Program notes

Trudy Bradley of Westland gave her third and fourth grade students in Canton Township a special treat in their end-of-the-year field trip last week.

Bradley, who teaches at Field Elementary in the Plymouth Canton school district, took her students to radio station WQRS-FM in Southfield.

The purpose of the trip isn't just that Bradley is a buff of classical music, in which the station specializes.

Teachers raise concerns over testing method

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Test results to be presented June 24 to the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education will misrepresent the progress of district second graders because the test — designed to measure the success of new a teaching method — was given to a hand-picked group of students, according to some concerned teachers.

The test was administered in response to a board request for information on how students are progressing with the controversial developmental learning program.

Developmental education stresses individualized instruction to accommodate differences in student maturity and ability. Critics of the method say it works only when the teacher-student ratio is low.

TEACHERS ARE irate because students who took the test — about one-tenth of Plymouth-Canton second graders — were coached by teachers on "Form A" of the test.

'Before the report is accepted, I'd like to know if there was a true random sampling of second graders.'
— Sharon Belobraidich

Students who did well were then tested on "Form B" — which differs only slightly from Form A. Tests are being corrected by The Riverside Publishing Company, a test publishing subsidiary of the Houghton Mifflin Co., which issued the language arts exam, for $5 per test.

Hoben Elementary teacher Sharon Belobraidich asked the school board Monday to consider several concerns before accepting the report on the test results.

Eagle publisher charged in fraud

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

David Willett, owner of a publishing company that includes the Westland Eagle and Canton Eagle, is free on bond after being charged with bank fraud in an alleged check-kiting scheme.

Federal authorities accused him Thursday of shifting millions of dollars among checking accounts in attempts to cover bad checks.

Willett, president of the Associated Newspapers group, which includes six suburban newspapers, could face up to 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine if convicted of scheming to defraud the Wayne-Westland Federal Credit Union and First of America in Wayne.

Willett surrendered to authorities and appeared in federal court in Detroit on Thursday — two days after federal authorities searched the newspaper company's offices in Wayne and seized documents believed to be important to the investigation, said FBI spokesman John Anthony.

Willett, who was not required to enter a plea during Thursday's court appearance, has been released on a $50,000 personal bond. Had he been forced to enter a plea, he would have pleaded not guilty, said his attorney, Allen Early.

"Mr. Willett does deny the allegations, and we believe he will be vindicated," Early said.

Noisy planes fuel complaint

Janice Parker counted 20 planes in one hour flying over her Canton house.

It's not so much the planes that bother her.. It's the noise they've been making the past couple of weeks when they fly over her house south of Palmer and east of Sheldon in the newly built Riverpark subdivision.

"We already have noise from Willow Run (Airport), and I don't want this on top of it," said Parker, who

O&E gets new education columnist

John Telford — educator, school administrator and social activist — will become a contributing columnist beginning in this Thursday's Observer & Eccentric on the op-ed page.

The controversial Rochester Hills resident has served in a number of roles, most recently as senior assistant superintendent for instructional administration in the Rochester School District. From 1977-84, he worked in the Plymouth-Canton District as executive director of secondary education.

"Throughout his career Telford has acted as a thought-provoker, a defender of unpopular ideas, an advocate for justice and tolerance," said Steve Barnaby, Observer & Eccentric managing editor.

"We are delighted to have John writing for us. I know our readers will be intrigued by his approach, whether or not they agree with his views," he said.

TELFORD WILL join former Troy administrator James "Doc" Doyle on the op-ed page as commentators on the educational scene.

The 55-year-old Telford is best known for his annual school reform guide titled "Telford's Telescope" in which he took sharp swipes at racism and other injustices he perceived in the educational system.

He has come under criticism during his career for programs developed around diverse religions and for reshaping history courses with less emphasis on European roots and more on African, Arabic and Asian cultures.

As a young man, Telford was a prominent track star in the Detroit area, serving on the 1957 U.S. track team. He was a world-class quartermiler. He went on to coach several track state champions in Detroit while also teaching English.

CSI works on odor problem

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Compost Systems, Inc. has until Friday, June 21, to come up with a plan to correct the off-site odor coming from the facility off Michigan Avenue near Morton Taylor.

"We have to assess next Friday if we think what they propose to do will do the job," said Howard Murray, public information officer of the Wayne County Department of Health air pollution control.

Health department representatives met with township officials last Friday to outline what should be done to correct the stench that residents have been complaining about since it opened in mid-April.

THE HEALTH department had issued three violations for excessive odor against CSI, a private company that leases land from Canton.

"That's what we wanted from the beginning," said Allen Socco, a resident who lives near the compost site.

He said the odor hasn't been as bad last week as it has been in weeks prior.

Another resident, James W. (Bill) Mason, said he was glad to hear that a deadline will be imposed.

"This is the end of the eighth week," Mason said. "That's a whole lot better than what we've gotten. I'm glad the county is finally putting some pressure on (CSI).

"It is bad over here. It's not too bad today, but the wind is blowing the other way."

CSI should mix incoming yard waste with finished compost, according to one suggestion made during the health department meeting.

That would "help slow down the process," said Canton Clerk Loren Bennett.

Canton issued an ordinance violation for excessive odor Wednesday.

"If it's not fixed within a reasonable period of time, a citation will be issued which will mean they will have to appear in court," Bennett said.

Residents near CSI have taken their complaints about the stench in droves to Canton Township hall.

"If you knew when (the odor) was coming it would be easier," Socco said. But that depends on the way the wind blows.

CSI has been collecting grass clipping and other yard waste from Canton, Plymouth Township, Farmington, Farmington Hills and Southfield since mid-April. Compost facilities are considered one way that communities can reduce the amount waste going to limited landfill space.

The Observer was unable to reach CSI spokespeople.

the entire district," said Belobraidich, a 25-year teacher.

She also asked whether children who took the test were chosen "equally and squarely in each building throughout the district. I'd like to know whether any children were eliminated from the sampling for any reason, and if there was a pretest, Form A, given before Form B.

"These are four considerations we need to know about. I'm concerned about the results and I think we all need to be," she said.

Board President Dean Swartzwelter asked administrators "to come back to the board as soon as possible" with answers. The information will be shared with concerned teachers as soon as it's received, Swartzwelter said.

TRUSTEES LES WALKER and Barbara Graham said they also are interested in hearing responses to Belobraidich's questions. Graham asked that other teachers concerned about the test attend the June 24 meeting.

Shirley Spaniel, executive director of elementary education, was unavailable for comment. Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction, also was unavailable.

Community relations director Dick Egli said, "The board had the same concerns, and they will be addressed on the 24th. The report will address them."

'There is no recommendation given as far as how one chooses to structure the testing population.'
— Alexander Caswell

Alexander Caswell, assistant communications director for Houghton Mifflin Co. in Boston, wouldn't comment on specifics of the test.

"There is no recommendation given as far as how one chooses to structure the testing population. It's mainly more of a matter of how those administering the test choose to administer it.

"It depends on what your objectives are, what you're seeking to find out, and what kinds of information you're seeking," he said.

Usually, Form A is used to establish a baseline, and Form B is given at a later date to see how effective instruction has been in the interim, said Caswell. The two forms "as a general rule are used interchangeably."

