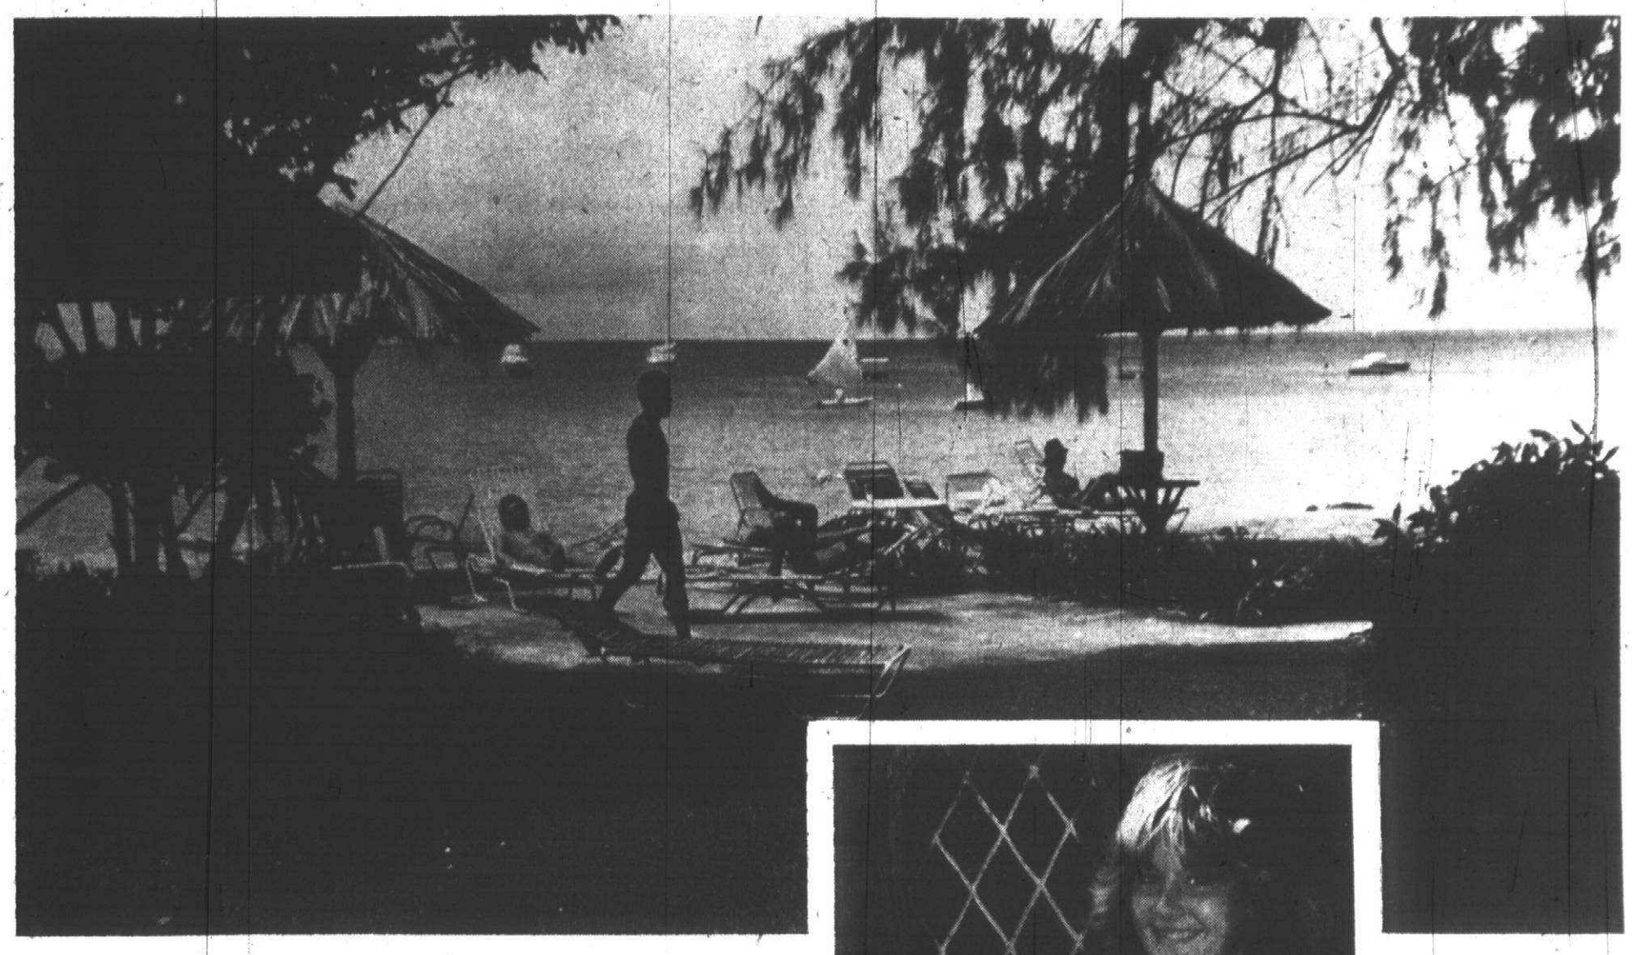

As we glide up the west coast, the gold coast, the captain makes his corny little announcement: Help yourself to the keg of rum punch, but beware, because we make it strong the way the pirates made it.

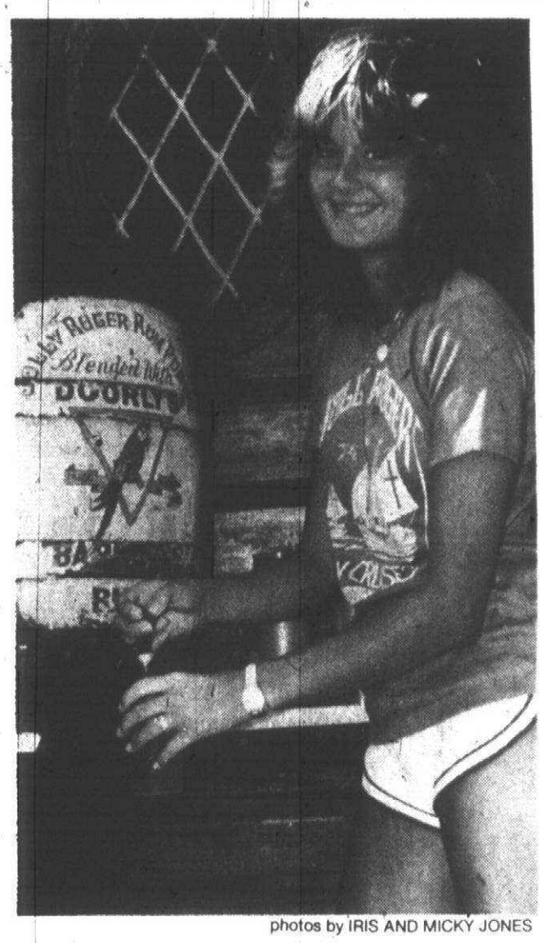

Of course nobody believes him, but everybody is singing and dancing by the time the young boys in their sunfish sailboats arrive alongside, and we can all dance island-style, doing a congo line up and down stairs, by the time we weigh anchor up-island.

I'd like to give President Reagan some advice, in case he decides to play a little on his next "working vacation" in Barbados.

Don't plan business appointments for the day you sail the Jolly Roger or its new counterpart, the Cap'n Patch. Your $25 U.S. tour ticket includes not only rum punch and food, but a ride back to your hotel, where you will vow not to eat or drink again for a month, or until the next meal, whichever comes first.

For information on rum punch tours and other fun things to do in Barbados, contact your travel agent or the Barbados Board of Tourism, 800 Second Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017.

...Getting the most for your money

When you travel to an island like Barbados, listed as the most expensive destination in the world for business travelers, you should know how to get the most for your money.

The Barbados Board of Tourism offers a spring-summer-fall package called Best of Barbados for four or seven nights, either European Plan (without meals) or American Plan (with breakfast and dinner). They are an excellent buy. All are quoted here in U.S. dollars.

Forty hotels and 37 apartments take part in the package. At the Barbados Hilton, a long walk or a five-minute taxi ride from Bridgetown, four nights cost $171 to $191 U.S. dollars; seven nights $291 to $326. European Plan (EP).

The Island Inn down the street ranges from $77 for four nights to $126 for seven nights, EP.

Up the west coast, in the St. James area, you can buy four nights on the Modified American Plan (MAP) for from $251 to $295; seven nights for $425 to $502.

Sam Lord's Castle, a fine hotel a long way from Bridgetown, costs $111 to $191 for four nights, and $186 to $326 for seven nights, EP. For MAP add $30 per person per day.

You might want to save your meal money for some of the interesting restaurants on the island. The Brown Sugar, behind the Island Inn, is very popular among tourists.

IF YOU ARE on the island on Sunday, don't miss a chance to follow the local people to Enid Maxwell's wonderful West Indian table at the Atlantis, on the Atlantic side of the island.

The Sunday buffet is $23 Barbados, but be careful when you see figures like that; the Barbados dollar is pegged to the American dollar, which means that $2 B is always $1 U.S. so that brunch cost you $11.50 U.S.

Diners crowd the verandah overlooking the Atlantic, where surf rocks old fishing boats on the beach and wraps its white foam around great coral outcroppings.

The small signs on the buffet tell you what you are eating: okra, pumpkin fritters, spinach cake, candied sweet potatoes, cassava, pepper pot soup, pickled breadfruit, flying fish, curried black-belly sheep, as well as plain meat and fish.

The dessert table will finish you off. The house specialty is rum cake, but don't waddle away without trying the coconut pie: fresh coconut, grated and lightly bonded together to fill a two-crust pie.

Try the Flamboyant, where Brian Cheeseman serves a fine table in an old house on the south coast in Hastings.

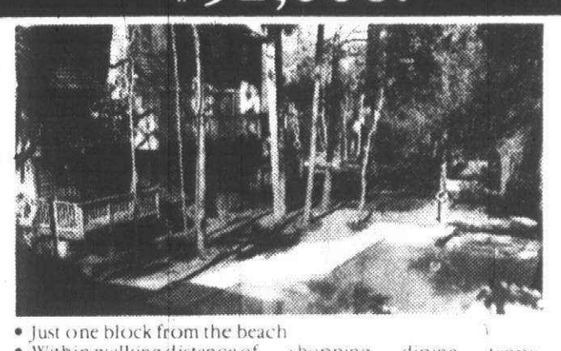

I asked people who live in Barbados to recommend other restaurants, and they said: Luciano's, for Italian food in an old Barbadian plantation house; Pisces for seafood in a romantic setting; the Caribbean Pepper Pot, where you can eat and listen to the Merry Men; the Island Inn, especially for the Monday-night floor show.

Finally, make a reservation to tour a new attraction on Barbados: Harrison's Cave, where a special tram takes you through newly discovered subterranean passages in the St. Thomas district.

MIKE HAGGERTY, director of sales at the Plymouth Hilton, receives some interesting mail. The latest was from a student in Ghana, West Africa.

The writer, Mr. Mahamadu Fusheini attends Abatey Middle School in Yendi, a city in north central Ghana. The letter was mailed March 3 and delivered April 9.

Young Mahamadu wrote:

"Dear Sir/Madam,

"I would be very glad if you could kindly offer me some Holy 'T' shirt and pens.

"Us we are here find difficult to get it so I need some help.

"I there fore decided to approach your good office for the 'T' shirt and pens & Calender." (The & Calender had been added in a different handwriting.)

"Your fatherly consideration and attention will be appreciated.

Yours faithfull"

He had signed his name then scratched it out.

MIKE decided to translate the "Holy" to hotel and was having a T-shirt, some pens, and a Plymouth Chamber of Commerce packet mailed to Abatey Middle School.

The name of the school had a familiar ring to Mike. When he checked back, he discovered another letter from a student at Abatey. It had been mailed last July by Moses A. Napour and had arrived in Plymouth in October.

Moses wrote: "I take great pleasure in writing for books, post cards, pens, pamphlets and other articles that reveal and give information."

Letters of this sort are not unusual, but Mike says the carefully lettered envelopes or postcards with their unfamiliar stamps always add interest to the morning mail. The majority of the correspondence comes from students in Poland. Their printing is almost picture-perfect. Some enclose postcards from a local hotel.

They usually ask for postcards and pamphlets. Just one inserted — mid-sentence — a request for $20. Some letters were addressed to England or Detroit or Northville, but they finally reached their destination.

ONE OF THE stamps on the Ghana letter sent me scurrying for an atlas. It is one-half by two inches in size and very colorful. It shows Pope John Paul II and the Archbishop of Canterbury with President Limann during the Papal visit 8-10th May, 1980.

The Republic of Ghana is the former British colony of Gold Coast. It became a republic in 1960. Ghana is about the size of Oregon and has a population of about 11 million. Its languages are English and the native tongues of Twi, Fanti, Ga, Ewe, and Dagbani.

If any middle school students are looking for pen pals in faraway places, Mike will give them some names and addresses.

MANY OF YOU remember Betty Masson who worked in this office. George and Betty Masson and their four children lived in Lake Pointe and the kids went to school here. Betty joined the Observer staff when we were in the old Plymouth Mail building on Main Street (now Growth Works).

George works for American Motors and the family spent five years in Puerto Rico when George was transferred. His territory was the English-speaking Caribbean area. They came back up here for a couple of years and now George's territory is Africa.

Margaret Miller and I had a farewell luncheon with Betty last week. They were leaving for Nairobi, Kenya, on Friday.

Betty spent six weeks in Nairobi earlier this year before making the decision to move. She said the weather there is just about perfect. The long-time British and East Indian residents maintain the life-style of clubs, golf and a close-knit society. Betty's hoping to become involved in some worthwhile projects and once they are settled, I'm sure she will.

'Monterey' debut: community catches first-night fever

By Elinor Graham
staff writer

"Monterey" will open May 5 in the Marquis Theater, Northville. And the house is sold out for the opening night performance of the new musical play presented by Plymouth Productions, Inc.

At this point, a story-teller of old would whet his audience's interest with "and thereby lies a tale."

In reality, the "Monterey" opening is one of the most exciting local happenings of the spring of '82.

Author of the book and lyrics is Edward Draugelis of Plymouth, attorney and former district court judge.

Music and score are by Andrew Henderson of Canton Township, composer, musician and former associate conductor of the Oakway Symphony.

Plymouth Productions, Inc. is composed of four people — Margaret Wilson, Russ Collins, Draugelis and Henderson. They are hard-working professionals, who become a mutual admiration society when they discuss "Monterey."

ED DRAUGELIS has been working on the play for two years.

"It was a musical play right from the start," says Draugelis, who commuted regularly between Plymouth and Monterey, Calif. when he was writing the script.

"It is about the failure of the sardine industry and survival of a community. The year is 1951 but it has a parallel in these times.'

Leads are Ted, 50-year-old captain of fishing trawler, and Meg, 24-year-old marine biologist.

"Ted's character is part of my father and part of me," said Draugelis.

He said he found that the creative process really is the work of the unconscious. He cited the characters Whitey and Pablo as an example.

"Whitey and Pablo like wine; they do not like work. They are bums, dropouts. But they insisted on being brought into play in stronger roles than I originally intended."

Draugelis wrote his first play while in high school. He studied drama in college and has written a short story, "The Passing of Uncle John." He believes the poems he wrote in his 20s were a helpful discipline in writing the lyrics for "Monterey."

His search for a composer was a frustrating experience. He contacted the University of Michigan and a New York source but all the recommended writers were busy. In desperation, he started to take piano lessons. As a last resort, he thought, he would write his own music.

The piano lessons brought about his meeting with Andrew Henderson and, he added, the perpetual gratitude of his piano teacher when he terminated his lessons.

THE MEETING of tbe two kindred spirits took place at Arnoldt Williams Music in Canton. Henderson works there and Draugelis went there for his piano lessons.

The composer was writing a musical which he put aside when he read the "Monterey" script.

"We were both struggling," said Draugelis.

It has been a happy collaboration. Henderson has written and scored the music. He is director and co-producer, with Draugelis. He will direct the 19-piece pit orchestra for the musical.

Another of Henderson's talents is set design. He designed the sets for the show — the dock, the restaurant, the beach — and his son, Laird, is building them. The sets will be moved by the actors, he said.

"It is the most exciting project of my life," said Henderson, who has been involved in theater almost all his life. A St. Louis native, he recalls going to the mini-opera with his parents when he was 5.

"I was fascinated bv the harp, and so I became a harpist. He played principal harp with the Oakway Symphony and has played with the Plymouth and Dearborn symphonies. He also plays cello, oboe and clarinet. He also has directed for the Livonia Redford Theater Guild.

DOUG KERR plays the male lead as Ted. Kerr is a member of the Ambassadors singing group.

"I had Doug in mind when I was writing the music," Henderson said. "It helps to know the singer's voice and write it in the right key first time round. Rewriting is a most colossal job and is all done by hand."

He said the music for one part had to be dropped four steps. It meant complete re-orchestration.

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Edward Draugelis wrote the book and lyrics, and Andrew Henderson wrote the music and score for the new musical, "Monterey."

Henderson also is enthusiastic over the female lead. "Julia Broxholm beat out four candidates from Michigan Opera Theater for the role of Meg."

Audience at the Canton Rotary Club had a preview of two of the show tunes when Henderson included them on the program.

"Monterey" has a cast of 24 — all from Plymouth, Canton, Northville, and surrounding communities.

Margaret Wilson said she was enjoying being a part of Plymouth Productions. She stressed the value of giving local professional actors a job.

Both the author and the composer have done their share of rewriting since the show went into rehearsal. Between rehearsals and working full time at their regular vocations, the team is writing another show.

Why?

"It is psychologically necessary," said Draugelis.

CURTAIN TIME will be 8 p.m. nightly and 3 p.m. for Sunday matinees. The show opens Wednesday, May 5 and runs through May 23.

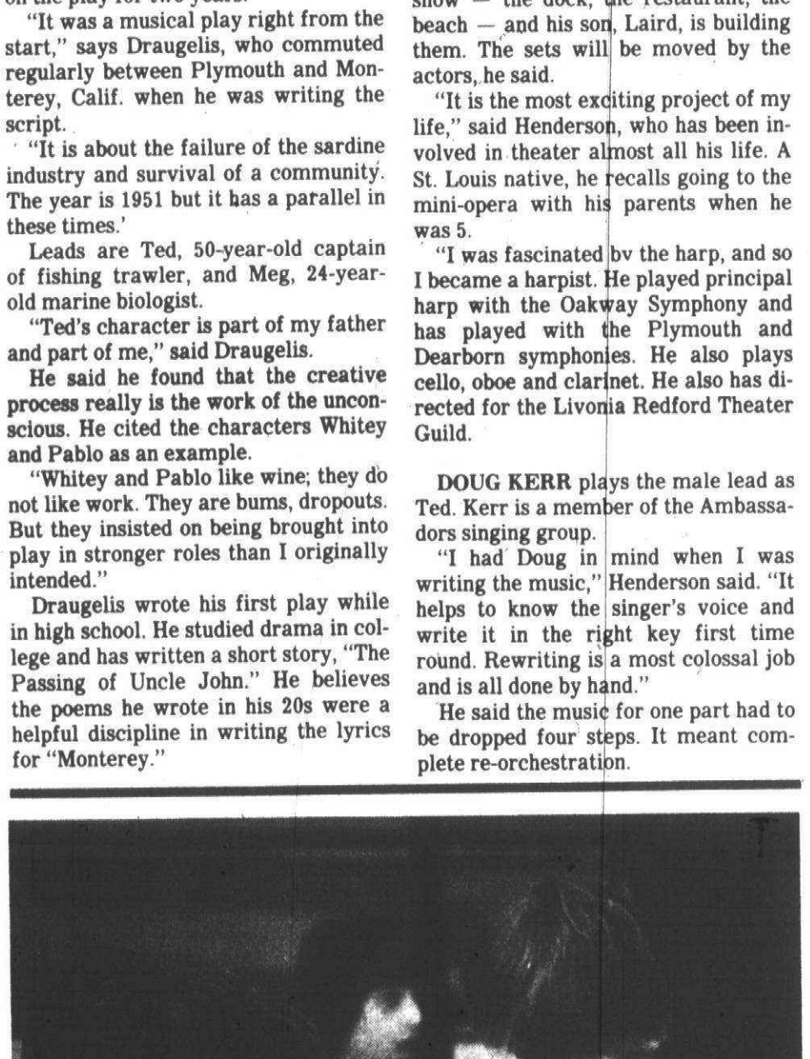

Preview performances are scheduled for April 28, 29 and 30 and May 1.

Admission will be $9.50 Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday, and $12.50 on Friday and Saturday.

Group rates are available and tickets may be ordered in advance by calling 453-3017, or at CTC outlets.

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a Plymouth Monterey debut at 8 p.m. Friday, April 30. "A Community Salutes Its Own" will be the theme and there will be special presentations.

An afterglow at Hillside Inn following the performance will give theatergoers an opportunity to meet the cast and friends.

Hours will be 5-8 p.m. in the Frame Works on Penniman Avenue when more than 100 pieces of framed artwork are offered for sale.

Friends of Plymouth Library plans open house for April 21

Friends of the Plymouth Library, a volunteer, nonprofit organization, is being established. Long-time friends of Dunning Hough Library on Main Street can make it official by becoming charter members of the new group and assisting in forming the organizational policy.

The library serves and is partially funded by Plymouth Township and the city of Plymouth. When Canton Township opened its own library, Dunning-Hough lost 40 percent of its financial support.

Librarian Pat Thomas is looking forward to the formation of "The Friends."

"Its major role will be community relations," said Thomas. She noted that since the library has been locally operated, there has been a change in attitude.

"People feel more a part of the library, that it is their own operation. They offer complaints, suggestions and commendations."

MARY CHILDS, former mayor of the city of Plymouth, is chairing the Friends of the Plymouth Library.

The committee is planning an open house at the library from 3:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 21. All residents of the community are invited to attend and consider becoming a charter member of the new volunteer group.

"As a patron, it is not necessary to devote a lot of personal time to be an active member," said Childs. She also said that one-year charter membership dues extend through Aug. 31, 1983.

"We do need and appreciate fully your contribution and support to our fine library."

As part of the open house and campaign for library patrons, a tree-planting ceremony will take place at 4 p.m. in front of the library. The tree will be planted in memory of Hazel Gibson, book lover and active member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Plymouth Fall Festival board. Mrs. Gibson died last fall. The tree will have a plaque and at its roots will be buried a bottle which will contain information about Mrs. Gibson. She was owner and founder of Plymouth Book World on Forest Avenue and Volume II on Penniman Avenue.

DUES FOR membership in Friends of the Plymouth Library are: student and senior citizen, $5; individual or family, $10; sustaining, $25; club or associate, $50; patron or corporation, $100; and life membership, $250.

Tentative goals of the organization are funding for additional books, materials and related services; and a core group of volunteers to implement special projects and programs.

"Our Plymouth library know no age limit for we welcome toddlers to enjoy picture books and puppets; students and adults to enjoy adventures in good reading, use reference materials, periodicals, visual aids, large-print books and many other resources," said Childs. "A wealth of knowledge awaits us all to research, to enjoy or further a special interest."

Area hospice service will hold open house

Hospice Support Services Inc., an organization that sends trained volunteers into homes of the terminally ill, will hold open house 2-4 p.m. April 25 in its new office in Westland's Whittier Center.

The event, part of Michigan Hospice Week as proclaimed by Gov. William Milliken for April 25 to May 1, is designed to acquaint people with the free service offered by the local organization.

Hospice is a concept of care for the ill which puts the emphasis on quality of life rather than prolonging it.

Hospice Support Services, founded about a year ago, functions as an all-volunteer interdisciplinary team of both professionals and non-professionals. Its members work with the terminally ill and their families so that the last weeks and months of life can be spent at home, among loved ones.

The home care service, free of charge, provides instructions to family members as well as services to the ill person.

In addition to inviting the public to the open house, Hospice Support Services is announcing a new training class which will begin Wednesday in the Whittier Center.

In eight weeks of three-hour sessions, volunteers will learn how to give the care needed for families in this area which request such assistance.

Some teams of trained volunteers already are working with area families, and another training program will be announced in the fall.

Besides those who go into the homes, volunteers are needed to keep records and staff the Whittier office, answer telephones, help raise funds for the program and provide sitters for the trained volunteers.

People who want to learn more about Hospice Support Services, either to volunteer or receive the assistance, can call the office at 522-4244 between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, or write to Hospice Support Services, Box 383, Garden City 48135.

Outer space fascinates young authors

Canton Chatter

By KATHY FREECE 981-2027

Among the exciting events happening at Eriksson School these days is the hosting of the 11th annual Young Authors' Conference. The learning specialists in every Plymouth-Canton elementary school have worked for months with the grade-level teachers preparing for the yearly function.

Vada Starr, Terry Secord, Ann Neiswander, Irene Finkbeiner, Sandy Lanese, Luan Brownlee, Barbara Schoolmeesters, Tina Powell, Marion Brown, Jackie Whiting, Patti Pollock, Klo Phillippi and Paula Holmes pay individual attention to all books selected by teachers as entrants. The sixth-grade staffs from the middle schools, who have several works of art entered in this conference, are Joe Kitzhazy, Sheila Kenyan, Tom Owens, Shelly Rybarsyk and Sally DeRoo.

The theme chosen by the Eriksson staff is "Space Writers." The entire media center will be turned into the inside of a command module or a reasonable fascimile for the conference. So many children throughout the district have chosen the topic of outer space to express their imagination and talent.

The Young Authors' Conference gives recognition to students who have written either a good fiction or a nonfiction story, or a completed collection of poetry. One Saturday in May is set aside for the winners to participate in mini-workshops put on by area teachers. The featured presentation of the day will be by Paul Passeno of the Detroit Science Center.

As in years past, each child entering a book will receive a certificate of merit. The kindergartens of Eriksson School are combining their efforts to display a group expression.

Larry Cameron, Pat Hammer, Bill Pearson, George Belvitch, Mary Uhl, Jeff Fordell and Jim DeKere are teachers at Eriksson who participate in team teaching at different grade levels. The children are made aware of a variety of teaching styles as well as receiving instruction by a professional especially strong in the particular subject. Some classes have 60 students, but regular-size groups just change their teachers during the course of the day.

The introduction of instructional skills program curriculum guides is backed wholeheartedly by all of the teachers at Eriksson.

It was years in the making, but the district teachers are speaking one common language per grade. The new common terminolgy makes for consistent curriculum development. Each school has its own committee, but the positive professional growth at Eriksson is implemented and going full speed ahead.

THE CARL Murphy family and the John Lyons family of Eriksson were instrumental in the school receiving a Texas Instruments Computer for in-school purposes. These families turned in the highest number of Campbell Soup labels which enabled this terrific prize to be awarded to the children of Eriksson.

In years past, two teachers at this house of learning were effective in using the Apple Computer purchased in conjuction with the PTO and school funds.

Vickie McCormick and Sherry Hunter now work with the learning disabled and special education students, increasing skills for all of their students. There are now 10 teachers within the school applying subjects to be worked with on both computers.

The computer age of the future is now upon us and enjoyed by our children.

DAVID NIELSEN won the school spelling bee, which was taped by Omnicon cablevision for students on all tracks to enjoy after school.

Mark Copp is the physical education instructor at Eriksson who has developed his theories of movement education enjoyed by the gym classes.

The gross motor activity performed by the children in daily classes is so important in their extracurricular activities. Mark often turns off all the lights and tells an adventure story. The children express their own ideas of how the story should be interpreted by climbing, stretching, overcoming make-believe barriers. The traditional balance beam, rope climbing and field-day events are a part of his routine for the children.

MILLER SCHOOL PTO will host a pancake breakfast at the school this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The T-Ball League at the school will be the benefactor of the day. Juice, coffee, pancakes and sausage are the tempting menu for the early-morning meal.

New group invites bereaved parents

A new chapter of Bereaved Parents, a self-help group for mothers and fathers whose children have died, will hold its first meeting at 8-10 p.m. Monday, April 19 in Newman House, 17300 Haggerty just south of the Schoolcraft College main campus.

Gloria Collins of Northville, who has been attending meetings of the group in Southfield, said the new chapter is being formed for those in this area who are in need of its support.

The organization, she said, gives the opportunity to share emotions and feelings regarding the grieving process in a positive framework and provides support and friendship for sorrowing parents.

The meetings in Newman House will take place the first Monday of each month, Collins added. Those attending may park behind the house and enter by the rear door. There are no dues and all participation is voluntary.

Those interested in further information on the group may call Collins, 348-1857.

99-cent special to cut gloom along with hair

By Sherry Kahan
staff writer

When people are unemployed, they often put off something that might be a real spirit-booster. A haircut, for instance.

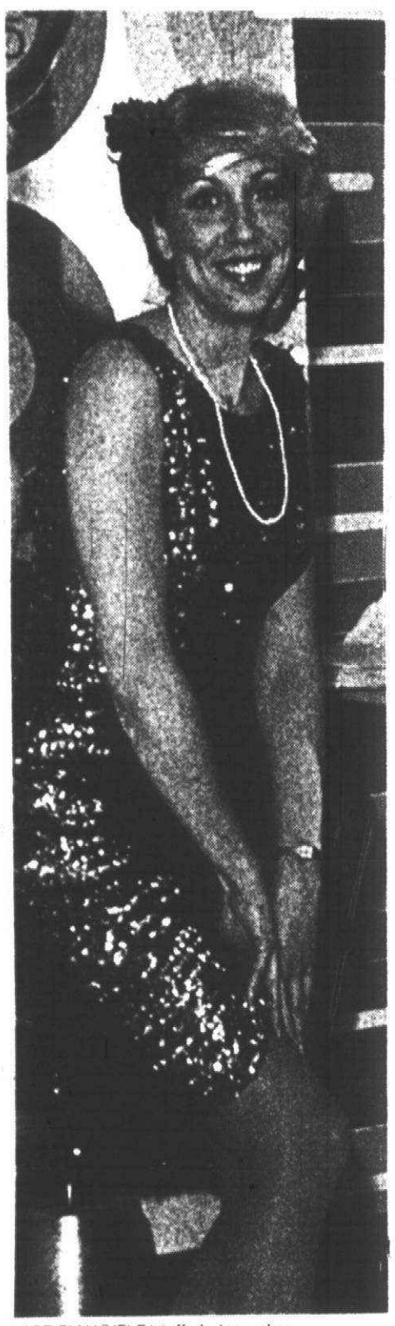

The owners and stylists at Hair Hut in Garden City recognize the problem. On Sunday they will be ready to do what they do best in the morale-raising department.

They'll cut hair for 99 cents. The bargain rate is available to anyone who can present a card from the Michigan Employment Security Commission, denoting laid-off status. It's offered also to the cardholder's entire family.

The Hair Hut, at 29848 Ford, a block west of Middlebelt, will have 20 hair sspecalists at the ready from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday to keep those scissors snipping and the crowd moving.

Participants will recognize these specialists by their Roaring '20s costumes. They won't be able to choose, though, whether they get trimmed by the flapper in sequins or the one twirling pearls and wearing headband and speakeasy dress in basic black.

The clipping will be on a first-come, first-served basis.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

Donna Smith of Plymouth will be decked out in a green flapper dress with sequins when she cuts hair for the unemployed Sunday at the Hair Hut in Garden City.

"LAST CHRISTMAS we began to suffer the first pangs of the unemployment situation," said Barb Egeler of Westland, co-owner of the store with Sue Discher. "We have a meeting every six weeks with our employes, and we talked about the fact that people were not coming in because they were unemployed."

"What about having a day when we go back to Depression prices?" suggested hairdresser Kim Richards of Taylor.

The brainstorming was off and running. Before long the plans included costumes of the era that ended as the Depression began. One employee, B.J. Schultz, made arrangements to have costumes from the Dearborn Parks and Recreation Department donated to the cause.

The women hope to emphasize the fun of the Roaring '20s as an antidote to feelings of despair. A mother and son clown act — Barbara and Kevin Lafferty, will be on hand, and there will be balloons for the children.

"It's a combination of business promotion and a chance to do something for the unemployed," said Egeler.

THE TWO OWNERS and their employes have been involved in other activities of the helping kind. Last year they were producers of the show, "Sounds of Broadway," which brought in $8,000. The money was given to the fight against muscular dystrophy.

A fashion show they planned the previous year brought MD $5,000.

"Things like this Sunday haircutting make the job more fun," noted Johanne Pinard of Westland, who will be decked out Sunday in a smashing green dress with sequins. "It's not work when we do something like this. These group projects bring us closer together."

"It's nice to get a lot of people together to help people," put in Lesa Gordor, also of Westland. She'll be easy to pick out Sunday. She'll be the one in gangster garb. But in her hands will be scissors and comb rather than a vintage '20s tommy gun.

Seminar teaches accountability through budgeting

By Margaret Miller
staff writer

Christian accountablity can mean money management and budgeting, says a teacher and lecturer who will bring a six-hour seminar to Plymouth Christian School next week.

"This is the information people want most for today's living," said Lanson Ross, Baptist pastor and head of Planned Living Seminars of Seattle. "What we offer is not a course in accounting, but a lesson in accountablity. And anyone can learn it; you don't have to be an accountant."

Ross' course will be offered 7-10 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, April 19 and 20, in the school at 43065 Joy. It costs $45 for a couple and $35 for an individual, with lower rates available for groups. The fee includes a syllabus and a 12-month supply of budgeting books.

Those interested in attending can make reservations with Ron Pennington or Ralph Mavin, seminar coordinators, 459-3505.

Besides budgeting, the course covers developing a good self-image, setting and reaching personal and family goals, making decisions, investing your life and planning for retirement.

'I don't believe God is obligated to subsidize bad management. The person who plans his life is a person who maximizes his abilities, minimizes his problems and enjoys the fruits of his labor.'
——Lanson Ross

VISITING LAST month to make arrangements for the seminar, Ross recounted the life experiences that led him to the point of taking seminars around the country.

A preacher at age 19, he said he had "no Christian background but had one of those born-again experiences you hear about."

But early experiences blocked him from satisfaction in church work.

"My father was an alcohoic," he explained, "and my mother tried to keep me away from that sort of life, while all the time telling me I was just like him.

"So I looked myself as a failure, no matter how well I did in the churches I served. There is a difference between forgiveness and being able to like oneself."

His own journey to a better self image involved leaving the ministry seven years ago and joining the Seattle firm King's Garden and raising funds for its world relief organization.

Later he pulled out of the organization know known as Christa Ministries, and soon found himself heading three business organizations and involved in three partnerships. "I learned I had the ability to make money, but I still didn't have a clue as to what I was doing." he said.

Counseling at that point "helped awaken my self-image," he said, and he found that the steps that put him in control of his life could be passed on through the seminars he has been giving for 2½ years.

"WE START with self image and go on to goal setting," he said. "If businesses can set goals, so can families, and children can be taught to do it."

A goal, Ross added, is "the end to which a plan takes you." "So if you don't have a plan," he added, "you don't have a goal."

He said his course would give attention to "what to do when you don't attain some goals."

"We also will do some actual budgeting," he added. "We'll take a family of four with an annual income of $22,000, and make a budget in a group dynamics situation."

Staying on budgets will be discussed too — "that's where decision-making comes in" — and the retirement part of his course will note how investments can be kept in balance so that "retirement is more than sitting in the sun and reading magazines."

ROSS, WHO at age 45 is a teaching pastor at Landgren Memorial Baptist Church near Takoma, Wash., as well as heading Planned Living Seminars, sees no contradiction in living well and living spiritually.

"I don't believe God is obligated to subsidize bad management," he said. "The person who plans his life is a person who maximizes his abilities, minimizes his problems and enjoys the fruits of his labor.

"The enjoyment may not be financial; I don't believe the making of money is easily done for every person. I may be emotional, mental or in another area of life."

Ross recently completed a book titled "Total Life's Prosperity," which is being published by Tyndale House.

"It should be out in July," he said. "They feel it will sell because it speaks to people's needs."

Ross and his wife Mary, a concert musician, make their home in Seattle. They have two sons, Lanny, who attends the Air Force Academy, and David, a junior at the University of Washington.

moral perspectives
Rev. Lloyd Buss

Names hurt as much as sticks and stones

Remember the rhyme from childhood days: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words will never hurt me." It was a way to handle ridicule, taunts and jeers. We would have been better advised to solve the problem in other ways.

I've always considered it significant that the Ten Commandments include prohibitions both against stealing and bearing false witness. Even more significant, they are placed next to each other.

Stealing is prohibited because it takes away from another what is part of that person's identity. So does bearing false witness.

THE PROBLEM in our contemporary culture is a very careful attention to the first one and a blatant disregard for the second. It is certainly against the codes of our community life to steal from one another, but we seldom hold one accountable for what is said about another.

To be sure, we do have legal codes defining slander and defamation of character, but the courts have always determined that a person can better afford a half-truth about his/her character, than the loss of a material item.

This is not meant to minimize the act of stealing. Instead, it is meant to intensify the significance of language and the role it plays in the creation of community.

Language is the basis of community, and when we speak half-truths of others, we are taking something from them just as surely as if we were stealing a material item form them.

MERE PROHIBITION against bearing false witness will not be enough. It certainly bears consideration as a place to start. Saying nothing is better than speaking a distorted version of the truth.

But Martin Luther saw another opportunity in this commandment than a mere prohibition against lying. He saw it as a way to build community and so he enjoined others to speak well of others and explain their actions in the kindest way as a way of obeying this commendment.

Civility in public intercourse is increasingly rare. We know how to jab and swat, stab and cuff with words. We know how to "cut people down," to "trim them to size," to "put them in their place." But the very words we use to describe our actions, betray our intentions. We mean to take something from them.