State rejects claims of airport expansion

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

In it's latest attack on the city-township plan to use grants to buy Mettetal Airport, a citizens group claims state and federal officials have secret plans to expand the airport.

"Michigan Bureau of Aeronautics and the FAA will say anything to get their foot in the door," according to the flier passed out to township trustees at their meeting Tuesday, by Plymouth Township Concerned Citizens spokesman Robert Zaetta.

"I don't know what to say to a statement like that," responded Richard Jackson, state bureau of aeronautics assistant deputy director.

Airport opponents also maintain that when airport backers talk about acquiring land near the airport runway, they're talking expansion.

"More land can be purchased or condemned to bring Mettetal to required standards and it will be," according to the airport opponents flier.

"We are not trying to lengthen the runway," Jackson countered. He also challenged the airport opponents contention that Mettetal's runway must be lengthened, to meet government standards.

"There is no standard runway length for a general aviation airport such as Mettetal," Jackson said. Further, "We have not talked about condemning any property," he said.

JACKSON SAID officials are seeking to buy some small parcels of land across Joy Road from the airport, to make it more certain that no building will occur on land near the runway.

If owners won't sell, will aviation officials condemn the land to get it? "No," Jackson said, adding that runway approaches are already protected by building restrictions on the parcels.

"I don't think there's any doubt that this airport is going to be expanded," Zaetta told trustees Tuesday. "You're not going to be able to control the FAA and Michigan Bureau of Aeonautics."

About 30 airport opponents applauded his remarks. "I hope you'll take a good hard look at this issue," Zaetta told trustees.

"You're going to have some mighty unhappy people when the bulldozers start digging up over there," he continued.

Airport opponents in Plymouth Township have presented nearly 3,000 signatures from township residents seeking a vote on township participation in running the airport, just south of the township border in Canton.

Township clerk Esther Hulsing said her staff was about halfway through checking the signatures.

"We believe the expansion issue alone is enough reason for the trustees to drop this airport," said township resident Warren Dusbiber, to more applause.

Township Supervisor Gerald Law said he is continuing to learn about the airport issue, as he became supervisor May 1.

"I have had requests from trustees on some of the things that have been brought up here tonight," he said.

Resident calls air alert over noisy plane traffic moved three weeks ago from Missouri with her two children and husband, Tim.

"There's a safety risk, too," she said. "With that many planes flying overhead there's a risk. It might be a far-fetched risk, but it's still there."

Metropolitan Airport flight patterns were changed three weeks ago to distribute the airplane noise among communities, according to Wayne County Commissioner Bryan Amann, D-Canton.

"As a resident, I certainly don't want metro traffic with the noise pollution and fuel pollution," Parker said.

The question is: Are the planes flying over Parker's house from Willow Run or Metropolitan? Likely, it's both airports, Amann said.

Before the flight changes, some communities were getting between 25-30 percent of all the noise. And even now, Huron Township still has more airport noise than any other community.

"The plan was to try to spread (the noise) out to everyone," Amann said.

Parker is the only Canton resident that has complained about the noise since the change, Amann said. He added that no community north of the airport will get more than 1.5 percent of all noise.

When planes from Metropolitan are flying over Canton they are at least 6,000 feet — or 12 miles — high. They're "so high up that the noise should be minimal," said Amann, who was the "noise czar" for Wayne County before he was recently elected to the county commission.

"I've dealt with people in Dearborn and Huron Township and when they say overhead they mean overhead," Amann said.

Anyone with complaints about noise from Metropolitan Airport planes should call, 942-3573.

Publisher faces fraud charges

A preliminary hearing has been set for July 3 to decide whether the case should go to trial. However, Anthony said the FBI may dismiss its charge prior to the hearing and seek a grand jury indictment.

FOLLOWING A lengthy investigation that included tips from "confidential sources" who had firsthand knowledge of his business accounting practices, federal officials charged Willett in a check-kiting scheme from Jan. 1 to March 31 of last year.

The FBI accused Willett of depositing a series of checks drawn on the two financial institutions, though authorities said he knew there was not enough money to cover the checks. However, authorities said Willett shifted money from one bank to the other "at such intervals that it would appear to the victim banks that there were sufficient funds on deposit to honor (the) checks."

Moreover, FBI officials accused Willett of withdrawing from the accounts and using money for his own business, resulting in losses of $30,000 to First of America, Anthony said.

Executives at Wayne-Westland Federal Credit Union confronted Willett on March 29, 1990, after they discovered that "a check kite was ongoing with Willett's business accounts and that Willett's businesses make daily deposits of over $80,000," according to court documents.

WILLETT ADMITTED during the meeting that he shifted $37,000 and that his business makes about $35,000 a week, the documents said. Further investigation by the FBI led authorities to believe that Willett, during the three-month period last year, shifted $5.8 million of the more than $6.3 million deposited to his accounts.

An employee who answered the telephone at the Associated Newspapers office on Michigan, west of Wayne Road, said Friday that Willett would have no direct comment, and referred questions to Early.

Willett has removed himself from the newspapers' daily operations "until the matter is clear," Early said, and the newspapers will continue to be published.

When asked how the business community has responded to the news of Willett being charged, Joyce Wheeler, executive director of the Westland Chamber of Commerce, said, "It's just too bad, that's all I can say. I don't think that we would have any other comment.

"I hate to see this happen to anybody," she said.

Family reunion

Brothers reunite after 32 years

By Sue Mason
staff writer

John Gretzner and Dwight Stevenson have a lot in common.

Both in their 30s — Gretzner is 33, Stevenson 37. Both are clean and sober after years of drug and alcohol abuse. And both have found a missing piece of their lives . . . each other.

On Friday Stevenson met his long lost brother, Gretzner, at the former's Canton Township apartment. It's been 32 years since Stevenson saw his youngest brother, Billy.

For Gretzner, who lives in Holland, Mich., it was the first time to meet the remaining members of the Stevenson family, brothers Dwight and Mark and sister Pamela, and the woman who over the last three decades has been the common link between them.

"I'm estatic; it's been my life's dream to meet them," said Gretzner. "I knew I was adopted my whole life and I've always wanted to touch somebody who has my blood, just give them a big hug."

"It's something really emotional for me," Stevenson said. "We were like strings in the wind and I wanted to tie them together."

While the reunion is a happy occasion for the family, it's tinged with sadness. It comes less than a month after their mother Donna succumbed to emphysema. Their father William died of cancer six years ago.

STEVENSON decided to press his search for his brother following his mother's death. His goal was to have his two-month-old son Billy, named for his father and brother, "meet his Uncle Billy."

Gretzner, at the urging of his counselor, was going to take the summer off to prepare himself emotionally for the search. He had already made contact with the Adoption Identity Movement to find out about the process.

Each possessed an important piece of information. Stevenson knew his brother was adopted by a family named Gretzner who lived in Dearborn. Gretzner knew his last name had been Stevenson although he thought it was spelled Stephenson.

They also had their mother's best friend, Arlene Cook of Garden City, who, on her own, had maintained contact with the Gretzners in hopes of getting the shattered family back together.

The brothers last saw each other in 1958. Stevenson was four years old, his brother about eight months old. At the time the family was living in a home on Marquette Street in Garden City.