I DON'T anticipate any public demand for legal codes extending the probibitions against bearing false witness in the same way that our society has determined to protect the property rights of all.

But the consequences for our lack of care in the way we speak of one another may be more disastrous than we can imagine. By being less than honest and responsible in our speaking of one another, we have taken from them the character they bring to our world.

In the final sense, we are the losers. The community that is created in the interchange of equals has been destroyed and we are left alienated one from another.

Dining Out With THE AMERICAN EXPRESS® CARD

Mountain Jacks Claims Four Special Steaks

Special occasions are made even more special at Mountain Jacks restaurants by four unusual house specialties. These include a Filet Mignon stuffed with seasoned mushrooms, wrapped in bacon, charbroiled and then smothered with mushrooms sautéed in Chablis wine-butter. The Crab-Stuffed New Yorker features a New York strip steak stuffed with a tempting mixture of crabmeat, mushrooms, butter and parsley, charbroiled and heaped with mushrooms sautéed in brandied-butter. And, the Peppercorn Filet Mignon, a gourmet-tender filet, wrapped in bacon and coated in freshly cracked peppercorns. The popular Beef Feast For Two offers the three cuts beef lovers prefer, top sirloin, filet mignon, and prime rib.

In addition to the house specialties, the menu offers more than 15 cuts of beef, fresh fish and seafood entrées.

The five Mountain Jacks restaurants, located in Troy, Farmington Hills, Warren, Ann Arbor, and Dearborn Heights, last fall introduced a new specialty menu. Since that time customer comments have ranged from "outstanding" to "truly unique," according to local managers. Two of the locations, Warren and Dearborn Heights, were formerly known as Stag & Hound. While ownership and management remain the same, the names of the restaurants have been changed to provide continuity and eliminate any confusion caused by restaurants of different names serving identical menus.

Don't forget your American Express Card!

J. Ross Browne's... A Seafood Success Story

SOUTHFIELD...The old Shakespearian question, "What is in a name?," is being asked these days at Southfield's J. Ross Browne's, formerly known as the Dry Dock. Those who enjoyed the Dry Dock may be wondering if their old favorite by any other name would be as good.

The answer to that question, from J. Ross Browne's Manager Mike Hunter, is an unqualified yes and no! "We won't be 'just' as good as the old Dry Dock. The name change signifies a whole new look and exciting additions to the menu which we feel will mean an even better dining experience for our old and new guests."

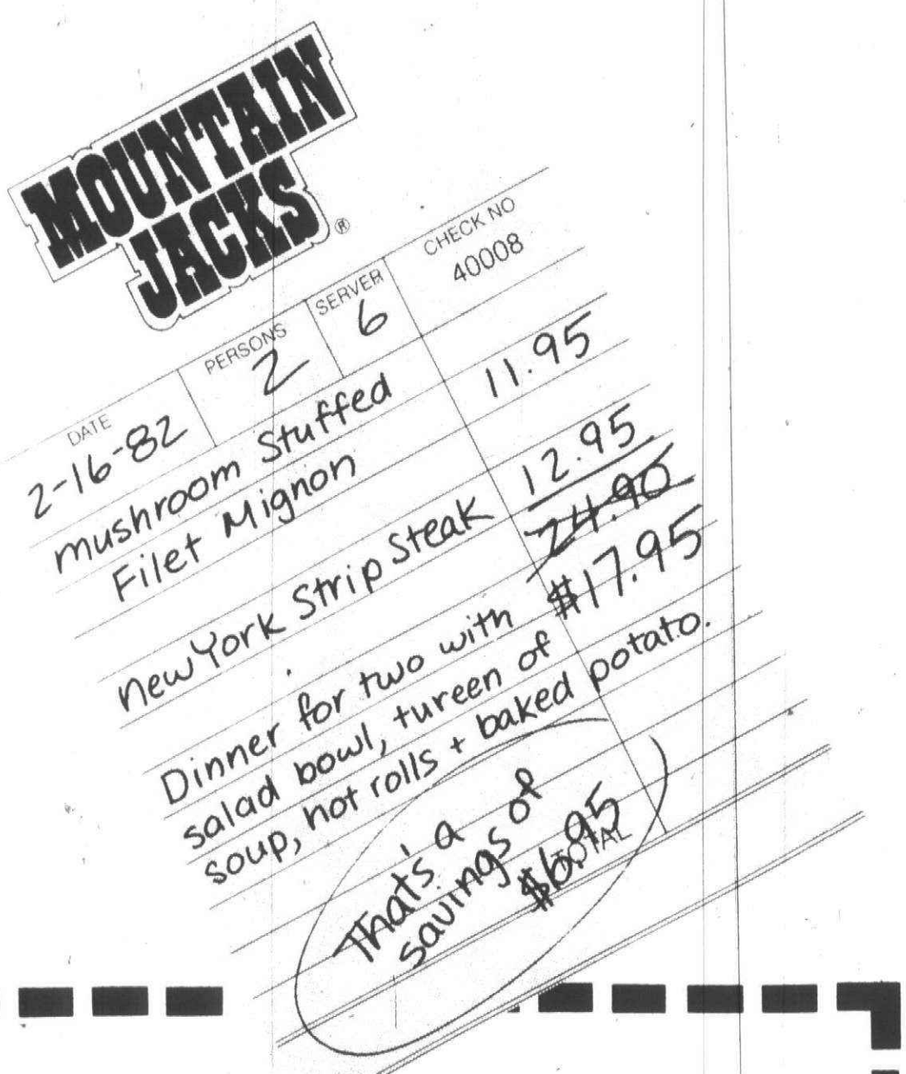

Hunter goes on to explain that "The Dry Dock and J. Ross Browne's are owned by the same company that operates the J. Ross Browne's in Bloomfield Hills and Warren. This means that the same level of quality and service will be maintained at all three Detroit restaurants. However, by changing the name to J. Ross Browne's it will be less confusing for our guests in the greater Detroit area."

Dining will be an all new pleasure with a large selection of gourmet seafood dishes, a daily variety of fresh fish, and a selection of steaks and prime rib.

The American Express Card is accepted at all J. Ross Browne's.

Visit J. Ross Browne's and discover that seafood of this rare quality is served at restaurants by no other name in the Detroit area.

Carlos Murphy's

No Blarney and lots of Eggs.

SOUTHFIELD...St. Patrick's Day revelers at Carlos Murphy's Irish-Mexican Cafe found there was no blarney about the popular restaurant/lounge's "Pot of Gold" celebration held March 17-21.

Thousands of happy celebrants stole a coin from the Leprechaun's Pot of Gold during the four-day gala. As it happened, every participant was a winner! For some guests, the coin they plucked from the pot earned them a free Irish Stew dinner. To others, the coin meant a discount of food and drink or a tiny St. Patrick's Leprechaun.

Eight guests pulled genuine one ounce gold Krugerrands from the pot. The lucky winners were Richard T. McQuesten, James Gressler, James F. Vlk, Terry Berlin, Jeri Bailey, Adrianne Firsten, David Pesick and Eleanor Von Schmittou.

As the wearin' o' the green gives way to the wearin' of Easter Bonnets, Carlos Murphy's patrons will be able to participate in a special Easter Egg hunt. Beginning Easter Day, April 11, everyone who visits CM's will receive an Easter Egg hunt card. Crafty Easter Egg sleuths will be asked to peruse 6 "scratch off" Easter Eggs to determine a prize.

The best part of this hunt is that everyone is a winner! Informed sources revealed that behind each egg is a prize which could be any number of food discount prizes.

When asked to comment on the Carlos Murphy's event, the Easter Rabbit was heard to exclaim, "This will be the only place in town where I can get more bunny for the money!"

Girls' track coach cites lack of depth

By Jay Keenan
special writer

Bob Richardson is entering the girls' track season with a problem that's common to every coach at Centennial Educational Park this year.

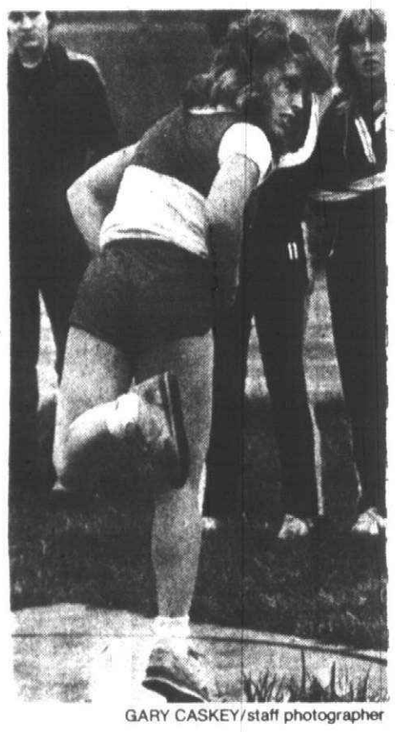

With ninth-graders being shipped back to the middle schools this year because school overpopulation, the Plymouth Canton coach is concerned about the team's depth.

"We have some good people, and we're excited about that," said the third-year coach. "But with ninth-graders out of high school, it took away a little bit from our squad size."

"Little bit" could be classified as an exaggeration.

Last year, Canton entered the 1981 campaign with 47 hopefuls. They won three of seven dual meets and finished fourth in the Western Six League. The roster this year has been trimmmed in half.

"We have only 24 people on our team," Richardson said. "Our squad is a little smaller than what we've been used in the last few years. Last year we had about 12 or 13 ninth-graders."

GARY CASKEY/staff photographer

Lisa Bundarin returns for Canton in the shot put. She placed in last year's Western Six League meet.

Richardson, however, doesn't seem to be too discombobulated.

"We're excited about getting the season started," he said. "George Pryzgodski, my new assistant coach, and I have been working with the girls since March 1, and they've made a lot of progress."

CANTON HAS experience in the mile and two-mile events with the return of senior captains Michelle Perrot and Charlotte Thomas. Richardson describes the four-year veterans as "key performers in the distance events."

Perrot and Thomas are considered Jacks-of-all-trades. They can run middle-distance events with an emphasis in the mile relay.

Richardson said that the difference between success and failure weighs on finding the right combinations in all three relay events.

"Putting together our relay teams, I think, will be one of the big things," said the Canton coach. "Like I said, we don't have a lot of depth, so we'll fight to win all of our relays to help us out.

"We have a pretty good sprint crew. We're pretty fast, but I think if we put the right people together, we might be able to come up with some good relays. Our field events should be pretty good, too."

Lori Shufeldt, another four-year regular, will fly in the sprints (100, 220 and 440 yards) and relay events. She rounds out the captaincy for the Chiefs. The Canton senior also can whirl the discus.

MAUREEN BROPHY, a sophomore, is another valuable performer in the 440 and 880 relays. She might also be used in the high jump.

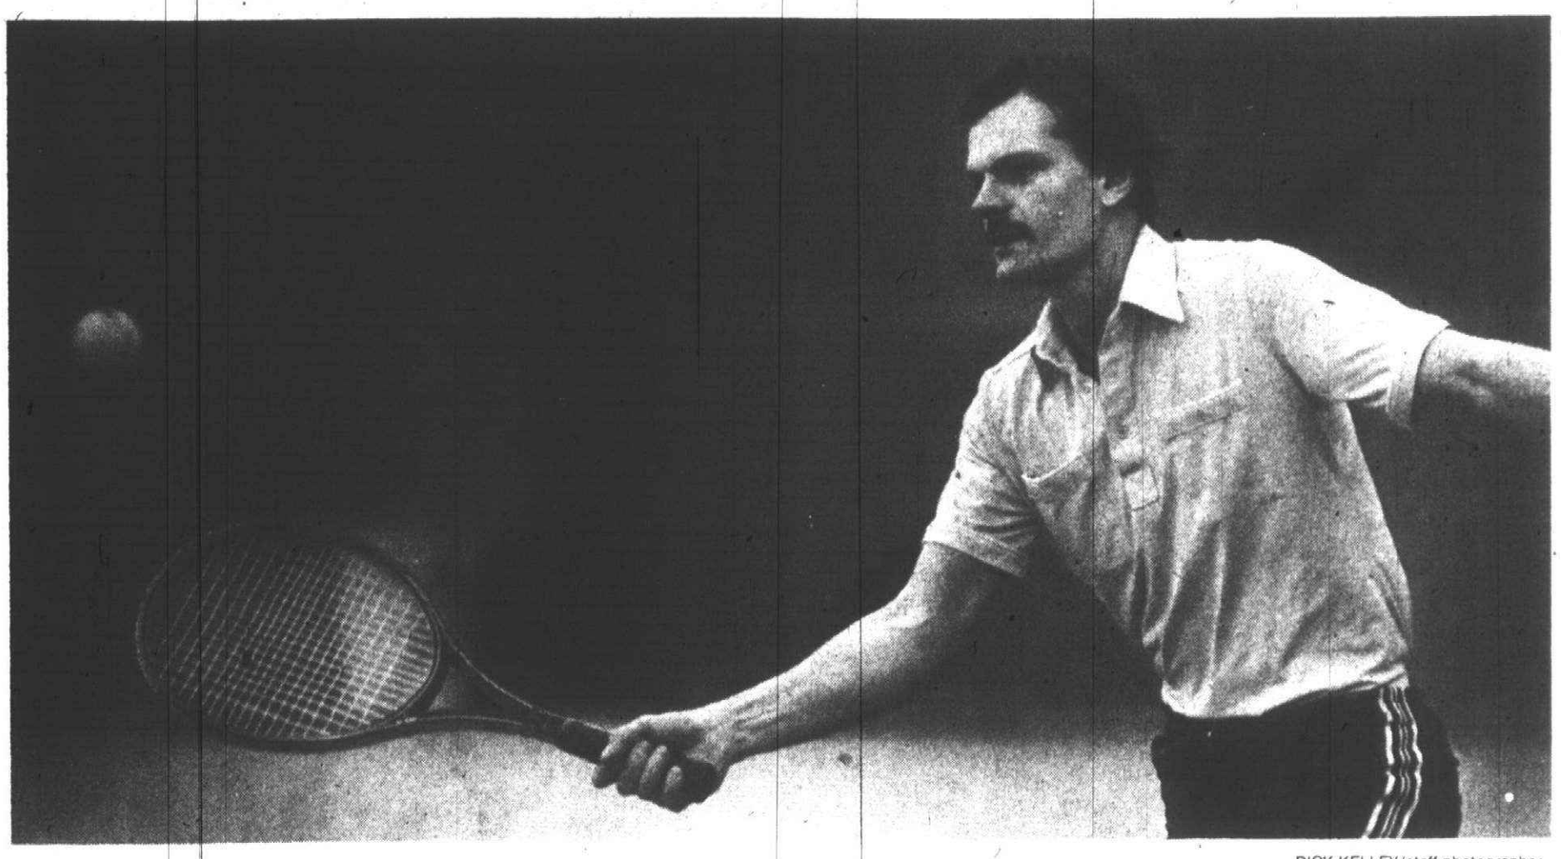

Another sophomore, Pat Brennan, returns as the team's top long jumper. She's a hurdler and sprinter, too.

"Pat is one of the best athletes we have," Richardson said, "so we'll try to put her in the right place at the right time in the relays."

The injury bug has taken a bite out of the Canton attack. Lesley McDowell, the Chiefs' best high jumper (also a sprinter), is out indefinitely with an ankle injury.

Ruth Ann Trout, who performed admirably in the 440 dash a year ago, is sidelined with a hamstring injury which has bothered her some time in between the cross country and gymnastics seasons. Her points will be sorely missed if she cannot compete in the mile relay and hurdles.

Chuck Volland, 28, is one of 32 singles players entered in this week-end's tournament at Square Lake Racquet Club.

Love at first sight

Area pro blooms late in tennis career

By Marty Budner
staff writer

Chuck Volland started playing tennis "to meet girls." Instead, he found a career.

Volland is now a teaching professional at Square Lake Racquet Club in Bloomfield Township. It's quite an accomplishment for a person who didn't begin playing serious tennis until he was almost out of college.

"I started playing tennis 10 years ago, but I really didn't start getting into it until I was a senior in college," said Volland, who graduated from Eastern Michigan University in 1976.

"At the time I was playing third base on Eastern's baseball team. But, I decided to get into tennis because it was a good way to meet girls.

"Even though I started playing tennis at a late age, I feel I've done well," he said. "I'm satisfied with the way I've progressed because I've had some good wins over some good people."

Volland, who lives in Livonia, has improved his tennis game so much that he will participate in his third Western Men's 1982 Indoor Singles and Doubles Championship this weekend.

THE TOURNEY, sponsored by Metes and Powers (a local distributor of Miller beer), begins 5 p.m. Friday and concludes Sunday with the singles and doubles final starting 10 a.m.

All matches will be played at the Square Lake Racquet Club, located at 799 Denison Court.

"Two years ago, I got to the second round and won three matches," said Volland. "But, this is an extremely tough tournament. Usually the best players in the midwest are here."

Volland, 28, said he changed his style of play from pure baseline to serve-and-volley.

"I had been playing groundstrokes, but I worked more on my serve-and-volley and coming to the net more," said Volland.

"I used to be more patient, but I've had this desire lately to end points sooner. I'm becoming more of an aggressive players instead of a baseline player.

"I've found out that you have to play more of an aggressive game to be tough," he said.

Volland is one of 32 players from across the midwest entered in the three-day tournament. There are 16 doubles teams.

The top seed is John Whitlinger of Cincinnati, and the second seed is Bill Lofghren of Columbus, Ohio. A pair of Canadians — Chris Pridham and Brett Segion — are seeded third and fourth, respectively.

"BOTH WHITLINGER and Lofghren have played on the men's tour," said tournament director George Russell. "Whitlinger was a recent NCAA singles champion from the University of Southern California.

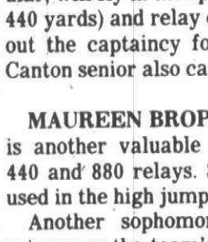

"This is the most prestigious tournament in the state because it's used for ranking purposes for men seeking midwestern seeding in national tournaments.

The competition this year is a bit stronger than in the past because we've attracted players from the men's circuit.

"It's an excellent tournament for people looking to see good backhands and forehands from 10 feet away rather than 400 feet away like you get in places like the Silverdome," said Russell

Women's suit takes wrong angle

Brad Emons

The memo was clear and concise: "Due to the lack of interest and participation, subject schedule is hereby cancelled for 1982.

"The above decision has been discussed with all concerned parties and has been mutually agreed upon.

"All schools involved on the Canton Girls Golf schedule have been notified and understand the necessity of the cancellation."

John Sandmann, Director of Athletics for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, was the executor. He had no other choice.

Nobody was interested in playing girls golf at Canton. They couldn't get enough for a team.

There's an ironic twist to the cancellation.

This occurred in wake of a law suit recently filed an Ann Arbor group called the League of Parents, Students and Educators Involved in School Athletic Practices. They are suing the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) for discrimination against females in the structure of rules, decision-making and monitoring procedures. The MEA Women's Caucas, the Coalition for Non-Sexist Education, and National Organization for Women have also joined in the suit.

THE GROUP cited the MHSAA Handbook which shows that 557 Michigan high schools offered golf for boys and only 175 for girls last year.

The group also contends that the MHSAA rulings crowd most major girls' sports into the fall, out of the standard season for some, in order to free facilities for boys during the "proper" season. Field hockey is one sport that suffers, according to the plaintiffs. The MHSAA has eliminated that tournament, causing young women to receive little publicity and community support.

Michigan, Montana, North Dakota and West Virginia are the only states to hold basketball in the fall.

These are the smart states. Basketball is a year-round sport now. The NCAA and high school tourneys run these days until late March after starting in mid-October and early November.

Professional basketball kicks off in late October and ends maybe by June.

Is basketball really a winter sport anymore?

I can buy the argument that girls' basketball is played in the fall to free up gym time and space in the winter. Both sexes should be thankful that gym times don't conflict. Boys' basketball is played in the winter because it follows football, a seasonal sport.

I always thought that girls' and boys' basketball should be played on the same nights, but after mulling the prospect over, sharing the same bill would be disastrous.

WITH GIRLS' basketball in the fall, they can establish their own identity and gain greater media coverage. Besides, you can only cover so many games in one night.

The state girls' basketball final in Indiana drew approximately 10,000 fans in late February. The boys' final in late March was a sellout (16,500) at Market Square Arena in Indianapolis.

In Michigan, the state girls' finals drew a total crowd of 5,000 for four championship games on a Saturday in December at Detroit's Calihan Hall.

What's the difference between a cold February day or a chilly December day?

By placing girls' basketball in the fall, fans will be more inclined to turn off hoops by winter. Think of it this way, girls' basketball in the fall is often an alternative to high school football when it gets a little boring.

Sports such as softball, basketball, volleyball, gymnastics and track have the potential to grow. As girls' skills develop, more fans will turn out. Tennis usually draws a large number of participants, while soccer is on the way.

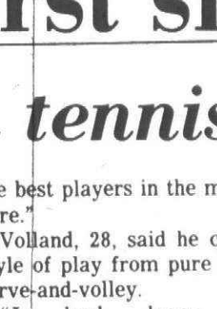

IT'S TIME for the plaintiffs to forget the GAA days. I can't see establishing a field hockey tournament until the interest is there. The same holds true for golf and archery.

The girls' seasons are shorter, indeed. That's not fair. The Ann Arbor group charges that women have little input in MHSAA decision-making matters.

Men have the same problems, too. The MHSAA listens to few. Just ask the wrestling and baseball coaches. Their suggestions have fallen on deaf ears for years.

It's time to go with the strengths and forget the weaknesses.

PROUDLY PRESENTS...
HIGH SCHOOLS'
PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Congratulations to all Plymouth Canton & Plymouth Salem athletes who participated in the Winter season

Dick Scott's Plymouth High School "PLAYERS OF THE WEEK" feature continues this week. Each week one Salem and one Canton player will be saluted for their effort the previous week, with their names engraved on a trophy for display at the high schools. Players will be selected by the coaching staffs of the respective schools. Look for this ad every Thursday. For that "Winning Deal" on a new or used car, see Dick Scott Buick.

A PLYMOUTH HIGH SCHOOL FLASHBACK

In February of 1976, rated for just one week in most of the popularity polls as the No. 1 Class A basketball team in Michigan, the Rocks tasted defeat for the first time as Belleville's Tigers posted a 63-57 triumph. Nonetheless, Salem, which now is 16-1 overall, still leads the Suburban 8 in its drive toward a 3rd straight undisputed championship with a 10-1 mark. "They beat us square up," admitted coach Fred Thomann of the Rocks, as he avoided offering any form of alibi. Belleville astounded the packed house by racing to a 13-0 lead in the first 5 minutes and from then on it was all up hill for the Plymouth troops. High scores for Salem were two brothers, all-stater Jim and Tom Ellinghausen, Mike Primeau and Brian Wolcott.

Local runners glow in Twilight event

A mother and daughter combination from Plymouth earned high marks April 4 in the Northland Center leg of the Triple Crown of Twilight Runs.

Eighty-seven runners entered the Triple Crown, which also included races March 21 at Eastland Center in Harper Woods and March 28 at Westland Center. The three-race individual total was 300.

Karen Holappa finished first in the women's 45-and-over division with a time of 20:22 over the 3.1-mile course. Marge Peruski of Dearborn was second (21:01) and Joan Fulton of Westland was third (35:38).

Daughter Kris Holappa, competing in the women's 12-24 age division, gained third with a time of 20:55. Ella Willis of Detroit was first in the division and No. 1 overall with a time of 18:02.

Willis also won at Eastland and Westland. She posted a three-race average of 17:49.

The 24-year-old Detroiter has been running the past 15 years. She has competed in five marathons, including a fourth place in the 1981 Detroit Free Press event. Willis was also third in the 1981 Baltimore Marathon and hopes to qualify for the 1984 U.S. Olympic team.

Ann Arbor's Mike Burns was the men's overall champ as he finished first in the Northland race with a time of 14:58. His three-race average was 14:47.

BURNS, a computer programmer, began his running career in high school 14 years ago. He has competed in numerous marathons, finishing third overall in the October Free Press race.

The former Central Michigan University standout is also aiming for a spot on the 1984 U.S. squad.

Willis and Burns each collected a warm-up suit, trophy and $100 for winning the series.

Chief netters face stiff challenges

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Jim Hayes compensates because of the weather.

"We were in the gym today and set up three courts," he explained. "It was windy outside and the courts were wet."

And the Canton coach will also compensate once the season starts (Wednesday at Livonia Bentley).

The team's top three players from a year ago have all graduated — Kreg Kinnel, Kevin Johnston and Bob Adams. Doubles performer Grant Crago is also gone. That foursome nearly led Canton to its first Western Six League title. Farmington Harrison is the defending champ as a result of a one-point victory over Canton in the league meet.

Kinnel, a patient baseline player, made the Eastern Michigan University team and at last report sported a 5-1 record at the No. 6 singles position.

Hayes admits his 1982 team is not as talented as the 1981 group, but remains optimistic.

"I don't know how the other teams will break down," he said, "but the kids work hard and I work hard.

"Our doubles will come around once we get them going. Everyone who comes out is a singles player."

HAYES SPENT the vacation period trying to find the right doubles combinations.

But at least a singles lineup has been formed. Hayes will then make an evaluation after the Bentley meeting. Challenge matches to determine positions will follow.

The Canton coach is pleased with the progress of senior Tom Pasley, who moves into the No. 1 singles spot after playing No. 4 as a junior.

Three veterans will round out the singles contingent.

Senior Rubin Rabillas, junior Ron Austen and junior Ray Lademan all played doubles last season and are jockeying for the Nos. 2, 3 and 4 spots.

Mark Sawyer, a senior, returns in doubles.

The rest of the field, however, is untested.

Among the candidates are Russ

Jim Hayes

Roberts, back after a two-year absence, and Dave Schendel, both seniors; Tim Feldecamp, Randy Casper, Rich Erdelyi, Todd Garrett and Chris Gurriere, juniors; Joe Melican, Eric Popp, Chris Lindner, Tim McKercher, Dale Stubben and Don Terrin, Yat Keung, Steve Tolliver, Joel Zielinski, Mike Harvey, Mike Copeland, all sophomores.

Canton track preview —

Senior Pam Chelian, a 110 and 220 hurdler, is out with a bad knee. Richardson is not sure when or if either runner will return.

Junior Lisa Bundarin is Canton's shot put ace who has earned places at the Western Six League meet the past two years.

BUNDARIN adds punch in the discus and could possibly help as a hurdler.

Junior Vicky Wood lends support in the weight events. She's also vying for a relay spot. Sister, Lisa, a sophomore, competes in the sprints and long jump.

Ida Williams, a sophomore, returns in the 880 and mile. She was the Chiefs' most improved runner a year ago.

A pair of juniors, April Ritchey and Kim Brown, both return and will put their energies into the sprints and relays. Brown is a high jumper and long jumper, too.

Senior Bronwyn Fitzgerald will concentrate on the middle-distance and distance races.

The remainder of the squad is untested.

Hoping to fill the necessary gaps are Jenny Julian and Debbie Rogers, both seniors; Jenny Akhtar and Julie Vest, juniors; Julie Durkin, Shann Fitzgerald, Linda Mrowka and Laura Smith, sophomores.

The Chiefs open their 1982 season Tuesday at Livonia Bentley in a triangular meet which also includes Redford Thurston.

Payne cruises in opener

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Heavyweight Craig Payne of the Livonia Boxing Club, a runner-up recently in the National Golden Gloves Tournament, scored an impressive decision Tuesday night over Jim Brown of Oklahoma in the second round of the U.S. Amateur Boxing Championships.

The easy victory upped Payne's amateur record to 25-7. The event is sponsored by the American Boxing Federation (ABF).

The 20-year-old Payne, who drew a first-round bye, met No. 1 seed Tyrone Biggs of Philadelphia last night in a quarterfinal bout at the Coliseum. More results will appear in Monday's Observer.

Biggs, a powerful slugger, reinjured his right hand during a second-round bout Tuesday. The injury kept the Philadelphian out of this year's National Golden Gloves held in Kansas City, Mo.

Biggs is the defending U.S. Amateur champ. He also has represented the United States in previous international competition against the Soviet Union, East Germany and Cuba.

RICKEY WOMACK, another Livonia Boxing Club member, lost his first-round light-heavyweight (178 pounds) bout.

The Ann Arbor native knocked his opponent down twice and drew a standing eight-count in the second round.

Womack, however, ran out of gas in the third round and lost the decision.

Games rescheduled

Snow, rain and cold weather caused the postponement of several area high school sporting events last week and early this week.

Baseball was the hardest hit.

Plymouth Salem's home opener (April 7) with Trenton will be made up as part of a double-header May 7 at Trenton. The Rocks' home date Tuesday with Redford Thurston was reset for noon today.

Plymouth Canton's home opener last Saturday with Royal Oak Dondero has been rescheduled for April 24. The double-header starts at 3 p.m.

Canton's game with Flint Southwestern, set originally for Monday (April 12), has not yet been rescheduled.

Other sporting events yet to be made up: April 7, Trenton at Salem, boys' tennis; Salem at Trenton, softball.

The Mansfield (Ohio) Track and Field Relays, which was originally scheduled for Saturday (April 10), was cancelled.

Roop foots kick boxing bills

By Jim Hughes
staff writer

You might say Kerry Roop gets a "kick" out of boxing.

Roop, 31, who is the director and instructor at Nature's Way Martial Arts in Rochester, will go after the light heavyweight kick boxing championship in June.

He will fight champion Dan Macaruso, a kick boxer from Rhode Island who has held the title for the past three years, in a 12-round title bout. Roop will challenge Macaruso June 14 at the Premiere Center in Sterling Heights.

However, while renown boxers like Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns fight for personal glory, Roop's effort is just one of many geared toward promoting the sport of kick boxing.

He speaks openly and sincerely when he discusses the sport. It can be compared to boxing, but Roop insists, when the two are presented side by side, kick boxing will prevail as the more popular spectator sport.

"The general public, once they've seen kick boxing, is twice as turned on by it," Roop said. "I think people who like to see fights will get excited about kick boxing.

"IT'S NOT there yet," he said, referring to the sport as a heavy spectator event, "but it's going to be. Kick boxing is only six or seven years old. It's catching on. ESPN (a 24-hour-a-day sports cable station) telecasts it every week.

"I've been one promoting it in Michigan, and I haven't heard any complaints. I think the boxing people are afraid, because kick boxing is more exciting."

In an effort to make kick boxing more visible to the general public — more specifically, the fight crowds — Roop wants to stage bouts on boxing cards. His logic is a simple one.

"If more people see it, the more will like it. The more people who come to watch it, the more money there will be. The more money there is, the better fighters there will be. And, with better fighters, there will be more public appeal," he explained.

It sounds logical. However, before the bottom line can be attained, the sport has to be made visible.

"Once you mix the two together (kick boxing implemented in boxing shows), there will be enough for both sides," Roop said. "I don't want to fight with the boxing people, I want to work with them. I'm just trying to get the sport known to the public. Once they see it, I think they'll be in for a surprise."

KICK BOXING is similar to boxing, except the fighters can use their feet as a weapon. This, Roop explains, is a dynamic dimension which gives the fighters two more courses of attack in their arsenal.

"When you put the two together (hands and feet), you can be very effective," he said. "With four weapons, you can have one come out of nowhere to score a good point or serve as a knockout blow.

"Kick boxing is just like boxing, the only difference is you can throw kicks with the legs. The rules are the same, and the target area is the same," Roop said. "Most of the skills are the same. Like boxing, it can be very dangerous if you don't have the proper skills. There's a lot of training and a lot of stamina involved."

Roop will begin training for his title bout April 19. His preparation will consist pretty much of the same rigors a boxer would be put through.

"It's the same as boxing," Roop said, "plus a lot of kicking drills. "You shadow box, there's a lot of bag work, with kicking, and a lot of road work. I'll train about three hours a day, five days a week."

Roop, who has been participating as a kick boxer for five years, has a professional record of 19-7. One of his losses was to Macaruso, but it came while Roop was a rookie kick boxer.

"I fought him about 2½-3 years ago, and I fought on shear heart and determination," Roop said. "I didn't have the skills I have now. When I fought him, I won the first and last (ninth) rounds, and lost the middle rounds. He beat me decisively, it wasn't close at all.

"SINCE THEN, I've learned a lot about fighting. He's still undefeated, but everybody thinks I can win. I can win, it all comes down to how hard I train. I've paid my dues, now it's my turn.

"I'm going to push hard in my training," Roop said, "because I think whoever is the most aggressive and has the most stamina will win. I won't predict a knockout, because it's going to be a tough fight."

The championship fight will be another effort by Roop to promote the sport. Since the dollars aren't there, he's not fighting for the money, but rather for the love of the sport and the hope that it may grow.

All-star queens close

With two weeks remaining, only one pin separates the two leaders of the Ladies' Majors All-Star League that bowls at Cherry Hill Lanes.

It is an unusual race because it is a battle between Mary Mohacsi, the five-time Detroit bowling queen, and Aleta Rzepecki, the youthful left-hander who is rapidly rising to stardom.

The latest averages released by the league show Mohacsi leading with a 198 average and Rzepecki a pin back.

In the more than three decades of the league's existence, there has never been a race so close or one featuring a veteran against a rising star.

FRED RINGROSE, veteran of the suburban classics, led a group of six into the 700 club during last week with a 758 series at Bel-Aire Lanes.

Ringrose linked games of 214, 288 and 256 for his big count, beating Dave Hamilton's 745 by 13 pins. Dan Kinjorski opened with a 256 for a 726 to complete the firing at Bel-Aire.

The other barrier-breaking scores came when Bob Briggs fashioned a 715 at Super Bowl and Jim Wrublewski posted a 711 and Charlie Riffle a 704 at Westland Bowl.

TOM JOHNSTON missed the 700 club by six pins in the Junior House League at Merri-Bowl. He opened with a 198, then added games of 243 and 253 for his 694.

Right behind Johnston came Jim Stockton, who rolled a closing 277 in a 670 series and Ted Kulisz, whose opening 236 helped him to a 653.

In the Handicappers League, Rich Ruzycki finished with a 247 for a 691 and in the Senior Citizens League, Harold Von Bergern was the top man with a 253 in a 670.

OTHER GOOD PERFORMANCES: Tom Tomkiewicz rolled a 660 to pace the St. Linus League at Garden Lanes, with Ron Berger next at 632; Dave Kauppi had a big week at Plaza Lanes, pacing the Pinbusters League with a 633 and finishing second in the Business and Industrial League with a 608; and Lynn Sonnenberg, who carries a 147 average, came through with a 266 game — 119 pins over average.

Merri-Bowl will host the Annual Parks and Recreation League banquet for the youths at Roma Hall Thursday, April 22. More than 500 parents and children are expected to attend.

racquetball

Mike Yellen

If you've seen it once, you've seen it 100 times: The professional athlete, a baseball pitcher, or a quarterback, or perhaps a racquetball player, is surrounded by the press after a tournament.

"What happened?" goes the questioning in the first frustrating review of a poor performance.

"I don't know," is the reply. "I just didn't seem to have it today."

Exactly what is "it"? Not ability. Most professional athletes — and amateur ones that take their sports seriously — are in good to excellent shape. And you can say the same thing for fundamentals which, by now, have long been mastered.

IN MY MIND, what separates the best from the rest in any tournament revolves around a trio of words: preparation, adaptation and discipline.

No matter what the sport, you just can't walk on a playing surface without paying a price because, sooner or later, it'll catch up with you.

Paying a price relates first — and perhaps best — to tournament preparation. People ask how my Ektelon teammate, Dave Peck, and myself can look like we're in a trance on the court. It's easy, in a way. For months, weeks, years before that match, I've been taking one continual test. My workouts have been intense, I hit the shots where they belong, and I work to get in the proper postion to hit them.

And because in tournaments you'll play people you've never met, I vary my practice opponents. Obviously, it's not to my — or your — advantage to play a person who has the same strengths and weaknesses day-in and day-out (not to mention the boredom factor).

PLAY QUICK players, accurate ones, retrievers, powermen — all styles. It adds and strengthens your game, forces you to test shots you don't normally test. You can always go back to your bread and butter if need be.

Now that you've prepared to play the match with intense, well-planned practices, what happens when you hit the court for real? This is where adaptation comes in.

In racquetball, you control your own destiny. It differs from a batter in baseball, who can control only himself. If a pitcher is having a hot day, the opposing batter is in trouble.

It's different in racquetball. Your opponent hits a shot you can return with a kill. At least you have a chance to respond. That's why you have to analyze what's going on around you, anticipate and adjust.

TO ME, the hard drive serve is the toughest to return. On certain days, I've laced the ball into the backhand corner, only to have some guy roll it out. Even though its a popular serve, you have to analyze your actions.

Do I go to a half-lob, even though it's not as effective offensively? Do I slip in a Z-serve?

The key is, whatever a person does well, you want to take away from him. Pretty simple, huh? You'd be surprised how many times I see professionals and amateurs alike beaten because they refuse to change their "style."

For me, if the opponent can roll them out off the back wall, I don't hit back-wall shots. If he kills when he gets set, I keep him moving. Do the same thing: Analyze what your opponent likes to do, then drive hard in the opposite direction.

OF COURSE, it changes every time you walk on the court. You have to be your own self-analyst. Make your opponent do what he doesn't want to do.

Finally, the key to any climb to excellence — or consistency — is discipline. All the good professional players have it. The ones that are struggling to win don't.

If you have a problem with your backhand, get proper instruction then practice the shot. Don't rally. Just get yourself a court, set up, drop the ball and swing for an hour, or until you feel comfortable and confident with the shot.