Their mother suffered a nervous breakdown and had herself admitted into Northville State Hospital. Their father was unable to care for his four small children and as a result they were placed in foster homes. Dwight and Mark went to one home; Billy and Pamela to another.

Here the family history becomes muddled.

STEVENSON remembers he and Mark being moved to several different foster homes during his mother's year in the hospital. Pamela also was moved to another home after Billy was hospitalized. The hospitalization, Stevenson was told, was due to his brother drinking a household cleaning agent. Gretzner was told it was because of abuse — by whom, he isn't sure.

After leaving the hospital, Donna began gathering up her family. With her husband and her two older sons, they moved to Westminster, Calif., to get a new start, Stevenson said.

Once established there, Donna borrowed money from a Baptist church and returned by train to Michigan to get her two younger children. She was able to get Pamela, but Billy remained in the care of foster parents, the Gretzners, because of complications from his injuries.

Shortly after returning to Westminster, the Stevensons received a court summons. The parents had "X amount of hours or days" to present themselves or it would grant the adoption of Billy by the Gretzners.

"My mother told me it was 48 hours," Stevenson said, "and there was no way physically or financially she could get back here."

The Stevenson family stayed in California until 1968 when they moved to Livonia. At age 17, Stevenson wanted to begin searching for his brother, but held off at his mother's request. Through the years, she reacted painfully at the mention of the adoption. It became something very "hush-hush" in the family, Stevenson said.

"MOM CARRIED around a lot of guilt for a lot of years," Stevenson said. "You could see the pain, that she blamed herself for this break-up. You could tell with Mom how dearly she loved him, but she was afraid of hurting him."

Stevenson decided to "reach out and touch someone." Armed with a telephone book, he called every Gretzner he found. He finally got Gretzner's mother on the phone and pressed until he garnered some details about his brother.

For Gretzner, the roller coaster ride began June 8, when his mother called to ask if she could give his phone number to his brother. It was a day, when the sum total of the excitement was going to laundromat and picking up business cards for the band he is in.

"It just happened so fast," Gretzner said. "This hit me point blank broadside. I had it in my mind that I was going to find them before Christmas; I didn't expect this. I'm still numb."

KNOWING THAT Cook tried to contact him several times, including Mother's Day, just four days before his mother died, but was rebuffed by his adopted parents, makes the reunion a bittersweet one for Gretzner. He had truly wanted to see his mother.

"Seeing my father wasn't paramount because I see him every time I look at myself, but I really wanted to meet my mother," Gretzner said.

For Stevenson, finding his brother is a dream come true. As child, Stevenson dreamed of a family life like "Ozzie and Harriett" or the Cleaver family, but "I found it doesn't come with wandering the Cass Corridor, it comes with hard work."

"My mother was my closest friend," he said. "All through life she enabled me, tried out her new theory of tough love on me and stood by me even in depth of my darkest hours and I know she wanted to be there for Billy, too."

For Gretzner, knowing who his family is is a dream come true. Since his brother's phone call he has been inundated with information.

"I had a real identity problem over the years," he said. "I always dreamed about this. I always wondered where they were and who they were. Now I know."

CRC ground breaking set

Additions to Canton's Recreation Complex continue.

By spring 1992 it is expected that Canton will have a six-acre lake, an arboretum, a sledding hill, picnic and play areas, a bike trail and an amphitheater behind the township administration building.

Ground breaking for this phase of the CRC will be 10 a.m. Monday, June 17.

Also, Canton trustees are looking at seeking financing from the state of Michigan Quality of Life Recreation Bond program for an additional phase that would include a community center building, featuring indoor recreation and banquet rooms.

Geake to visit

Sen. Bob Geake or a member of his staff will be available to meet with constituents of the Sixth Senate District on Friday, June 21, at the Canton Public Library at 1200 South Canton Center from 10 a.m. to noon.

The district includes Livonia, Northville, Northville Township, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Redford Township and Canton Township.

Students collect canned goods for needy

It's Christmas in June in the Plymouth-Canton community.

Stop by the Salvation Army on Main Street and you'll be convinced of it.

About 150 Close Up students from Centennial Educational Park collected more than 30,000 cans of food as part of a community service project for their hands-on government class.

Students who collected a minimum of 100 cans were able to opt out of part of their final exam, said Close Up teacher Mike McCauley.

Close Up students also volunteered 10-15 hours to sort and stack the canned goods, which will be given away to the area's 500 needy families.

COLLECTING THE food was the students' idea, inspired by a visit from Salvation Army social services director Kris Wood.

"Kris spoke to the kids about the 500 poor families in the community. The kids were surprised there were that many, and asked what they could do," McCauley said.

The students' actions soon showed what they could do.

"WE WERE overwhelmed. We had no idea what to expect," said Wood, standing amidst walls of canned goods at the Salvation Army's house on Main Street.

"At first it was slow; but pretty soon our hallways were filled; we had so much food we didn't know what to do with it. It was wonderful."

Salvation Army volunteer Ken Smith sorted and stored the donated food.

"I couldn't even get the door open; it's like Christmas in June," Smith said.

Community service projects will be required of Close Up students in the future, said McCauley and fellow Close Up teacher Bill Gretzinger.

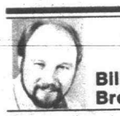
'Be nice;' it's newspapers' motto



Bill Bresler

By Bill Bresler
staff writer

Ol' Jeff is sort of a Renaissance Bubba. He has been taking a lot of heat from readers and staff, what with his views on feminism, liberals, gays, white whine, schools and child rearing.

HERE I AM, an officer of a labor union, in the abashed position of defending a manager, one Jeff Counts, editor of the Plymouth and Canton Observer newspapers. Forgive me, Saints Walter and Jimmy. I can't help myself.

Ol' Jeff is sort of a Renaissance Bubba. He has been taking a lot of heat from readers and staff, what with his views on feminism, liberals, gays, white whine, schools and child rearing.

Several weeks ago his column ran next to a letter to the editor. The headline on the letter read, "Editor was dropped on head." Jeff's long-suffering wife Cathy is offered sympathy by complete strangers. I guess I'm here to point out that he is accomplishing his mission: That is, to inspire spirited debate on the pages of this newspaper and in the community.

ONE OF THE problems newspapers face today is a declining readership. It's easy to explain. Your average newspaper is designed not to offend anybody. The old motto, "to comfort the afflicted and afflict the comfortable," has been replaced by, "Be nice."

Editorial opinions are wishy-washy at best, nonsensical at worst. Features are trendy with no substance. News stories are filled with excruciating detail only important to the official involved and the reporter.

Many of today's journalists are too close to the powers that be, from the Washington press corps to the publisher of one of our competitors who serves on the board of a political group his staff must cover.

Good Lord, just look what has happened in this community. The Observer, generally seen as establishment-oriented, endorsed the two school board challengers. The other, still referred to by some as a counter-culture, underground newspaper, endorsed the incumbents! Times, they have indeed changed.

Reporters and editorial writers need to write with passion, writing what will inflame both supporters and detractors.

One of my favorite columnists is Joe Sobran, syndicated in the Detroit Free Press. Most of the time I'm pounding the breakfast table over something he has written. But every now and then he writes something so clear and perceptive that I've got to see his point or even change my mind.

YOU MUST BE challenged by a newspaper. It should help confirm your own beliefs, help strengthen your opposition, perhaps change your mind. That's what Counts' columns can do.

No one will ever mistake Jeff Counts for Alan Alda. A sensitive, new-age guy he ain't. But he's on a roll and folks are talking about his opinions.

Ol' Jeff's columns are made of equal parts of salt, vinegar and bourbon. Try some. It's a great recipe.

Jeff Counts

MOST OF US spend a lifetime talking to people we don't really know or will never really meet. They are our heroes. They could be Ty Cobb, George Bush, Karl Marx or Oprah Winfrey.

We talk to these people because somehow, through their actions or words, they speak to us.

One of my heroes is Michigan writer Jim Harrison, a Traverse City area resident. He's a storyteller who has turned bar room bull into poetry.

His characters are real to me. Often they're Michigan bubbas who stumble around the state's woods and streams doing stupid things and often drinking too much.

They're slightly disreputable looking guys whose hair is a mess and whose body is usually bitten by mosquitoes. They've usually crawled out of a swamp or river where they've been after fish or game.

I PRETTY MUCH fit that description recently while walking into an IGA store in a small Upper Peninsula town, smelling of dead trout.

I was in quest of duct tape to repair my son's waders and beer to soothe my damaged ego. I had cleaned my son's fish, but caught none of my own.

In the parking lot I spotted another disreputable looking character. It was Mr. Harrison, climbing out of a red truck.

I tried to keep my cool. I had recently seen a picture of him in a Traverse City newspaper, posed next to a sign at his home that said keep out, call first, don't stop by to visit. It's the price of celebrity. He looked unsmiling and angry.

BUT EVEN with that in mind, I couldn't resist talking to him. I turned into a babbling fool.

"Mr. Harrison," I said.

"Yea, and who are you?" was his gruff response.

"Just a reader."

He didn't retreat. We walked into the IGA store together. I identified myself as a professionally trained journalist.

AN INTERVIEW? Well, sort of. As we walked through the store he covered everything from meat to Mennonites. And there were a couple of snide comments about Oakland County. But books weren't on the menu.

Harrison writes a food column for Esquire magazine and talking to him was like reading it. In it he writes about eating dinner with folks like Jack Nicholson.

"Just back from New York," he said, picking up salad, and passing by the meat counter. "No meat till Tuesday," he said, referring to his battle with gout.

"I'm trying to stay at 130, you look like you're keeping it at 120," he said, referring to his and my bulk.

WHILE HIS mind was on food, mine was on his books.

"I loved Wolf," I blurted out.

Like a cagey brown trout, he wouldn't rise.

"Great country around there," he said, referring to Michigan's Huron mountains northwest of Marquette.

I knew the area, and I told him about fishing the Yellow Dog River and staying in the hotel where they filmed "Anatomy of a Murder." He rose to that. And so we talked brook trout, not books.

THE NAMES OF rivers. He gave me a few to fish. Just names, not exact locations. I later read in one of his books that fishermen never exchange information about their best spots. It wasn't a surprise.

"I don't start mine for a couple of weeks. Too bug intensive," he said.

I didn't want to be too much the tourist or unabashed hero worshiper, so I went looking for beer. There was none.

"A Christian store," Harrison said. "Mennonites."

I BABBLED that I knew about the religious group from reporting in central Michigan and told him the story of how with no fanfare they sent a ship filled with food to Africa.

"And the French sent bad wine," Harrison quipped.

The line sounded familiar. Was it from one of his columns?

It made me wonder about the reputations writers have for being reclusive. Maybe it's because they use all their good stuff in their books and don't have anything new to say when they meet people.

HE ASKED about Oakland County, saying a friend was writing a piece about it for Detroit Monthly.

"Too much money," I said.

He smiled, and said: "Quite a place."

We parted at the checkout lane.

"Is the Fox River up or down?" he asked as he started to walk out.

"Not real deep," I replied.

AND NEITHER was our talk. I had hoped for books but instead got brooks.

But then again maybe that wasn't out of character for a man who probably writes for a living so he can have time for fishing. There are priorities.

Science is important

To the editor:

Thank you for calling attention to the way science is taught in your article, "Formula for success," in the June 10 publication. I would like to add that Eastern Michigan University recognized the lack of science interest in students and implemented intense science requirements for all elementary teachers.

I am an elementary teacher who recently graduated from Eastern and I have a science minor. The training I received was priceless.

Science is an academic subject based on experimentation. One reason so many students get bored with science is because they are taught what others have discovered.

I was trained to teach science by having the students discover on their own the laws of nature and how and why things work. When children discover a piece of knowledge on their own (through guided experimentation) they own that knowledge and will apply it to their everyday lives.

It is also important to emphasize that not everything has been discovered yet. There is still new ground to conquer. The combination of these two philosophies and a positive attitude toward science is the key to motivating our students.

Bill headed for conference committee after House rejection

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A school aid bill requiring local districts to share their business property taxes will be thrashed out in a legislative conference committee after being rejected by the state House of Representatives.

But in a key test vote, the House last week rebuffed a suburban attempt to strip out tax base sharing language inserted by the Senate.

Under the Senate bill, half the growth in commercial and industrial property taxes would be collected in multi-county regions and spread on a per-pupil base.

"A sneaky thing. A scam," said Rep. William Bryant, R-Grosse Pointe. "It's an incentive (for legislators) to vote less school aid."

"A Robin Hood bill. A double whammy," agreed Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford.

BRYANT MADE a long list of bad results that could occur from the principle of busines tax base sharing.

- "Tomorrow it may be residential property.
- "The next day it may be sharing between municipalities — we all need public safety and parks.
- "The day after, it may be all commercial and industrial property."
- Only growth areas will be punished. Bridgman, the state's wealthies per-pupil district with a nuclear power plant, would share nothing.
- His own silk stocking area of Grosse Pointe would gain because it has no space for industrial growth.

BRYANT LOST, 36 to 61, his attempt to strip the sharing language from the $3 billion school aid bill.

Opposed were Democrats William Keith of Garden City and James Kosteva of Canton.

Missing the vote were Democrats Maxine Berman of Southfield and Wilfred Webb of Hazel Park.

Kosteva, speaking for the House Democratic leadership, called the Bryant amendment "irrelevant" and said the conference committee should handle the matter.

SEN. JACK Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, a vehement foe of tax base sharing, said the conference committee may take weeks to iron out differences between the two versions.

Most likely leaders of the panel are Rep. James O'Neill, D-Saginaw, and Sen. Dan DeGrow, R-Port Huron. They also are the state's two most outspoken advocates of tax base sharing.

Faxon served on last year's panel and was particularly angry with DeGrow and O'Neill. The panel met only once for a few minutes on the final day of session, leading Faxon to conclude they worked together in secret.

So angered was Faxon that he has sponsored an amendment to the Open Meetings Act to include conference committees and their leadership.

Last year's bill stripped $72 million in categorical aid, a list of 19 mandated special programs, from out-of-formula districts. Some 51 districts are suing to recover it.

Next year DeGrow proposes to give back the $72 million in categoricals in return for a tax base sharing plan that will cost those districts $350 million over 10 years.