So many people say they can't hit this or that shot, then the first thing they do when they practice is blast away at their best shot for hours on end. What good does that do?

YOU KNOW how to hit, say, a forehand. But what about a ceiling shot, or a Z serve or pinch volley? I realize this is a course in simplicity. With four walls, a ceiling, a racquet and a ball, racquetball is not that difficult to define. The key is refining.

Almost any athlete worth his salt will tell you the mental aspect of sports makes and breaks careers. It's the same on any level. You have to take that little extra step to improve. That means taking the time to be prepared now.

It will save you from answering a lot of "What happened?" questions later on.

Mike Yellen, a Southfield native, is among the top professional racquetball players in the world. His advice column will appear periodically in the Observer & Eccentric sports pages.

John Glenn hosts Elks track meet

Taylor Center is favored to capture the team title Saturday in the 17th annual Dearborn Elks Track and Field Relays for boys to be held Westland John Glenn High School, 36105 Marquette (just west of Wayne Road).

Field events begin at 11 a.m. followed by the running events at 1:30 p.m.

Dearborn is the defending champion. Seven of the 12 teams competing won league titles last season.

Roger Jones, a threat to win this year's Class A mile crown, leads a strong Taylor contingent. Center was second two weeks ago to defending Class A state champion Detroit Central in the Spartan Relays at Michigan State.

Detroit Cooley, led by a fast mile relay quartet, is also entered along with Redford Bishop Borgess, Catholic Central, Dearborn, Garden City West, Hazel Park, Highland Park, St. Clair Shores Lakeview, Livonia Franklin, Livonia Stevenson and host Glenn.

4 teams are solid contenders

Battle looms for NSL fast-pitch championship

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

It seems to be that time of year, once again.

Not only is the weather unpredictable, so is the Northwest Suburban League (NSL) softball race. No coach can pick an obvious favorite for the championship.

"It's a well-balanced league," said the new Redford Union coach, Tom Forma. Forma is one of four new coaches in the NSL. Only Vic Koos of Westland John Glenn and Leona Dost of Garden City East return.

East is the only team all the coaches mentioned as being a possible favorite. But the Panthers were far from a clear-cut choice. Glenn and RU, two teams that tied for second a year ago, and Livonia Franklin, which won the title, are also considered to be in the hunt.

The only question is, is there a team that won't be in the race? The answer, at least at the moment, is no. One game separated the top three teams a year ago, and it appears it will be the same kind of finish again this season.

Here's a preview of what to expect from the teams in the NSL.

GARDEN CITY EAST

East tied for fourth last year with a 5-5 league record. The Panthers were 12-10 overall.

Both those marks should improve this season because 12 players with varsity experience return.

"I think we're going to be in there," said Dost of her team's chances for the NSL crown. "I'd be very surprised if we weren't."

Not only does Dost have players with varsity experience from a year ago — some have two and even three years behind them.

Leading the returnees are Linda Webb, a junior shortstop, Sherri Look, a senior catcher, and Patty Boyce, a senior first baseman. All have been playing varsity ball since their freshman year.

Terri Fannon, a senior righthanded pitcher, is in her third varsity season.

softball

Dost has two other pitchers to choose from: Kim Lackey, a junior southpaw who is "developing consistency," and senior righthander Robbi Wilfong.

Oops, scratch Wilfong — at least for three weeks. It seems she fell off a ladder at school a few weeks back and fractured her ankle. It'll be another two or three weeks before she returns to action.

In the outfield, the Panthers may be a little more inexperienced. Ann Owsley, a sophomore, and Kathy O'Neil, a junior, will be two of the starters.

"The infield is going to be very good," Dost said. "The pitching is going to be there. Our defensive strategy is to make them earn their base hits and take the extra-base hit away from them."

Base running by her newer players worries Dost, but not much else.

"I'm looking forward to (the season)," she said, quickly adding, "if we can ever get outside."

LIVONIA FRANKLIN

The defending champs lost a lot to graduation and defection. The Patriots' pitching is questionable, leaving new coach Gerry Goode with some question marks.

Goode thinks he has some of the answers. Six players, all seniors, return with experience: Anna Collins, rightfielder; Julie Wilga, shortstop; Kim Redwood, leftfielder; Lisa Rodriguez, second base; Kim Halkey, catcher; and Carol Matuszewski, righthanded pitcher.

Matuszewski may be the key to Franklin's season. She will have to have a solid season on the mound if the Patriots are to succeed.

"If the pitching holds, we should be in pretty good shape," Goode predicted. "We're a sound ball club. In the heart of our batting order — third, fourth and fifth — there's a lot of power."

Goode does have other mound prospects. Alecia Lechta, a sophomore righthander, is "a real natural athlete", Goode said. Lechta will also see playing time at third base, according to the new coach.

Sue Sergison is another righthanded sophomore who may do some pitching. Lori Carlton's fine play at second base may cause Goode to make some other adjustments.

"We have better than adequate speed," Goode counted among his team's strengths. Of the weaknesses, he said, "We've only been outside once. Until you can get out there and work on live pitching, it's hard to tell (your weaknesses)."

For Franklin, the season will turn on the pitching.

REDFORD UNION

Forma, who played baseball at Redford Union 10 years ago, is optimistic that his first season behind the Panther bench can be an extremely successful one.

A good reason for his cheery outlook is Cathi Hengy. A second team All-League pitcher a year ago, Hengy brings her strong right arm, 8-4 record and 2.12 earned run average of a year ago back for her senior season.

That's not all RU has going for it. Senior co-captains Wreni Mountford and Sandy Carney are also among the returnees. Mountford led the team in scoring last season with 14 and Carney batted .316 as a centerfielder a year ago.

Carney will be behind the plate this season while Mountford returns to first base. Julie Barden also returns to play third base and Mary Hosmer will play second base and shortstop. Both are juniors but had strong sophomore seasons, Barden hitting .263 and Hosmer .286.

"I have virtually my whole infield back," Forma said. "The outfield will be the question."

None of Forma's current outfielders has varsity experience. Michelle Chaffin, a senior, was bothered by injuries a year ago and spent most of the season on the bench. Carrie Hayward, a senior, and Brenda Peer, a sophomore, both played for the junior varsity. Hayward hit .318 and Peer batted .268.

Although there is no real pitching depth, Forma is confident Hengy can do the job. Barden will also see some action on the mound.

"We should be in the thick of things," Forma said of the NSL race. "Our pitcher is good."

The question for RU is the outfield. "If they can come through like I think they can . . .," Forma said, leaving his prediction unstated.

WESTLAND JOHN GLENN

This is a year of transition for John Glenn. But that doesn't mean the team won't be battling for the title.

"We lost some All-League players — four of them," coach Koos said. That may not hurt so much, however.

"Last year we had some studs but no balance. This year we have more balance.

"If we win, that's how we're going to do it — on balance. I felt we were giving up three or four outs at the end of the order last year."

That won't happen this season, Koos feels. And, despite his claims, he does have some top talent returning from last season's 7-3 squad.

Four senior starters are back: outfielder Sandy Cockrum (.485 last year), shortstop Teri Chapo (.360), third baseman Gail Cooper (.326) and first baseman Dawn Boyd (.300).

Senior Stacey Handley and junior Cheryl Walters, both outfielders, also got some playing time last season.

"Our defense will be our strong point if we can get a second baseman," Koos claimed. Currently, junior Maureen Strehl has the inside track for that position, but Linda Toye is also in the picture.

The pitching battery is Glenn's biggest problem. Sophomore Julie Lowery is the present choice at catcher.

Diane Sierakowski, a junior righthander, is the Rockets top pitching prospect. Sierakowski started the last game of the season a year ago and fired a two-hitter in a winning performance.

But Koos is also high on sophomore Kathy Garrett. The Glenn coach called Garrett "a sleeper. She works hard. She's going to be awesome."

But her youth makes Koos cautious. His feeling is Garrett is "young and unpredictable", so Sierakowski is the pitcher he's relying on.

"Pitching and catching are both unproven," Koos said. "We should be .500 or better. It's just how much better."

Junior grid sign-up

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Football Association (PCJFA) will hold its registration for veteran players and cheerleaders for the Steelers, Lions and Warriors units from 9 a.m. to noon April 24 at the Canton High School Phase III gym.

All players and cheerleaders who participated in the 1981 season are encouraged to register on this date (April 24) so a position can be guaranteed for the 1982 season.

Mike Giordano

of the Cavendish North backgammon club

Mike Giordano, our new backgammon columnist, is a vice president of Cavendish North in Southfield, a backgammon club which opens daily at noon and stays open as long as people want to play.

Giordano, 38, has been active in tournament play for the past five years and says backgammon is a game that's attractive to the losers as well as the winners.

"It's easy for the loser to say he lost because he was unlucky," says Giordano. "There's no clear distinction between a beginner and an expert."

● A TIME FOR ACTION

White rolls a 6-5. On the first or second roll of the game, most players would automatically run a man from the opponent's 1 point to safety on the 12 point with this roll. Making such an play would be a mistake in this position.

Even though it is only white's second play of the game, it is not too soon to stop to consider the position and how it is likely to develop. If we do run with a back man, what will the opponent do on his next turn?

If he rolls well, black will make his 5, 4 or 7 point, but more often than not he'll roll some less desirable number and bring two men (including the man on our 11 point) into his outer table. These men will then be poised to build blocking points in front of our remaining man on the black 1 point. If he does this, we may roll a magical 8, 9 or 10 to hit him. But in the real world, we are rarely that lucky. So what can we do?

By anticipating the opponent's line of play, we may find a better play for our 6-5. By playing a 6 from the black 1 point to his 7 point, we can apply pressure throughout black's half of the board. That would leave us no better 5 than to play from the black 12 point to the white 8 point.

It is true that this man left exposed on the black 7 point is quite likely to be hit, but even then white can expect to hit him back almost half the time. Such an exchange would greatly benefit white as he would gain ground in the race by hitting the opponent's advanced man while having his own backward man hit. White also would gain a positional advantage since black is more likely to get trapped by white's board than vice versa.

This recommended 6-5 play often leads to a flurry of action, with both sides being hit and hitting back — a situation much to the liking of the player who is behind in the race and who hasn't gotten away with his back men.

The time to look for this type of play is when the opponent has escaped both his back men and you have two or more men back in his home table. If you also have the better board (more points built in your home table), that should provide an added incentive to shake the bushes a little and create some action.

Questions about backgammon can be directed to Mike Giordano c/o the Observer & Eccentric, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150.

Richard Watson

Grapes from Lake becoming popular

Ask any person interested in California wines today to name its major wine-growing regions and he/she will mention Napa, Sonoma, Monterey, Mendocino and, if sharp, San Luis Obispo. Perhaps a couple of others.

Chances are, one that will not be named, however valid, is Lake County. Ask the same question two years from now and in all probability Lake will be included, such are the changes about to occur there.

Located immediately north of Napa and east of Sonoma and Mendocino, the county at the turn of the century was a major vinicultural region. Phylloxera and, even more, Prohibition changed that and, until the early 1970s, Lake was a region of fruit and nut trees.

The onset of the wine boom in the early 1970s saw the beginning of viniculture there again. Some of the early growers initially banded together to form a cooperative, Konocti Cellars, an effort that did little to establish the creditability or prestige of the region.

THE WINERY that did the most to acquaint the world with Lake County in the middle of the '70s, and it continues today, is Mendocino-based Fetzer Vineyards. The latter half of the decade saw Fetzer providing releases of Cabernet Sauvignon, Zinfandel and Johannisberg Reisling sporting the Lake County appellation.

The vineyard's acceptance, especially for the first two, has signaled to the world that Lake County is coming back as a legitimate vinicultural area.

The late 1970s saw the bonding of a second winery in the area, Lower Lake Winery. Its limited distribution of blancs and Cabernet Sauvignon has done little toward enhancing the prestige of the county, but its wines have merit.

However, the event that will soon make people take notice of Lake County has its origins in the late 1960s. Then the Hawaiian-based family of Magoons acquired the entire Guenoc Valley, some 23,000 acres, just a few miles and a mountain range above Calistoga in Napa.

Using the consultation skills of the Raymond family (then of Beringer), experimental test plots were planted of Cabernet, Merlot, Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon.

IN TIME a winery was developed, one of some 54,000 square feet (described in a trade publication recently as "the best-designed winery" it had seen in "all of California") to accommodate its rapidly increasing grape development.

Application was made to the ATF that has resulted in the Guenoc Valley becomine a distinct appellation, the only instance in California where an entire vinicultural region can be claimed by a single winery.

The goal of the Magoons is to be in the 100,000-cases-a-year level by the mnid-1980s, adding Chardonnay, Chenin Blanc, Cabernet Franc, Pretite Sirah and Zinfandel to its repertoire from its now extensive plot of 250 acres planted to grapes.

Its first releases will be in the fall of this year, and it has already been signed by a national distributor.

Winemaker Orville Magoon (honest!) will make big wines in a big winery in a big way. He acknowledges that his domain already contains three microclimates that may in time be planted to some 10,000 acres.

It seems believable that the name Guenoc (Indian, meaning "land of flying wild birds") Winery will be soon one of those instant success stories later this year, forcing us to acknowledge that another valley name must be added to the more tradition names of Napa, Sonoma, et. al.

'Little Whorehouse' to play Ann Arbor

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," New York's hit Broadway musical, will play at 8 p.m. April 23-25 at the Power Center for the Performing Arts at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Matinees will be at 2 p.m. April 24-25.

The show will be the last in the Professional Theatre Program's "Best of Broadway" series for 1982. Tickets start at $14 and are available at the PTP Ticket Office in the Michigan League. For charge card orders and further information call 764-0450.

"The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" tells in song and dance the rousing story of a campaign to close the famous Chicken Ranch bordello in LaGrange, Texas. In reality, the spirited campaign led by a fervently civic-minded TV newsman successfully forced the closing of the bordello in 1973.

The production features a full cast of New York professional actors including Darleigh Miller as Miss Mona Stangley, the feisty madame who runs the Chicken Ranch, and Jason Byce as the vigilante TV newsman who campaigns to close it down.

When the show opened in 1973, Time magazine lauded it as Broadway's "best musical of the season." Writing for the New York Post, Clive Barnes declared it "a fun new musical, full of gusto and a wealth of comic detail, and music with a bustle."

The show is choregroaphed by Broadway showmen Peter Masterson and Tommy Tune.

Detroit-area writer publishes poems that recall his childhood

"Beginnings," by Jack Zucker of Bloomfield Hills, published by Katydid Books, 1982, is available in local bookstores. Lorene Erickson, who lives in Livonia, is also a published poet.

By Lorene Erickson
special writer

review

Poet Jack Zucker takes us home again. In his newly released first book of poems, "Beginnings," this fine writer takes us back to his childhood neighborhoods in New York City.

We meet his mother, grandmother, grandfather, the uncles who talk about politics, the kids on Isham Street, the rabbi, the grocer. We recognize Zucker's neighborhoods because they are also descriptions of our own beginnings — his and our own histories, filled with family and events.

In "Spring at Inwood Hill" he reminds us of the perils of growing up.

Hunted like a rabbit through the thicket of streets
I played stickball near home for the dubious comfort of bleeding among friends.

In his title poem, "Beginnings," Zucker describes his family history and concludes with these powerful lines about his mother, pulling into the present all the influences our past holds over us:

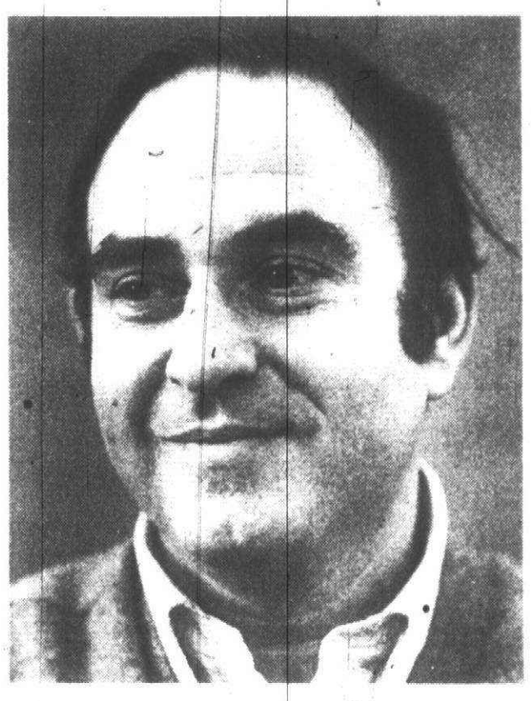

. . . your face, your beaming face at twenty,
glares down at me through years, months, weeks — confusions of time — and tells me that your past, your helpless past, is also mine.

In "Grandfather Flexo," the narrator says, "Lies hold us together/like bandages." Zucker's poems clearly show us truths — transformed by an adult vision. His remembrances are not softened by nostalgia.

"Beginnings" is not only a collection of poems of real place as described in "Hags on the Inwood Stoops," where the narrator states, "I return to the land of my bitter childhood/and look for the women, the biddies, the stolid,/squatting out the day on stoops of stone."

Zucker also writes of dream places. He returns to "Durer's Hill" where the places of childhood take on the quality of a surreal landscape, where the hill is ringed with "Trees so blue, they taste of violet."

"House with Five Pillars" is a dream where a female figure "pulls you in, you/cannot resist. The doorway/shines, it opens, receives you,/ the wild air begins/ to sing. You stumble/ past her. She pulls you in." The dream blends childhood and present, wife and mother.

Jack Zucker graduated from City College of New York and received his master's degree in English from New York University in 1961. Before coming to Michigan, he was on the faculty of Phillips Academy. He has reviewed both poetry and photography for the Observer & Eccentric.

Zucker currently teaches at Roeper City and Country School, Bloomfield Hills. He has received prizes from the Poetry Society of America, the New England Poetry Club and a fellowship to the Macdowell Colony. His poems have appeared in Esquire, Poetry Northwest, Literary Review and Southern Poetry Review.

Puck (Robert Cicchini of Redford) casts a magical spell over the Fairy Queen Titania (Sheri Akey of Livonia) and Bottom (Tom Kammer of Royal Oak).

Mendelssohn music heightens comedy

Shakespeare's romantic comedy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mendelssohn's famous music for the play, opens April 23 for a two-wee run at Wayne State University's Bonstelle Theatre in Detroit.

Performances will be at 8:30 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays. Tickets and information are available from the WSU theater box office (phone 577-3010) at Cass and Hancock.

Leading the cast are Sheri Akey of Livonia as Titania, Mark Corkins of Franklin as Oberon, Robert Cicchini of Redford as Puck, Tom Kammer of Royal Oak as Bottom, Marc Ciokajlo of Detroit as Lysander, Ann Klautsch of Phoenix, Ariz., as Hermia, Edward Nahhat of Royal Oak as Demetrius and Sheri Nichols of Kalamazoo as Helena.