O'NEILL SAID he wasn't entirely happy with DeGrow's version of tax base sharing with its three multi-county districts.

But he said the problem is inequity — some districts have $8,000 per pupil in resources, others only $2,500.

O'Neill made two promises: The amount of business tax growth to be shared wouldn't exceed 50 percent, and residential valuations wouldn't be shared.

That failed to satisfy Bryant and the suburbs. "If Rep. O'Neill weren't to be chair of the conference committee, and if he weren't a co-sponsor of this scheme, it would be all right," Bryant said.

Ilitch gives Canton a slice of Little Caesar's

By Diane Gale
staff writer

It's what family empires are built on.

Loyalty, commitment and a never ending drive to make the business work.

Denise Ilitch Lites described the marriage between family and Little Caesar's Enterprises at the Canton Economic Club luncheon last week.

The oldest of seven children, Ilitch Lites said her parents Michael and Marian Ilitch founded the company in the late 1950s. This year the pizza business is projecting $1.7 million in annual sales.

"Our founder is an entrepreneur in the truest sense of the word," she said. "He placed a lot of emphasis on creative products.

"We love ideas. One of the reasons we've been so successful is that we don't deter creative ability."

She talked about the successes of the Fox Theater and the Red Wings, but her discussion always returned to the fun meal and late night snack that is satisfying cravings across the U.S., Puerto Rico, England and Canada. And sometime soon, Kmart shoppers can take a break with Little Caesars.

SINCE CUSTOMERS aren't "real loyal about pizza choices," she said, quality, price and advertising are key factors. In comes the slogan: "Pizza, pizza. Two great pizzas for one low price."

"We love humor — we think humor sells," she said before showing a Little Caesars commercial of a dog who barks: "I love you."

"The only disadvantage to humor is that it's risky. It can offend people."

That's just what happened with the company's most recent commercial dubbed "The never ending cheese." A man stretches the cheese throughout his apartment and when it snaps back it spins a bird cage sending feathers flying. Bird lovers called to complain even though a fake bird was used.

But not everyone is complaining. In a national poll, Little Caesars was chosen the second favorite among pizza restaurants. Pizza Hut was the first choice.

"We're not in fear of our competition," she said. "We respect them, but we're not afraid of them."

WHEN SHE speaks to young people, Ilitch Lites said, she tells them that if you have an idea, ignore comments telling you that it can't be done.

The Fox Theater is a good example of that, she said. Most people thought it would never work. "It ended up strong, financially successful and a wonderful way to give back to our community.

"Success is built on the fortitude of going forward."

Newly elected Ragan loses job at airport

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Stephen Ragan, new Schoolcraft College trustee, has been dismissed from his full-time job at Detroit Metro Airport.

But while Ragan said he was fired, airport officials said he was laid off.

Ragan, elected to a four-year Schoolcraft board seat June 10, said he was dismissed from his airport job two days later.

"I was fired," he said.

Ragan, 25, had been an administrative assistant to Lester Robinson, deputy director of airport administration and finance.

While reluctant to comment, Ragan said he was told at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday his services would no longer be required. Ragan said Robinson gave no reason for the dismissal.

"I WAS surprised," Ragan said.

Robinson, however, said Ragan was laid off, not fired.

"It is true that he is no longer working here, but because this is an employee matter, I really can't comment further," Robinson said.

Rumors surrounding Ragan's job status began circulating late last week.

Ragan said he "had no idea" whether his dismissal was related to his campaign for the Schoolcraft College board.

Schoolcraft trustees serve without pay.

There has been some speculation Ragan would take a job with new Wayne County Commissioner Maurice Breen, a strong supporter in his Schoolcraft campaign.

But Ragan, contacted Friday at his Plymouth home, said he was job hunting.

Breen, a Plymouth Township attorney, was unavailable for comment.

Robinson said neither the Schoolcraft campaign nor any future job played a role in Ragan's dismissal.

A Plymouth native, Ragan also serves on the city's zoning board of appeals.

With 3,179 votes, Ragan was the leading vote-getter in an eight-candidate field in the Schoolcraft election. He carried the Plymouth-Canton School district in the process.

He was initially appointed to the board by his fellow trustees in April.

Ending MET 'foolish,' Kosteva says

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Gov. John Engler would be "foolish" to end the Michigan Education Trust, says the lawmaker who sponsored the pre-paid college tuition program.

"I think it's valid for his administration or anyone else to evaluate MET's actuarial viability," said Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton.

"But the basic premise remains: With MET, we turn college education from a post-paid to a pre-paid program. We get parents to think in advance about financing college."

Two actuarial reports gave MET respectable ratings, subject to the uncertainites of politics. The MET board has not met this year, but the fund is the subject of much rumor in Lansing.

ALTHOUGH FORMER Gov. James Blanchard's name was on the MET program, Kosteva sponsored the legislative bill under which parents or grandparents would pay a lump sum into an interest-earning trust fund. The fund would guarantee to cover their child's tuition in a Michigan public college.

Now chair of the House Colleges and Universities Committee, Kosteva became the father of twins about the same time the bill was going through the Legislature.

Kosteva was interviewed amid growing signs that the Engler administration wants to stop new enrollments in MET.

State Treasurer Doug Roberts said recently that if MET continues to accept new enrollees, it no longer will guarantee full tuition. Instead it may offer a more expensive package requiring investors to pay federal taxes, Roberts said.

The 55,000 existing contracts will be honored, state officials say.

When the program began in 1988, the price was $6,700 to enroll a newborn and guarantee four years of tuition. By last fall, the price was $8,380.

KOSTEVA NOTED that "Engler is vulnerable to some of the pundits of the private investment community who have never looked on MET as favorable competition. They will try to undermine the fiscal assumptions that determine MET prices.

Deputy treasurer in the Engler administration is Gary Wolfram, a conservative economics professor and former Senate staffer who had been critical of the MET idea during legislative hearings. In general, conservatives say MET doesn't do anything that private companies can't do. They also feel Blanchard exploited MET politically.

UNDER BLANCHARD, MET assumed it would earn 9.75 percent on investments while tuitions would rise 7.3 percent.

In April two actuaries with the firm of Deloitte & Touche said:

- MET's 9.75 percent earnings assumption is "reasonable with no margin for conservatism."
- MET assumes that enrollees may tend to enroll in higher-priced colleges and built in a 3-percent cost "bias." But the actuaries found "no credible experience" for that assumption.
- "Due to the unique and unprecedented nature of MET, no credible statistical data exists for evaluating several of the specific actuarial assumptions . . . In addition, MET is subject to the influence of many outside forces totally out of its control — that is, state funding of higher education, demographic and population shifts, general inflation in the economy, etc. Therefore, the current measured actuarial balance is not sufficient to guarantee the long-term actuarial soundness of the trust."

LAST SEPTEMBER, the firm of Coopers & Lybrand concluded in its actuarial evaluation:

- MET's assets "are sufficient to provide the benefits under the contracts issued in the 1988 and 1989 enrollments."
- MET's methods are "moderately conservative" — a complimentary word among financial people.
- "However, because MET is an innovation, until the trust matures and a record of meaningful experience is developed, there will necessarily be uncertainty about significant factors that affect the solvency of the trust."

TIMING KNEE INJECTIONS — WHY NOT INJECT BEFORE YOU HURT?
"Doctor, I'm going out of town. Could you inject my knee now so I won't have a flare of arthritis while away?"
Unfortunately, injecting a joint that doesn't hurt is similar to spraying a hallway with a fire extinguisher today in hopes of preventing a blaze in the hall tomorrow.
The chemicals in a fire extinguisher act effectively only on the fire as it occurs. The same holds for the steroid medication in a joint injection. The medicine can only halt inflammation that is present now. The body removes the steroid from the joint in hours, no matter what the dose injected. Thereafter, prevention of a reoccurance depends on the body's ability to resist future development of inflammation or to overcome pockets of irritation as they develop.
Nor can the firefighter who uses the extinguisher to put out a hallway blaze state how long the time before another fire may occur. So the doctor who undertakes a knee injection today cannot predict how long the injection will prevent future flares of inflammation.
Joint injections are good procedures to give immediate relief from knee pain. No injection as yet can prevent inflammation from starting or protect against its reoccurance.

LOCAL DEALER GETS "JUMP" ON COMPETITION
"That's right", says auto dealer Lou LaRiche, "These are the Big Frogs of California. They have six-inch bodies and their legs are 18 inches long."
What's an auto dealer doing with frogs, you say? They will be one of the main events at Lou LaRiche's largest ever AUTO TENT SALE.
"The SALE scheduled for June 17th thru June 22nd will feature the best deals of the year on all our CHEVY CARS -CHEVY TRUCKS - GEOS AND SUBARUS," LaRiche exclaimed. Starring on Friday, June 21st (at 7:30 p.m.), and Saturday, June 22nd (at 11:00 a.m.), will be the "Croakmaster" and his jumpy friends, the frogs.
The "Croakmaster," John Close, his wife, "Lily Pad," and a few "Frogettes" who measure the jumps and keep the frogs from jumping too far away have "hopped" all over the country with his slippery show. "You gotta like frogs," the Croakmaster says. "They make you hoppy." Kids and adults, every one from age 8 to 80 will enjoy this wart-filled event.
"You must first catch the frog to enter the jumping contest," explains the Croakmaster. "That can be difficult. These frogs can jump over 6 feet."
"Once you have your frog, get to know it," says Lily Pad. Then it's off to the starting line. Each entrant is allowed three leaps. Winners of the jumping event win a frog T-shirt. There will also be human croaking competition, frog stories, frog jokes and lots of fun.

Gazpacho: the pot that cools

The last place I want to be on a hot, sultry summer's eve is slaving over a hot stove in the kitchen. If you feel the same, have you given any thought to a large, cooling pot of gazpacho for dinner?

For the uninitiated, gazpacho is a one-pot dinner, filled with a melange of the produce store's best offerings, topped off with a chilly tomato base, olive oil and a pinch of herbs and spices. To me, a chilled pot of gazpacho is like a sprinkler to a 4-year-old or a lawn chair on Belle Isle to a senior citizen.

Gazpacho is easily prepared and can be as basic as a chopped cucumber, a bunch of green onions and a seeded and chopped tomato. Burly diners can opt for the addition of some cooked beans or legumes. Culinarians can include micro-diced bits of purple onion and a hefty splash of wine. Once touted as a vegetarian's delight, this so-called soup can chill the sweaty brow of anyone within a nose shot of some fresh chopped cilantro and a sprinkling of crushed coriander seeds.

The difference between a good gazpacho and a great one lies in its base. Betty Crocker cooks are happy with a large can of tomato juice. Health nuts can the basic juice and reach for a can of V-8. Yours truly suggests a cool blend of a splash of cheap dry wine and an equal amount of imported olive oil and the juice of a fresh lemon. Better yet would be a jar of Momma's famed stewed tomatoes, sent for a quick whirl in the blender.

PURISTS MIGHT choose to strain the broth and then slowly heat it, with the requisite herbs and spices, only to chill once again. My thoughts on that: "Why make more dishes to wash!" Gazpacho is a peasant meal, usually made during the dog days of summer. If President and Mrs. Bush decide to dine at Chateau Janes, this procedure might be in order, but for the time being, the sweat continues to drip, and I'm opting for the coolest way out.

Trendoids, who are always on the cutting edge of culinary hedonism, might forego the red tomato base entirely by choosing a white base made from chicken broth and yogurt. This type of gazpacho is what Wolfgang Puck serves up at Spago's and charges around $7 for a bowl. Again, my philosophy is that since this one-dish dinner usually means a trip to the produce market anyway, fresh tomatoes are of no big consequence.

Vegetables and/or legumes that find their way from the Cuisinart to the pot can be anything from mushrooms to jalapeño peppers. In addition to the almost mandatory cucumbers, tomato and onion, my first choices would also include a red or green pepper, with the first being preferential, some mushrooms, celery (including the tops), possibly some pea pods, carrots and water chestnuts. Allow your soul and your wallet to be your guide.

Lastly, a great gazpacho will bring with it the aroma and flavor of a vegetable garden immediately after a rainstorm. Yes, a shot of Tabasco is always welcome, in addition to a hefty hand with the salt and fresh ground pepper. Dill weed, cilantro, fresh choped basil and oregano, not to forget coriander, celery seed and a shake of lemon-pepper, will only improve the olfactory senses.

If it's too hot to cool, chill out, with some homemade gazpacho.

Lemons AND Limes IN THE Summertime

By Geri Rinschler
special writer

ALTHOUGH THE best lemons are available from December to March, it's not until the sizzling days of summer that they are in the greatest demand.

Besides a cool dip in the pool, there's nothing as refreshing as a glass of ice cold lemonade, or a zesty bowl of Greek lemon soup (Avgolemono) or a frosty Italian lemon ice cup. You could say that at times the word lemon is synonymous with ahhhh! cooling! and thirst-quenching!

Just how long has America been cooking with lemons? Well, that's not easy to say. In early American cookbooks, there are a number of recipes for lemon pudding and lemon sponge pie prior to the Civil War. In "American Cookery," written in 1796, author Amelia Simmons author describes a lemon cream made with "the juice of four large lemons, half a pint of water, a pound of double refined sugar, seven beaten egg whites and the yolk of one, beaten very well."

Lemons and oranges are called for frequently in Simmons' recipes. Although it's said that citrus fruits were available during the 1790s in limited quantities, obviously they were readily available to Simmons in Connecticut.

THE EXACT origin of the lemon is unknown. A citrus fruit whose cultivation goes back more than 2,500 years, it is believed to have originated in the Indus Valley of Northern India.

This tender, subtropical evergreen tree was brought into St. Augustine, Fla., by the Spanish in 1565 and later to Southern California in 1769. Today most lemons are grown in California and Arizona, with a smaller crop in Florida. American lemons are available all year round, including those which we must still import from Chile, Spain and Italy.

Commercially, the quality of lemons is judged by the color, clearness and texture of the skin, not by the size of the fruit, according to Jack Murdich author of "Buying Produce: The Green Grocer's Guide to Selecting and Storing Fresh Fruit and Vegetables" (Hearst Paperbacks, 1986).

He suggests looking for citrus fruits which have the thinnest skin to yield the highest juice content. Select citrus fruits which are firm, that feel heavy for their size and are free of blemishes. Lemons usually are more expensive in the summer and less expensive in the winter. Limes, which are less expensive in the summer, can be used as a substitute in most recipes.