The play, which was Shakespeare's first great success in romantic comedy, takes place in a moonlit wood near Athens. Four confused young lovers, conniving sprites and a company of unlikely actors become intertwined under the mischievous spells of the Fairy King Oberon and his servant Puck.

"Captains Courageous" (1973), 7 p.m. today at the Avon Township Public Library, 210 W. University, Rochester, phone 651-1426, free. Running time 116 minutes.

They curled Spencer Tracy's hair for his portrayal of Manuel, a Portuguese fisherman in this film from a Kipling story, and Tracy thought he looked like Harpo Marx. Tracy admitted that he couldn't master the Portuguese accent, and he presumed that co-star and child actor Freddie Bartholomew had stolen the film from him. Spencer Tracy won the Oscar for best actor for "Captains Courageous," and you thought you were surprised when "Chariots of Fire" won this year. Rating: $2.50.

"Born Yesterday" (1951), 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Redford Theatre, 17360 Lahser at Grand River, phone 537-113, $2. Running time 103 minutes.

Judy Holliday, who won the best-actress Oscar for this George Cukor comedy, was a combination of Jayne Mansfield and Loni Anderson — a dumb blonde, sure, but also assertive and quite self-assured. Broderick Crawford, as an upwardly mobile crook who hires a tutor (William Holden) to teach his mistress some class, is the real boob in this film written by Garson Kanin. Holiday and Crawford are superb together, and Holden plays the debonair teacher with an understated malaise that's either bad acting or curious direction. Rating: $3.35.

"Captain Blood" (1935), 12:25 Friday night on Ch. 50. Originally 99 minutes.

David Niven writes of his old friend Flynn, "Humility was a word unknown to Errol. He became a big star overnight with his first Hollywood superproduction, 'Captain Blood,' but it never crossed his mind that others — the producer, the director, the writers, the technicians, and above all, the publicity department — might have had a hand in his success." A typical Australian. Be that as it may, Flynn was in, and "Captain Blood" brought together the team of director Michael Curtiz, foes Flynn and Basil Rathbone, the romantic interest Olivia de Havilland, as well as film composer Erich Wolfgang Korngold, for the first time. Rating: $2.95.

"The Big Mouth" (1967), 1 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 50. Originally 107 minutes.

"Hilarious comedy about a fisherman who assumes the role of an eccentric millionaire in order to locate a fortune in stolen diamonds." Directed by, and starrring, Jerry Lewis. Rating: Directed by, and starring, Jerry Lewis.

Schoolcraft College owns its own piano

Ownership of the Steinway Concert Grand Piano, purchased for $17,280 by the Schoolcraft College Foundation in 1979, has been officially transferred to the Livonia college.

The piano was available for use by the college while the foundation retired the loan taken out on it. The foundation's board of governors voted last month, after the loan was paid, to transfer official ownership of the piano to the college.

Schoolcraft College President Richard W. McDowell extended thanks of the entire college for the gift and expressed hopes that the foundation will continue to conduct projects to benefit Schoolcraft and its students.

Fund-raising efforts by the foundation to retire the piano loan included benefit performanes, dinner-dances, and a lease agreement under which the college paid a monthly fee for use of the piano.

The Schoolcraft Foundation is a nonprofit corporation created by friends of the college and committed to raising endowment funds and accepting private donations or deferred giving to support the mission of the college.

Persons who want to learn more about the foundation or wish to purchase a membership should contact the president's office at 591-6400, ext. 212. Schoolcraft College is at 18600 Haggerty between Six and Seven Mile roads.

lawns

It's not too early to begin planning for a good lawn

If you want a thick, green, healthy lawn this year, the time to get started is right now.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, late winter or early spring is an excellent time for an application of lime. The freezing and thawing that takes place at this time of year helps the lime penetrate better into the soil. So if it's been five years or more since your lawn was last limed, now is an ideal time to do it.

It's also not too early to plan an overall program of lawn improvement and maintenance. A useful guide is the booklet, "Spring Lawn Care." It's free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 537K, Pueblo, CO 81009.

Almost every lawn can benefit from a spring treatment of fertilizer. But make sure it's a light application no more than 5-10 pounds of fertilizer per 1,000 square feet. Once warm weather returns, a certain amount of natural fertilizer will become available through the breakdown of dead leaves and grass roots. The combination of this natural material and what you apply could overstimulate your grass with nitrogen, leaving it more susceptible to fungus diseases.

Rolling in the early spring can help firm up the soil around grass plants if it's "heaved." Remeber, though, that this can only smooth out surface irregularities it's not a means of leveling your whole lawn. Roll when the soil is moist, but not soggy.

You can prevent crabgrass from sprouting with a number of commercially available products, provided your timing is right. The best time is when forsythia bushes start to drop their petals.

If a completely new lawn is what you need, you may want to save yourself some frustration by just planting a temporary one. This really isn't the best time of year for perennial grasses to get established. Ryegrass, though, will grow well and look fine until fall. Then you can rework the area and replant it with the kind of grass you'll want to keep permanently.

And whatever condition your lawn is in, mow it early without waiting for every last patch of it to reach its normal cutting height. Then keep on mowing frequently. You'll take off a smaller portion of the leaf each time, which reduces the shock to the plant.

Try painting to create a 'new' room

In these days of high inflation, many of us are hesitant to redecorate our homes for fear of having to spend a lot of money. But there are affordable ways to give a room a totally new look without structural changes or buying all new furnishings.

By clearly defining your decorating objective, carefully studying the rooms you want to redecorate and by logically selecting your color schemes, you can economically create a "new" room with paint.

A step-by-step paint redecorating process is explained in the interview with Domenico Mortellito, a scuptor, muralist, painter, architectural designer, graphic desinger, lecturer and writer:

I want to redecorate a room in my home. Where do I start?

The first thing to consider is the purpose of that room. Will it be used for eating, sleeping, watching television, washing clothes or just socializing? The funetion of the room will affect the furniture arrangement, lighting and your choice of color.

How does the size of a room affect decorating decisions?

Both the size of the room and the amount of light in the room will largely determine the colors you choose in decorating. Dark colors will make a room look smaller. They require more light or they will appear to close in on you. On the other hand, lighter colors create an airy, spacious effect and do not require as much lighting to balance the room for a more comfortable atmosphere.

How does the lighting in the room affect decorating decisions?

Lighting has a tremendous effect on how your colors look. In addition, it will make a difference if the predominant light in the room is sunlight, incandescent light or flourescent. Sunlight tends to give off a yellowish cast and is considered "warm" light. The same is true bf incandescent light. Flourescent lighting will give a bluish cast and is considered "cool."

When choosing your color scheme, be sure to look at your selections under all lights, but more important, study those selections under the lighting most prevalent in the room you are decorating.

I really love my carpeting, furnishings and draperies and have made a large investment in them. How can I change the look of the room and be able to keep them?

Change the color of the room. The easiest and most economical way to do this is with paint.

How do I know what color to paint the walls?

Look for the dominant color in the room furnishings. Single it out and chooe either a different color which will complement it or a different shade of that dominant color.

It is much more difficult to try to match muted colors in your furnishings or to try and "bring out" a certain color by painting the walls in it. Matching the dominant color is much simpler. Once you have determined the other factors we have talked about such as the purpose of the room, the lighting and size of the room, it will become obvious to you which colors will match the dominant one.

All of the ceilings in my home are white. I want to create a dramatic effect by painting them a different color. What would you suggest?

The color of the ceiling will affect the appearance of size in the room. For example, if you choose a dark color for the ceiling (darker than the walls) it would tend to draw the walls closer together and focus attention to the center of the room.

The most important thing to remember about a ceiling is that it should balance a room. You can paint it almost any color except one which would totally clash with your walls and produce a jarring effect. You don't want your ceiling color to complete with the wall color you want it to "go with" the wall color.

I have beautiful hardwood floors. What wall colors would best complement them?

Many hardwood floors possess their own deep coloring so you wouldn't want to paint your walls in an equally intense or bright color. If you have dark hardwood floors, the powdered blues, greens or peaches look good. Also, a dusty buff color goes extremely well. It's only with light colored wood floors that you can get away with a bright, contrasting color for your walls.

Should I paint floor, ceiling and chair rails molding different colors than the walls?

Painting molding or trim a contrasting color to walls is a decorating technique used to give a room more life. Essentially, you are adding another decoration to the room, just as if you added another piece of furniture.

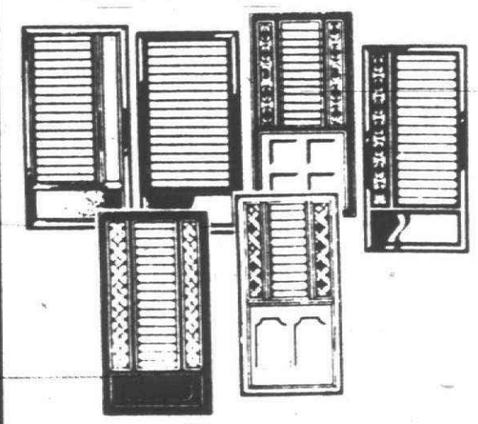

The opposite effect is achieved by painting molding the same color as the walls. If you would rather not have the molding noticed, or want to create a calm, serene atmosphere, blend it into the walls by painting it the same color.

I want to accent a beautiful baby grand piano in my living room. How would I do this with paint?

You can create a setting for a beautiful piece of furniture or artwork by painting one wall in the room an accent color and placing the object you want noticed against it. The accent wall should be two to three shades darker than the other walls in the room.

One thing to remember: You can put any color anywhere if you like but it is most important that all your colors blend together harmoniously for the best decorating effects.

lawns

Seeding, weeding, raking and mowing: Gee, isn't grass just loads of fun?

Here are some of the kinds of questions asked about lawn care.

What causes irregular patches of matted, browned-out grass in the spring?

It is probably damage from a disease called snow mold fungus. Take a brush or a flexible rake and lightly break up the matted grass enough to allow air to circulate and sunlight to reach the crown of the grass plants. Then feed the grass with a slow-release fertilizer that will provide the nutrients needed for sustained feeding and vigorous growth. Much of the grass will probably recover by mid-spring or early summer. Damage can be avoided in the future by using a fertilizer in the fall which contains a lawn disease preventer.

I have to seed this spring. How can I prevent weeds?

You should fertilize at the same time you seed, so use a fertilizer that also contains a crabgrass preventer; it will keep the crabgrass from sprouting. Be sure to use the kind that won't harm your seed. Most broadleaf weeds cannot be prevented but must be controlled while they are growing. To control broadleaf weeds, wait until the new grass seedlings have been mowed at least four times. Then fertilize with a combination product that also controls actively growing dandelions and other broadleaf weeds.

How soon can I mow my lawn after I have seeded?

Plan on mowing a newly planted lawn as soon as the grass is about two inches high, cutting it back to about 1½ inches. If you have seeded in order to thicken a lawn, go ahead and mow whenever the grass needs it. The mower will not harm the seed you have planted.

When can I dethatch my lawn?

The recommended times for dethatching (removing some of the matted dead grass that collects in a lawn) are spring or early fall. This spring, wait until your grass has begun to grow and has been mowed a few times. There should be some moisture in the soil, but the lawn should not be soggy, which can cause a thatching machine to tear out too much of the desirable grass.

How long does it take seed to germinate?

There is no definite time because it depends on the type of seed, the warmth of the soil and the moisture in it. For seed to germinate, there must be both adequate moisture and a soil temperature of 55 degrees or above. Without both factors together, the seed will not germinate well.

When is the best time to use a weed control?

Broadleaf weeds can be controlled whenever they are in active growth — from spring through fall (except when seeding).

My grass is quite shallow-rooted, and when I rake it in the early spring large pieces of it come loose from the soil. Why?

Very often, grass is shallow-rooted when it is growing in a shady area or when it must compete with tree roots for the available moisture and nutrients. Avoid severe raking. If possible, trim the trees to allow more sunlight to reach the grass. Follow a good fertilizing and watering program to help the grass compete with the trees for moisture and nutrients.

My grass is going to seed. Can I mow it? Will the seed help to thicken the lawn?

The grass is probably bluegrass. This condition occurs in the spring as part of the normal growing pattern of bluegrass. It is temporary and should last only a few weeks. The seed heads are of little or no value. A sharp and properly adjusted mower will cut these stems. Rake or sweep them up.

I have brown circular spots in my lawn this spring, most of which are only three to six inches in diameter. What are they?

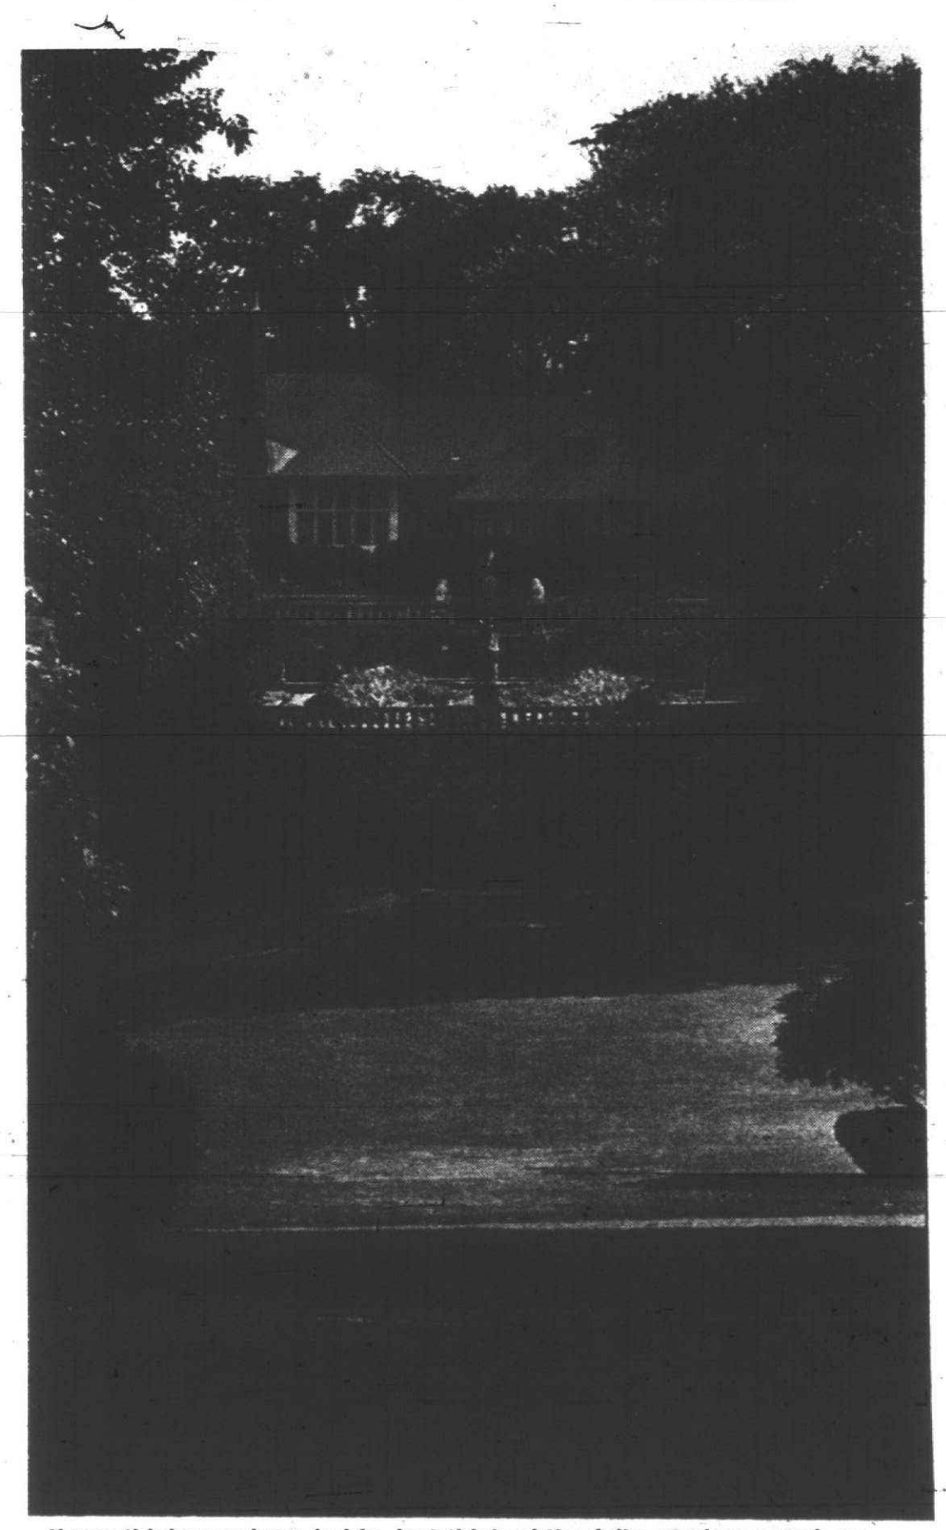

They are probably from the urine deposits of dogs. Flood the area with water to wash the deposits through the soil. Repair the scar with sod or seed.

I have isolated clumps of coarse grass growing in my lawn which have lived over the winter. What can I do about them?

These are perennial grasses which do not die over the winter. There is no product which will eliminate these clumps without destroying other grasses as well. They should be removed physically or spot treated with a nonselective weed control. The spot can then be reseeded or sodded.

Should I roll my lawn this spring?

Rolling generally is not recommended because it tends to compress the soil, making it difficult for moisture, air and nutrients to reach the roots. Normal rainfall and mowing will usually press clumps of grass that have been lifted by frost back into soil.

If you think your lawn is big, just think of the folks at places such as Cranbrook, who have more than their share of work.

lawns

Water, water, water . . . The grass needs water

How often should a lawn be watered? How much water does a lawn need? What time of day should the lawn be watered? What's the best type of sprinkler for watering the lawn?

There are probably more questions about watering than any other aspect of lawn care.

The problem is that lawn watering needs depend on many variables the type of soil, the climate, wind velocity, humidity, and the frequency of rain, among other things.

A lawn has to be watered when the soil begins to dry out, before the grass actually wilts. One sign is that ares of the lawn will begin to change color, picking up a blue-green or smoky tinge.

Another is a loss of resilience. If footprints make a lasting imprint in the lawn instead of bouncing back, it's time to water.

Soil conditions affect how often you need to water. A foot of loam soil will hold about an inch and a half of water. Sandy soil will hold about half that amount, and a clay soil twice as much.

Different types of grasses also have different water requirements.

THE WEATHER is important. More frequent watering is required when it's hot and windy. However, where there is ample summer rain, only supplementary watering may be needed.

Ideally, the root of grass should grow deep, so the soil should be moistened six the eight inches deep. This should take between one and two inches of water of the lawn surface. The average lawn will use up this amount of water in about a week.

One way to check if the water has gone down to six to eight inches is to wait 12 hours and then simply poke a screw-driver into the ground. If it penetrates that distance, the lawn probably is wet enough.