Limes are also available all year long but reach their peak season in July and August. Although similar in flavor to lemons, they have a slightly higher acid content. Since limes are about half the size of a lemon, you may need nearly twice as many when using them interchangeably in a recipe. In buying limes, look for those which are the darkest green. A yellowish lime is generally not as fresh or as juicy.

DO YOU YEARN to duplicate a Key Lime Pie a la Key West, Fla.? Key limes, which are more aromatic and more potent than the standard Persian varieties, seldom appear in Michigan fruit markets but frozen or bottled Key lime juice can be found in gourmet food shops.

When extracting juice from lemons or limes, allow them to first reach room temperature. Roll them on a counter top with the palm of your hand to extract the most juice.

Lemons and limes will last three to four days at room temperature and up to one month when stored in the refrigerator. If a recipe calls for the zest of a citrus fruit, strips can easily be removed using a potato peeler.

Lemon zest curls make an attractive garnish on a plate along with lemon leaves (available at any florist shop). If a recipe calls for grated zest, it's most easily removed with a small kitchen tool known as a zester. A zester removes very fine strips of zest, leaving the bitter rind or white pith behind.

A second helpful kitchen tool is a stripper, which not only removes long continuous strips of zest from the fruit but also creates artistic scallop design on the outside of the fruits when the lemons of limes are sliced.

A French wooden cone or corrugated wooden cone is helpful when hollowing out lemon and lime shells to be used as individual serving cups or as a garnish. These also are available in specialized kitchen shops or in department stores.

Vineyards shop is a deli and a whole lot more

By Janice Brunson
special writer

Dine on the premises, inside or out-of-doors.

Buy take-out and eat at home.

Or dine at home but at a catered affair.

Select country home-style fare or French gourmet.

At Vineyards Taste of Seasons in Farmington Hills — a diner, deli, wine shop and catering service rolled into one — the choices are endless.

About the only thing not available is a parking spot during daily noon and early evening rush hours. Then, the place is normally packed with lines of customers wending through the homey premises, which are capped by a ceiling of hanging baskets.

Availability of choice at Vineyards Taste is the result of a recent marriage in business between two former competitors. The principles involved describe the unusual partnership as a union of strength and resources.

In February, Grace Crowl, a certified chef who for three years owned a catering service on Northwestern Highway called Taste of Seasons, moved the operation across the road to Virginia's, a fine wine shop and deli with seating for some 100 that Ron Asmar has owned and operated since 1985.

Ron Asmar and Grace Crowl, partners in Vineyards Taste of Seasons, are shown with carrot cake, (left), petite pastries and Bavarian cream torte.

staff photographer

"JUST YESTERDAY, I was telling Grace, 'What did I ever do without you? How did either of us survive without each other?' " said Asmar, pointing to a multitude of customers during a recent noon rush.

"Ronnie and I are a real good team," Crowl observed, simultaneously thumbing through carefully catalogued recipes, as she helped a couple who were interested in a catered affair.

The arrangement allows Crowl time to do what she does best — prepare edible works of art including marinated chicken salad with dried Michigan cherries that taste of spring, an array of country French pastries, and ethnic wonders like pasties from a genuine recipe once used by upstate miners.

"Everything except the rye bread is prepared fresh from scratch, like salads, twice a day," she said.

Asmar tends to daily operations, stocking a wide variety of wines and liquors and introducing new services such as the virgin drink bar, an instant success that features non-alcoholic beverages.

Crowl's husband James and Ron's wife Maggie are the "Jack and Jill of all trades." Jim — who is jokingly referred to as the shop's staff physician when not practicing medicine from his office in Novi — helps out wherever needed. Maggie, who has always worked alongside her husband, continues to assist in countless ways.

"THE DIET Seafood Salad is my favorite," said Steven Stone who eats at Vineyards Taste at least twice weekly. He works at Friedman Realty next door. Also high on Stone's list of favorites: "The chicken dishes are really good, love the pastries, and they do something special with the rice pudding."

Stone's partner, Nathan Green was content to say he has "no favorites. Everything is good."

Vivian Stoll drinks "cappuccino a lot. And this is excellent," she said, polishing off a cup of the brew with friend Bonnie Plagers. The pair dropped in on their way to Kennice and Bashar's hair salon next door.

Ernie Malazo, hired three weeks ago to manage the virgin bar, grinned at the compliment to his cappuccino. A former maitre d' at Ristorante Di Modesta in Southfield, he joined the staff at Vineyards Taste three weeks ago because "they have the potential to grow."

Vineyards Taste is open 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday-Thursday and until 9:30 p.m. Friday and 10 p.m. Saturday. Sunday hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Mixed case includes some nice surprises

Our friends liked the full aromas of tropical fruit and buttery, toasted oak.

We are introduced to new wines in restaurants, at wine tastings, at interviews and while traveling to wine country. The number of ways we become aware of new wines is sometimes surprising. People know that we delight in discoveries and frequently introduce us to wines they have enjoyed.

Recently, while planning a party for some friends and neighbors, we called our wine retailer and asked that he put together a mixed case of value-priced chardonnays — four different producers, three bottles of each. We agreed on a price range and left it up to him. He knows what we like, but also knows that we appreciate a surprise or two.

Among the mixed case was the J. Lohr Estates Riverstone Chardonnay ($12). Our friends liked the full aromas of tropical fruit and buttery, toasted oak. It disappeared fast. For the money, the wine is uncommonly lush with abundant flavors of pear and apple, featuring a long, lingering finish.

After our experience we were very happy when J. Lohr winemaker Jeff Runquist came to Detroit. We had the opportunity to meet him and discuss his wines at the Rattlesnake Club where sommelier Madeline Triffon was featuring the Riverstone Chardonnay at a by-the-glass pour.

RUNDQUIST EXPLAINED that to achieve full, lush chardonnay flavors he harvests the grapes when they are fully mature. He judges this by walking the vineyard and tasting the berries. The grapes are machine harvested at night, when the fruit is cool. They are pressed immediately in the vineyard within one to two hours after picking.

Runquist introduced us to the 1987 J. Lohr Estates Seven Oaks Cabernet Sauvignon ($12), a wine with distinctive blackberry and cherry aromas followed by fresh fruit flavors and a rich, velvety texture. "We are very proud of the cabernet fruit we get from our Seven Oaks Vineyard located in Paso Robles," Runquist emphasized. "Napa Valley cabernet sauvignon is reminiscent of cassis and black currant, Alexander Valley exudes plum, Santa Barbara has an olive note, but Paso Robles boasts intense black cherry character."

Paso Robles has a climate similar to that of the Alexander Valley in Northern Sonoma County. The main difference, according to Runquist, is the soil. Paso Robles boasts a rich, clay-loam topsoil over a sub-soil of limestone and slate.

"We harvest cabernet in the warmth of the day to aid in extracting flavor and color from the skins," Runquist said. "We age the wine in small American oak barrels which contributes a delightful cinnamon, vanilla bouquet. The wine has sufficient tannins to give structure and ageability, but not so much to interfere with the silky finish."