Water should be applied as uniformly as possible, and no faster than the soil can absorb it. Dividing water into timed intervals may be helpful.

Sprinkle until the soil can't take any more water and then stop and give the pools

Before buying, decide what type is the best

Swimming pools are an asset to any home. Just ask any of the more than 2 million pool owners in the United States.

The most difficult task facing any potential pool owners is not deciding whether or not to have a pool, but rather what type of pool to construct and who should build it.

If family members swim laps for fitness or swim team practice, a long narrow pool with lanes may be the best selection.

Perhaps the shape of the pool will be determined by the existing landscpae so as not to interfere with gardens or trees.

In general, there are two basic types of pools to choose from — above-ground pool and in-ground pools.

Above-ground pools are normally constructed of a round or oval metal structural shell with a vinyl liner.

In-ground pools can be divided into three broad categories. Most popular are gunite or shotcrete pools. Gunite, a dry concrete mix, and shotcrete, a wet mix, are applied with on-site mechanical equipment.

The second category is vinyl liner pools, available in a range of size, shapes and printed patterns.

Fiberglas or steel pools comprise the third category of below-ground pools. These are prefabricated and placed in the excavated area by crane.

Before making a decision on the type of pool to build, be sure to check all city or county zoning laws affecting residential pool placement and construction.

After zoning laws have been investigated and the pool style, shape and locating selected, eligible construction companies should be carefully screened. Prospective pool owners should:

- Determine whether the builder is licensed with the state Registrar of Contractors where required by state statutes.
- Check with the Better Business Bureau to see if a builder has a good reputation.
- Ask for names of previous customers.
- Ask the builder about how long construction will take from start to finish.
- Ask what type of warranty is offered.
- Find out how payment is to be made.
- Ask for credit and insurance references.
- Ask if builder has a qualified service department

Before excavating, it is necessary to obtain building permits. This is the job of either the contractor or the owner as agreed. Ordinarily, permits will be needed for construction, electrical, plumbing, heating and concrete. Make sure these permits are included in the package price or there is an understanding who will furnish them.

lawn about 30 minutes to absorb the water. Then resume the watering until the desired amount has been applied.

EARLY MORNING is an ideal time to water. There are several drawbacks to afternoon watering. For one thing, evaporation caused by wind and sun are at a maximum in the afternoon.

In addition, local water consumption usually is highest in the afternoon, causing low water pressure and interfering with sprinkling patterns.

Certain areas of the lawn may need to be watered before others, such as an area on a slope facing south with maximum sun. Hand-watering isolated dry ares can sometimes extend waterings for a few days.

TWO PROBLEMS that result in poor water penetration are thatch and compacted soil, which actually can repel water and cause wasteful runoff.

Regular dethatching and aerification should be practiced to increase water penetration, provide air to roots. and aid in nutrient uptake.

Mowing lawns at recommended heights, which are higher in hot weather, also will help conserve water. Efficient watering also will help concerve water.

Efficient watering also depends on proper fertilization. Poor fertilization encourages weeds which compete with the grass for water.

Too much fertilizer can make the lawn hungrier for water and, in turn, cause thatch to develop.

Most types of sprinklers have some drawbacks but can be used effectively, provided the waterer knows how they perform and moves them around accordingly.

The sprinkler's pattern and rate of distribution should be tested. One way is to place evenly spaced containers on the lawn. Then turn on the sprinkler at the pressure you would normally operate it. After a set time, turn it off and measure and compare the amount of water in each container.

trees

Protect your investments

As conservationists are fond of saying, trees and shrubbery are an investment in the future. If properly cared for, they can last for generations, providing beauty and value to your property.

Just as you would protect other investments, you should protect your trees and shrubbery. And don't wait until you have a problem, such as tentworms or top-heavy trees that can't support themselves.

A regular routine of "preventive medicine" will make your trees and shrubs thrive. Pruning trees and shrubs and regular spraying for insects protect your investment.

Pruning does three important things for trees: It directs growth, improves health and increases production.

There are several principles to pruning that should be kept in mind. Primary, of course, is the question of when to prune.

First, determine when your plant flowers and on which kind of growth its flowers shoots — from the current season, wood from the previous year, or wood two or more years old.

You should prune plants that bloom on new shoots before the plant blooms. Plants that bloom on year-old wood should be pruned after flowering. With plants blooming on wood two or more years old, you need not be as selective. Just cut to shorten and thus strengthen the branches.

Other pruning guidelines to keep in mind are that pruning can either dwarf a plant or make it grow taller. Reducing a plant's height makes it denser and sturdier; thinning it produces a taller more open plant.

Strong light produces a thick growth of leaves and limbs. Two branches growing close together are in competition. If you shorten one, its longer neighbor will mature more readily.

In addition to imbalanced, overgrown trees and shrubs, insect damage can be extremely unsightly. Insects can also do fatal damage if left untreated.

Spraying ornamental bushes and trees will insure their safety against such pests as aphids, spider mites, mealy bugs and tent caterpillars.

Taking good care of your trees and shrubs by pruning and spraying them will provide great returns on your investment. You'll have beautiful, lush, healthy dividends every year.

weeds

Crabgrass: You can count on it every year

According to the frustrated home gardener, only three things are certain in life death, taxes and crabgrass.

Although it's a common nemesis, crabgrass is really no worse than any other lawn weed. A weed, in fact, is just a plant that's growing in the wrong place.

Crabgrass is actually a variety of glass. It is a narrow-leaf plant with a hollow stem and long narrow leaves with paralel veins. Much better known by name than by sight, crabgrass is very often confused with other weeds such as tallfescue, timoth, nimblewill.

Crabgrass is a summer weed, thriving where summers are quite hot and where the weather is very moist. It is an annual, meaning that it completes its entire life cycle in one season and starts anew the next year.

In most climates, crabgrass plants begin growth in the early spring and grow rapidly until heads form in the late summer and early fall.

If your lawn was bothered by crabgrass last summer, seeds left over from last year will begin to sprout as soon as temperatures reach 65 degrees to 75 degrees for four to five consecutive days.

You can prevent these seeds from coming up by applying a pre-emergent week killer one that establishes a short lived chemical barrier on the soil and kills the crabgrass seeds just as they are begining to grow.

Timing is particularly important. If you plan to do any spring seeding, look for a product, which will not harm germinating grass seeds. If you don't plan to reseed, a product containing Dacthal, is recommended.

If you don't treat your lawn with a pre-emergent weed killer in the early spring, any crabgrass on the lawn should make itself evident by the beginning of summer. Various sprays are available for the selective control of this weed and should be applied as soon as it is noticed.

A herbicide applied after the weed breaks though the soil is called post-emergent, and such products designed to combat crabgrass will contain DSMA, MSMA or MAMA (chemicals available in many combinations under several trade names).

As with any chemical product, it is important to read all labels carefully before using any weed killer. Follow directions exactly and try to avoid spraying on windy days.

The best way to be rid of weeds is not to have them at all

Weeds, once they're entrenched in your garden, they're hard to get rid of. You can spray them or dig them out, but that takes time and effort, especially to get every last one.

You may find that the best way to be rid of weeds is not to have them at all.

Today, a number of pre-emergence weed preventers are available. As the name suggest, these products kill weeds before they even break the surface of the ground.

Pre-emergence weed preventers come in granules that are shaken into or onto the soil.

In the case of a newly prepared garden, the weed preventer should be mixed right in with the fresh soil. For gardens that are just emerging, weed preventer can be shaken directly over some young plants like broccoli and cabbage.

Other plants, such as cuccumbers and melons, need to be more established with four to five true leaves before weed preventer is applied.

Once applied, garden weed preventers will provide control for up to four months and that's most of the growing season.

Among the weeds controlled are crabgrass, annual grasses and many broad-leaved weeds including common chickweed. capetweed, purslane and pigweed.

Garden weed preventers are available in shaker canisters that range in size from 1½ to 3 pounds. With one pound you can treat up to 250 square feet of vegetabel garden. You can also treat a comparable area of lawn or use the product around your annuals, shrubs and trees.

So if you've been heaping pounds of cure on your garden to get rid of weeds or spending time and muscle-power. This year you might try a few ounces of garden weed prevention.

Dreaming of that elusive perfect tomato? Keep working at it

The perfect tomato may elude even the most careful gardener because of the quirky behavior of America's No.1 favorite. But experts contend that perfection is not beyond reach, provided the gardener is willing to give tomato plants careful attention.

The six basic requirements for growing tomatoes are:

- A continuous and uniform water supply. Too much water can drown plant roots, especially if they are in heavy soil. Too little water can stop tomato production
- A continuous supply of nutrients. While the daily requirements are small, the nutrients must be available when the plant needs them. Following the directions on the package or bottle is vital.
- Air in the soil after drainage. The soil must be loose and friable to permit good drainage.
- Sunlight. The tomato should have eight hours of continuous sunlight. They can get along on less but probably won't produce as well
- Temperature. Most tomato plants need night tempeatures between 55 and 75 degrees to set fruit. There are some varieties that will set at lower and higher temperatures.
- Protection of leaves and roots. Leaves and roots should be protected from temperature extremes, strong winds, birds and animals, weeds, pests and diseases.

Can I improve fruit set?

This involves the shedding of pollen, which happens most abundantly on bright sunny days between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. When flower cluster are near the top of the plant, tapping or jarring the entire plant may be effective. To increase pollination from top to bottom, individual flower clusters should be jarred daily with an electric vibrator or battery-operated toothbrush. Midday is the best time for such attention because it's warm and the humidity is low.

Will sprinkling in hot weather cause leaf burn?

No. If anything, the plants will be cooled. The notion that drops of water on leaves act as a prism to magnify the heat is a myth.

Will pruning tomatoes help good yield?

On the contrary, tomato yields per plant may be lowered by pruning. Removing leaves or shoots does not conserve "food" for the crop, it tends to reduce the total food supply. Some pruning is necessary with certain methods that require little pruning.

Will crowding tomato plants reduce fruit size?

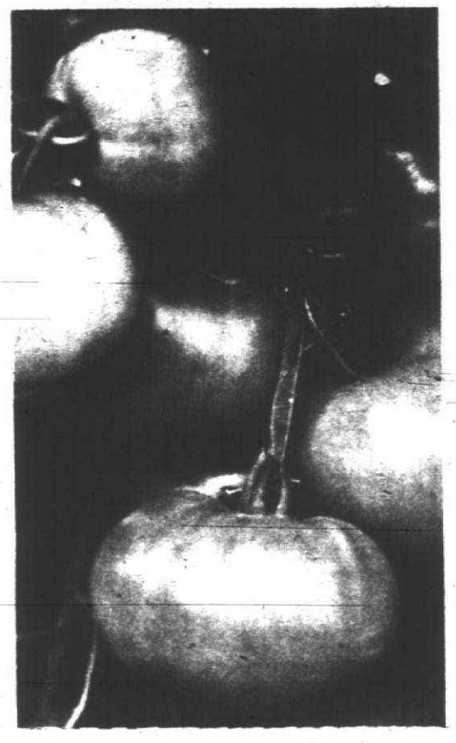

Not enough to be perceptible. Crowding of this group of vegetables usually reduces the yield per plant rather than the size of the fruit.

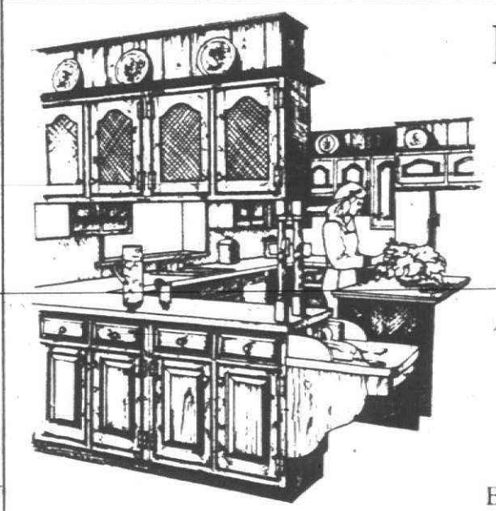

Is direct sunlight necessary for ripening tomatoes?

No. Tomatoes will turn color and ripen in shade or in the dark at proper temperatures. In fact, red or pink tomatores will turn yellow on the exposed side if they recieve too much sun, so some foliage cover is beneficial.

Should I save seed?

Save seed from some of the fruits if you want to perpetuate a standard brand of tomatoes that has done well in your garden. Hybrids are a different story. Their seed is genetically stable for only one season. You'll get a duplicate the first year but after that the seed is unstable and anything can happen.

Try planting annuals in unusual containers

If there was ever a "marriage made in heaven," it's the annual and the container. Annuals are fast growing and easy to care for, come in abundant colors and shapes, and are inexpensive for container gardening.

There's never a dull season when you have blooming annuals in pots placed along walks, patios and verandas. And though most annuals flower in spring and summer, you can extend their color into early fall by planting them along with perennials and other flowering plants available at garden centers.

Before you decide which annuals you want to grow, shop around for unusual containers. There's a wide selection available from wooden boxes to clay pots to multicolored plastic containers.

Your best bet is to select a variety of containers in different sizes to avoid confusion and give uniformity to your mobile landscape. Experienced container gardeners perfer large pots because they require less frequent watering and allow more room to experiment with flowering plants.

When growing plants in confined quarters, you're better off using a package soil mix that contians the right organic balance. Also make sure that your container drains properly. Clay pots should be soaked in water before you plant and the drainage holes covered with a fine mesh screen.

BEFORE PLANTING annuals in containers, water the soil thoroughly and allow it to settle. Once the soil has settled one to three inches below the rim of the container, transplant your annuals, making sure not to damage the root structure when you remove it from the nursery peat pot.

After you've covered the root ball, firm the soil slightly with your hands to remove any air pockets, and then water. Remember, a little extra attention in the first few days after planting will insure healthy annuals.

To get the most mileage for your efforts, choose annuals with the longest bloom periods. Select lower-growing varieties; tall-growing annuals can be a nuisance to stalk.

Plant a variety of annuals together to give your container a fuller effect. For an old-fashioned bouquet, try combining an upright zinnia, a busy marigold and a trailing lobelia for a pleasing combination.

Once you've started your annuals in containers, remember to water them daily during the hot summer months and use a liquid fertilizer at half-strength every two months to keep your plants healthy.

If you maintain your containers in top shape, you'll be rewarded with a display of exuberant color indoors and outdoors.

'. . . so there would be flowers to paint on rainy days'

One of the most famous perennial gardens in the world is that of Claude Monet, the French impressionist, who said he started it "so there would be flowers to paint on rainy days."

Monet's garden is in Giverny, 40 miles from Paris, at the home he and his family moved into in 1883. By 1892, the garden was so extensive it required a staff of six gardeners and was served by several greenhouses for starting flowers, according to Ortho's new book "All About Perennials."

After Monet died in 1926, his estate was abandoned for over 50 years and the garden fell into disrepair. However, his son, Michael, left the property to the Institute de France in 1966, and after years of restoration the house and garden were opened to the public in 1980.

The garden was immortalized in Monet's paintings. Shortly before his death, he said: "I perhaps owe having become a painter to flowers."

flowers

Annuals: They're easy, colorful and inexpensive

Annuals are the beginning gardener's delight: They are easy to grow, produce colorful flowers in abundance and are inexpensive.

The first and most important step in growing annuals is to prepare the soil for planting. A good way to condition your soil for planting. A good way to condition your soil is to add 6 to 9 inches of organic matter, such as peat moss, manure or compost, to the surface.

Next, work the soil with a shovel or digging fork and break it up into small paticles. This will allow the air to move more easily so your plants can drain properly and will get enough exygen for root growth.

You can start from seeds or buy started transplants at your local nursery or garden center. You should choose plants with compact foliage and good leaf color. Even through you'll get better results from younger plants.

Also, fresh stock is always better than plants that have been held for a number of weeks. It's a good idea to find out from your nurseryman the shipments dates of the annuals before you decide to buy.

Once you've selected your transplants, keep them well watered until planting time. An overcast day or the cooler parts of the day, morning or evening, in the early spring are the best transplant times.

Whenever you transplant nursery stock, keep these following points in minds.

- Make sure the planting bed is watered thoroughly.
- Don't plant dry plants. Water them thoroughly before removing from containers and allow them to drain 5 to 10 minutes.
- Take plants out of their contianers one by one to keep the root ball from drying out. If removing from cell packs, squeeze the bottom of the containers to force the root ball above the lip of the pack.
- Plant annuals slightly deeper than they were in the container; firm the soil lightly around them.

You might also want to protect your plants from the wind and sun with newspaper hoods. or commercially abailable hot packs for a day or two until they "catch."

Now that you've got your annuals off to a good start, keep them moist. A deep soaking is far better than frequent, light applications of water. Before you know it, you'll have a full bloom of color in your garden.

Perennials: Divide and conquer for best results

Dividing is a technique used to control the size of pernnials, rejuvenate and propagate the plants.

Most perennials tend to grow larger every year, usually by spreading and making a larger clump every year. The most vigorous growers can expand until they choke out other plants.

In addition, expanding clumps begin to compete with themselves. Those on the outer edge thrive in fresh soil, but those in the center suffer. The result can be a healthy circle of plants around a dying center.

As a general rule, fall-blooming perennials are divided in early spring to give them a growing season to re-establish themselves. Perennials which bloom in spring and summer normally are divided in the fall.

However, in areas with extreme winters where temperatures may fall to bewteen 10 and 20 degrees below zero, early spring dividing is recommended to protect newly planted divisions from the severe winter weather.

Gardeners planning to divide must first decide which plants they want to save, which they will dig out and dispose of, and which they want to replant in a different location.

The bed should be well watered a few days before dividing to make the digging and separating easier. The perennials should be pruned severely, to six inches from the ground, so you can see what you're doing.

The entire clump should be dug out as completely as possible. If the center has died out, the living portion should be divided into smaller clumps.

To divide a stubborn clump, insert two spading forks into it back to back, then press the handles toward each other. The leverage at the tines should pry the clump apart.

Holes left by the clump should be enriched with organic matter and a fertilizer with no nitrogen. One or more of the divisions can be replanted in the hole. Replant the rest elsewhere.

Melons: First key to success is not to rush

Don't give up on melons in the home garden. Home gardeners well into the far north can succeed with this often troublesome family if attention is paid to culture and selection.

The first key to melon success is not to rush the planting season. Both cantaloupes or muskmelons and watermelons are most definietly warm soil and air lovers. Since many areas do not have sufficient warm days to allow plants directly seeded to the garden to develop, get a jump on the timetable by using started transplants. These transplants should be purchased in individual peat or plastic containers so that roots will not be dsitrubed when placed in the garden.

To add additional soil warmth for rapid growth, mulch all melons with black plastic. Lay black plastic two to three weeks before planting to build up soil warmth in earnest. At planting time, cut holes at two to three feet intervals for cantaloupe transplants; six feet intervals for watermelons.

Look for varieties of both cantaloupes and watermelons with shorter season requirements. Hybrid cantaloupe varieties such as Ball 1776 will have ripe fruit in 84 days from transplanting. Another hybrid bonus is the genetic disease resistance to leaf problems.

When space is at a premium, trellis Ball 1776 during vining. Once fruit has started to set, cut mesh or nylon srips for pouches. Tie these to the trellis and rest the fruit in the pouch to develop.

EVERBODY loves a baby, but not enough people have had the opportunity to appreciate Yellow Baby, a short season midsize yellow watermelon which will succeed where the large icebox ypes fail. What can you expect with this yellow melon? Fewer seeds. much sweeter flavor than the icebox types and produce weighing up to 10 pounds at harvest ime.

Make sure to use a fertilizer developed for early rapid growth at transplanting time. These fertilizer bear high percentages of phosphorus and will have analyses printed on the package with ratios such as 10-52-10 or 10-52-17. To make your own organic counterpart, mix one cup of steamed bonemeal in a gallon of water, and use one cup per garden plant.

Although gardeners cannot turn off excessive summer rains, they can add moisture in periods of drought. This will heighten melon flavor. Either too much or too little water will take a toll on melon flavor.

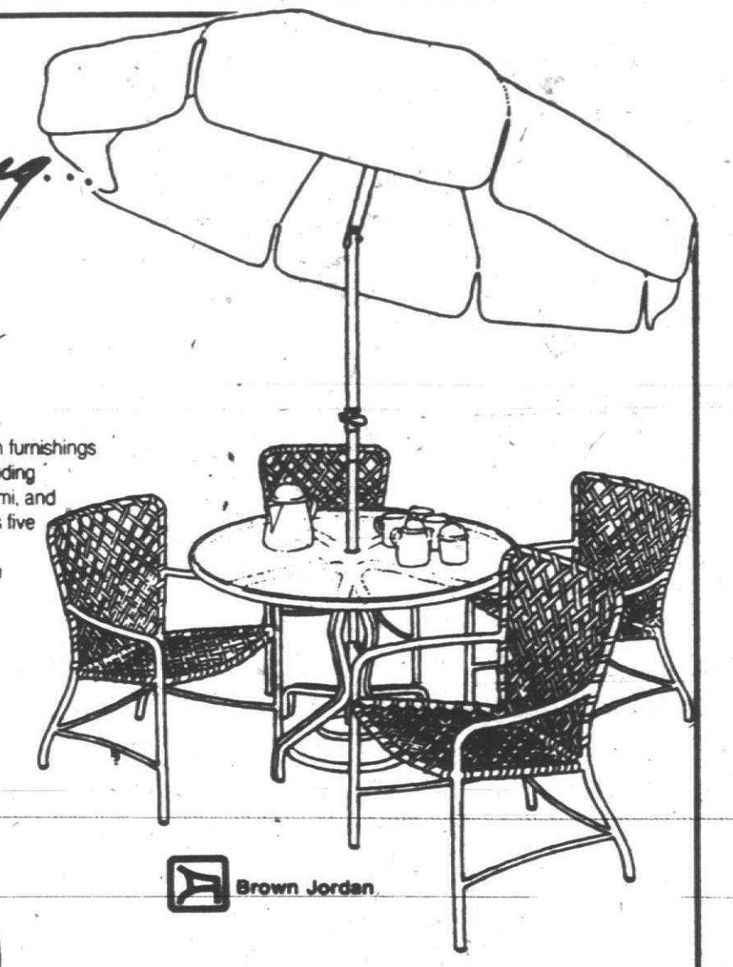

Two major pests trouble melons in the garden patch. Cucumber beetles can be controlled; Hungry kids aren't quite so easy.

Eggplant: New hybrids are a welcome surprise

The eggplant is catching on. This beautiful and versatile vegetable has finally won a place in the gardens and menus of America.

Few vegetables offer the culinary and display qualities of this richly-hued glossy fruit. After setting out in the garden as a trasnsplant, the eggplant will soon begin in production of lavernder blossoms. After fruit set begins, the rich purple eggplant remains a delight to the eye as it matures.

The versatility of this mildly flavored vegetable has won it a place in a world of recipes. Left to its own, the eggplant adapts to frying, baking and cooked for cold salads. When added to other fresh garden vegetables including zucchini, tomatoes and peppers, the eggplant adds a flavor distinely different from the commonplace. Try an eggplant lasagna, hamburger medley or ratatoille, a French classic dish great hot or cold. Get out the blender for a tasty eggplant/nut spread so good recipe books call it caviar.

While the eggplant's versatility is no surprise to the cook, hybrid eggplant varieties may come as a welcome surprise to the gardener. Plant breeders have shaved as many as 18 days off harvest time for this notoriously slow-growing, heat-loving species. Eggplants Dusky and Satin Beauty will be ready to harvest in 62 days after planting, while older varieties such as Black Beauty will need an average of 80 warm days 'till harvest. The development of the shorter season, high yield hybrids places them well within the garden conditions of northern growers.

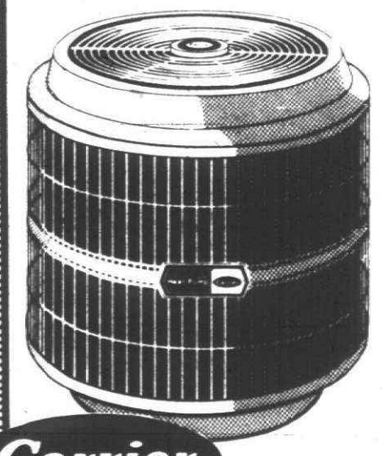

Six eggplants will stretch summer menus as well as add sparkle to prepared dishes for the freezer. This space-concious vegetable can be planted much closer together than tomatoes and will not need staking. Hybrid eggplany Slim Jim is ideal for container planters as small as 6 inches in diameter.

To nestle as many fruits as possible in the garden egg basket, try these additional cultural tips:

- Start eggplants only form transplants in the garden. Do not direct seed.
- Mulch the garden with black plastic to trap more soil heat.
- Fertilize at planting time, again when plants are half-grown and after harvesting the first fruit.
- Plant only after last frost date in your area.
- Harvest fruit when glossy and approximately 6-8 inches long. Use knife or pruning shears to remove.

rose variety will perform best under your particular growing conditions.

Begin by visiting public gardens where a wide variety of roses are displayed. Consult your local garden clubs or rose societies and call your county agent or wrtie to the State Cooperative Extension Service for lists of roses that grow well in your state.

You can cover the topsoil with mulch or add a few annuals to dress up the container and add color before the roses start to bloom.

Feed the plant weekly with liquid plant food. Start with half-strength until good growth is established, then increase to full-strength as recommended on the label.

The container should be placed where the bush will get at least six hours of direct morning or midday sunlight. Keep the soil evenly moist at all times during the growing season. Usually twice-a-week watering is sufficient, but the plant may require daily watering during hot spells.

Once you have mastered the basics of growing roses in containers, why not test your your landscaping skills and design a mobile rose garden? You might choose to use a long planter and a screen to display your climbing roses and hide a cracked wall.

Tree roses in square boxes add a touch of elegance to a doorway. Plant your miniatures in exotic hanging baskets or unusual containers, such as a hollowed-out log or a clay teapot.

THE VARIETIES of roses are endless; there are as many types and colors of roses as there are tastes. Once you've decided what bloom meets your landscaping requirements, consider which specific right splash of color aginst a plain brick wall, or a singel vivid pink shrub can add perfect interest to a lush green lawn.

From War of the Roses to your yard, roses are hardy

"A rose is a rose is a rose" or is it? Botanically speaking, a rose by any other name might be called a strawberry or an apple.

Rose, strawberries and apples (as well as almonds, raspberries and peaches) are all first cousins belonging to the biological family Rosaceae, all roses, from the most ancient to modern, being of the genus Rosa.

Roses can be found throughout history, appearing on the emblems, awards, currency and postage stamps of many nations.

In the time of Napoleon, the Empress Josephine paid special tribute to the rose, establishing extensive formal gardens at Malmaison, with planting of all the known roses of her day over 250 varieties.

Probably the rose's most famous historical role was in the English Wars of the Roses, when the House of York adopted the white rose as its emblem, opposed by the red rose emblem of the House of Lancaster, When the two factions ended their difference, a new Tudor rose (blending red and white) emerged as the national emblem of England.

THERE IS MORE than one way to plant a rose and more than one reason. Don't be a timid gardener and restirct your roses to the traditional "rose garden." Roses are hardy plants, far more versatile than they're often credited for being and can perform a wide vareity of landscaping chores.

Be resourceful and blend colorful hydrid tea roses with annuals or bulbs. Use an arbor of climbing roses to mask a dead tree or an unsightly wall. Line a front pathway with a multitude of rosebushes for a cheerful welcome home.

Often the key word in landscaping is restraint. A single, well placed rosebush can act as the focal point or a bold accent to a garden design.

A specimen tree rose can ofter just the Choose right container to plant in small spaces

People with limited space balconies, terraces or decks who want to grow roses should consider container gardening. Growing roses in planters is not only easy but also gives you the freedom to change the design of a landscape just by moving around the containers.

Many small-space gardeners recommend buying rosebushes that are already growing in containers rather than bare-root plants. Roses in containers have been conditioned to grow in limited spaces.

When buying rose plants, don't feel you have to limit yourself to selecting miniature roses, even climbers and trees, in containers.

Floribundas and hydrid teas do well in pots. Floribundas are an especially good choice since their flowers are abundant and most are disease resistant, hardy and low-growing.

Almost any of the hybrid teas, floribundas or miniatures can be grown as tree roses.

CHOOSING THE right container for your rose plant is an important consideration.

You should select a container that gives the root system as much freedom as possible. It must be at least 18 inches in diameter and 24 inches deep.

If the container is too small, the plant will become root-bound, causing defoliation, no floral production or even death.

Wooden tubs and boxes are your best choice since the moisture can evaporate through the sides and the soil stays cool. Porous clay pots also make good containers.

It's also important that the container provide good drainage. Holes in the bottom of the container are ideal. Bricks and a wooden "X" placed under the pots can also help speed drainage.

WHEN YOU'RE ready to plant your rosebush, cover the drainage holes to keep the soil from washing through. Then fill the bottom of the pot with fine gravel or charcoal, add some soil and set the plant at the proper growth height.

Continue to pack the soil, leaving a few inches between the solid level and the top to the pot for easier watering.

Squash: Productivity is rarely a problem

It's a fact. A few summer squash plants make a summer of mighty good eating. A garden full make the eyes roll, head spin and that recipe book with 999 ways to prepare squash get old in a hurry.

One way to avoid the summer madness often associated with squash overpopulation is to purchase your summer squash pre-germinated in peat pods or cell packs at your garden supplier. You can choose the number you will need for an ample supply. The peat pot is an ideal growth chamber for squash. No root disturbance need occur at transplanting time as both peat pot and seeding go into the ground. Avoid shock as much as possilbe during transplanting procedures for all members of this family, including melons, cucumbers, winter squash and pumpkins.

Productivity is rarely a problem with summer squash. Versatility in varieities can yeild a bounty of differing flavors and shapes, colors and textures.

Last year a bright yellow hybrid, Gold Rush walked off with honors as an All-America Selection. It's not hard to find Gold Rush at its optimum size of seven to eight inches; the color is a giveaway. Picked at peak, the zucchini-type yields solid-textured and fine-flavor fruit.

If green fruit is preferred, select a few started plants of zucchini. One of its hybrid virtues includes an open bush habit to reduce the seek and find so otten a porblem with this species Ideal size for this variety is seven to eight inches. Larger fruit of any zucchini rapidly lose flavor and texture.

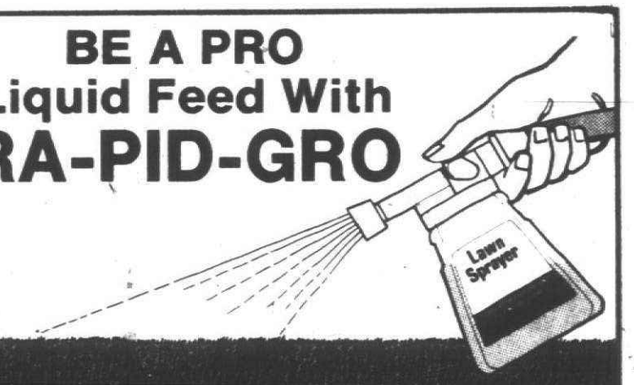

Long storing winter types can also be purchased as started plants for a stretched season of good eating without an expanse of garden space. Semibush Early Butternut ranked an award two years ago for its compact habit and wide adaptability to all regions of the country. Look for a solid shell for best keeping winter types. Improved varieities like Table Ace also have smaller seed cavities and less stringy fruit. Stack winter squash at a maximum of two deep for best deep for best winter storage.

All members of the squash family rely on bees for pollination. If the vegetable garden is sprayed with insecticide, make sure that applications are only made late in the day to avoid bee kill. Don't try to save your seeds squash for the following season. The busy pollinators may have carried pollen from winter and summer squash to pumpkins. These three vegetables will not evidence the cross-pollination during the first season. Seed saved for the next year may yield a strange new plant.

For zero population growth after you have picked all the fruit you want, try this tip: Pick the blossoms; dip in batter and fry for a new taste treat.

Cucumbers: Hybrids have plenty of virtues

The liberation of the cucumber is a story with a definite feminine flair. While the first blooms opening in traditional varieties are males, it is the separate female blossoms that set the fruit. Poor fruit set is often due to overproduction of the male flowers on the cucumber vine.

Hybrid varieties of cucumbers have more virtues than vigor, however. The "new" cucumbers also have disease tolerance in their green genes. Old-time troublers like mosiac, mildews and leaf spots appear less frequently in plantings of disease tolerant genetically programmed hybrids.

What else is new in cucumbers? Hybrids for postage-stamp gardens. Little Pot Luck needs only a 18 to 20 inch area to produce bumper crops of 6 to 7 inch fruit, in a record 50 days. This diminuitive dynamo does just as well in hanging baskets and containers.

Picking varieties can be distinguished from slicer by their heavy production of crisp, pickle-size fruit at one time. Be ready to fill the jars or crocks in 48 days when you plant Peppi.

Some important tricks for the best cukes involve culture. The cucumber is a warm-season plant. Do not transplatn too early in the season. The cucumber has a big appetite. too. Make sure you have plenty of organic material in the form of compost or well-rotted manure in your planter garden before setting out the cuke. Fertilize again midseason.

If nature does not keep soil moist, water your cucmber planting thoroughly each week. Make sure your sprinkler or hose delivers at least one inch of water or your cucumbers may end up with hour-glass figures.

Cucumbers may be the ultimate edible vine. Trellis your plants on fences, pole supports or even against the garage wall. If you have exta tomato cages, use them for the cukes. Gravitational pull makes straigther fruit when you use this suggestion from the cucumber bag of tricks.

Prompt picking is also essential for all types of cucumbers. A few overripe fruit will keep the plant from continuous production. This liberated lady also has another prejudice to dispel. Members of the cucmber family will not crossbreed with melons and squash.

Half of all households have gardens

More and more Americans planted vegetable gardens in 1981 as people tried to fight rising food prices and cultivate a rewarding hobby, according to Gardens for All, a research group with 50,000 members. The group commisioned a study by the Gallup organization of Princeton, N.J., to determine trends in gardening.

Findings showed that 38 million of the nation's 80.5 million households, or 47 percent, planted food gardens. This was an increase of 4 percent from the 1980 total.

America's interest in gardening has increased dramaticaly during the past decade. In 1971, only 25 million households had gardeners are tending fairly large plots. The average garden size was 547 square feet and the average investment was $20. The average garden harvested about $408 worth of food.

A spokesman for Gardens for All said, "This is an unprecedented increase," and reported, "the primary reason is to offset infaltion; the second is for the fun of it."

Gardening for food is only part of the total picture.The Gallup study showed tht 80 percent of all American households, more than 64 million, were "into" some type of gardening growing indoor plants, vegetables or shrubs and flowers.

Raising vegetables for fun and profit is a nationwide pastime, but is most popular in the Midwest where 55 percent of households had gardens in 1981. A total 49 percent of the households in the south had food gardens; 42 percent in the East and 41 percent in the West.

The 1981 Gallup study showed the greatest increase in food and gardening was among young, college-education people often living in the suburbs of growing cities in the Sun Belt.

Cole crops: Light frost increases their flavor

Broccoli, cabbage, cauliflower and brussels sprouts are called cole crops by horticulturists. Gardeners know they are cool weather lovers. Anyway you look at them or call them, the cole crops bring in royalities of flavor and vitamin content from the garden.

Early spring is tradionally the time to plant these highly rated, nutritional vegetables. Expect an equally good, or often better crop from transplatns set out in midsummer for fall harvest. Days and evenings are predictably cool by September; and the coles respond with top notch growth and flavor: Light frosts will not harm these hardy vegetables; in fact they will increase their flavor.

Cabbage popularity had to do with more than its versatility. Only 15 calories reside in each crisp, flavorful cup. A usable cabbage corp should include early varieties for slaw and salads as well as later vareites for making sauerkraut.

Hybird cabbages are available for these purposes. These stream-lined producers have been tailored for firm, uniform heads and tight production schedules. Most home agardeners will not need three full garden packs of seed or cabbage for long season crop. In response to this, greenhouse growers now prepare an all-season mix available as started transplants. Try 40-day crop. Emerald cross for midseason (67 days) compact heads, and Rio Verde, and 80-day late season vareity for superior preserving.

CAREFUL GARDENING means a bumper crop of broccoli. Transplants are recommended for the best crop of broccoli. Transplants are recommended for the best crops. Expect a winter's supply of this Vitamin A and D rich vegetable if you plant both srping and fall harvest. Cut center heads wne four to six inches in diameter for maximum production of spears from side shoots. Speedy broccoli crops are easy with short-season varieties, such as Green Comet. Only 47 days are necessary from transplant to production.

Days have also been shaved off cauliflower hybrids. Snow King is ready for the table 45 days after transplant, in contrast to many older, two month-plus varieities. Snow Crown wastes no time either. Fifty days from transplanting, you can begin to harvest. When 2 to 3 inch heads develop, remember to tie outer leaves over the top of the plant to keep heads white and flavor high. This simple but necessary process is called blanching.

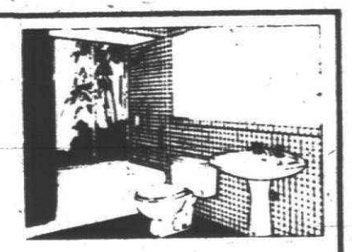

All the coles requrie plenty of moisture for solid production. This moisture for solid production. The moisture requirement is essential in all areas of the country where an inch of rain does not fall per week. Few vegetables repsond as vigorously to a thorough watering on a regular basis.

Ask you transplant supplier if transplants of these rewarding vegetables will be available for midsummer purchase. This increasingly popular sale time for cole crops come in respone to what home gardeners like best. Successful harvest and great eating.