J. Lohr Winery was founded in San Jose in 1974. The original winery now produces only white wines. In 1988, a new red wine facility was built adjacent to the Seven Oaks Vineyard in Paso Robles. Here, Runquist is armed with the best winemaking equipment and technology available. This allows him to produce an attractive, fruity, Beaujolais-style red wine, J. Lohr Wildflower Gamay ($9), which reminds us of a cru Beaujolais Fleurie.

Runquist also introduced us to the Cypress Brand of affordable varietal wines produced by J. Lohr Vineyards. These wines are handcrafted by blending estate grapes with fruit from selected coastal vineyards.

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

The following Cypress brand wines are produced by J. Lohr and represent excellent values in their price range.

1990 Cypress Fume Blanc ($6) exudes fresh honey-dew melon and grapefruit aromas in the style of a clean, summertime refresher.

1989 Cypress Chardonnay ($9) showcases apple and pear aromas highlighted by a bouquet of toasty oak and vanilla. Oak and fruit flavors are well-balanced in a stylish presentation.

1988 Cypress Merlot ($9) is made from Washington State fruit. Dark cherry-aromas introduce flavors of cranberries and spice in a supple style that is readily accessible.

1987 Cypress Cabernet Sauvignon ($9) features soft cassis and cherry aromas and flavors in a silky, California style.

Lemons, limes for summer

See related story, Page 1B.

As each summer begins, the recipes which come to the top of my list are those reminiscent of childhood days spent at the shore. Here are a few simple summer delights for Italian Lemon Ice Cups, Old Fashioned Lemonade and A Keep Kool Summer Salad.

One lemon will yield 2 to 3 tablespoons of juice. Six lemons will yield about 1 cup.

OLD-FASHIONED LEMONADE
12 lemons
1 cup sugar
6 cups water
2-3 drops orange blossom water, optional (available at Middle Eastern food shops or Crabtree Evelyn)
Mint leaves
Ice cubes

In a 1 ½ quart pitcher mix together lemon juice and sugar. Stir until dissolved. Add cold water and flavor with orange blossom water if desired. Add ice cubes and garnish with mint leaves.

GRANITA DI LIMONE
Italian Lemon Ice
2 cups water
1 cup sugar
2 lemons or 6 tablespoons lemon juice
Zest of 1 lemon, grated

Mix together sugar and water in a saucepan. Bring liquid to a boil, stirring. Add lemon juice and zest. Remove from heat and allow to cool to room temperature.

Pour liquid into ice trays and freeze 1-2 hours until solid. Beat ice with a whisk or fork and return to freezer again, freezing until solid. Spoon or scoop out into sherbet dishes or individual hollowed-out lemon halves. If using lemon cups, refreeze before serving. Garnish each with a sprig of mint or other scented herbs. Serves 3.

KEEP KOOL SUMMER SALAD
Dressing
1 cup olive oil (use Berio or other simple olive oil)
⅓ cup fresh squeezed lime juice
1 ½ teaspoons champagne or white wine mustard
½ teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
½ teaspoon salt or to taste
Lots of freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Makes about 1 ½ cups.

2 cups red leaf lettuce leaves, torn
2 cups Boston or bibb lettuce leaves, torn
2 cups romaine lettuce leaves, torn
2 cups radicchio leaves, torn
1 bunch watercress
3 pounds cooked chicken or duck, shredded, chilled
8 strawberries
12-15 fresh raspberries or blueberries
12 mini, yellow, pear-shaped tomatoes or red cherry tomatoes, cut in half.
½ cup almonds, toasted or sauteed in a skillet until golden
1 ripe avocado, peeled, sliced in wedges

Mix greens together and arrange on 4 individual serving plates. Divide shredded meat and arrange on each serving. Garnish plates with berries and tomatoes. Top with toasted almonds and avocado slices and sprigs of watercress. Serve dressing on the side. Salad greens may be tossed together with enough dressing to moisten before serving, then garnish with fruits and meat with extra dressing on the side. Serves 4.

It's a deli and a whole lot more

See related story, Page 1B.

These recipes are from Vineyards Taste of Seasons in Farmington Hills.

⅔ cup coarse Dijon mustard
¼ cup ketchup
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
Dash Tabasco
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons sugar
2 bunches scallions, minced
6 to 8 stalks celery, minced

Thoroughly combine all ingredients. Gently toss with peeled and deveined cooked shrimp. Add to shredded romaine lettuce and red and green peppers which have been julienned.

GREEK CHICKEN PIE
2 cups green onions, chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup almonds, sliced
6 cups chicken, cooked and chopped
2 pounds feta cheese, crumbled
1 cup whipping cream
½ cup Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon basil
2 cups cottage cheese
2 cups Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon white pepper
2 eggs
2 packages phyllo dough

Saute onions and garlic. Combine with all other ingredients except dough, and mix thoroughly. Melt equal parts of margarine and vegetable oil. Place 8 to 10 layers of dough on the bottom of a baking dish, brushing each with the margarine and oil mixture. Pour cheese mixture over the dough. Cover with 8 to 10 layers of dough, brushing each with margarine and oil mixture. Bake at 300 degrees for 45 minutes or until crust is a light brown.

Part of the directions were missing from the recipe for Candy Bar Pie in Betsy Brethen's Winner Dinner column on June 10. The complete recipe follows:

CANDY BAR PIE
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
5 assorted favorite candy bars
Chocolate sauce

This vegetarian meal is a family favorite

Betsy Brethen

I recently received a letter from Carol Lewthwaite of Canton, in which she commented that she tries to have a meatless meal at least once a week. The celebration of Earth Day reminded her again about the use of our country's land to produce meat, and how much more efficient it is to produce vegetables.

With that thought in mind, she was prompted to submit one of her family's favorite vegetarian meals and enclosed recipes for Cheesy Beans and Rice, Orange Almond Salad and Chocolate Chip-Peanut Butter Bread Pudding. She added, in her letter, that the peanut butter in the bread pudding is another way of adding protein to a meatless meal. (Take note, all you Reese's Peanut Butter Cup lovers!)

Lewthwaite, who is originally from New Jersey, lived in Denver, Colo., before moving to Canton where she and her husband, Richard, have lived for 18 years. Mother of a 14-year-old son, Lewthwaite works at the Garden City Library as a library aide in the reference section. She is very involved at the Calvary Baptist Church in Canton, where she sings in the choir and teaches Sunday School to fifth grade girls.

Through the years, her hobbies have changed and evolved. She presently is working on decorating the home they have lived in for six months. She loves to cook and buys only fresh fruits and vegetables, rarely frozen or canned. She never buys convenience foods and really makes an attempt to eat low-fat, low-cholesterol foods.

Carol Lewthwaite of Canton serves Winner Dinner of Cheesy Beans and Rice, Orange Almond Salad and Chocolate Chip-Peanut Butter Bread Pudding!

SHE IS A FAN of Jane Brody, the author of several nutrition books, and takes a practical, rather than fanatic, approach to the food she prepares and serves to her family. In the winter, she makes a different soup every week and enjoys baking different types of muffins as well.

This summer she is looking forward to spending time at a wonderful, old Victorian summer home the family recently inherited on Long Island, N.Y., and visiting friends in northern Michigan.

Thank you, Carol Lewthwaite, for sharing your delicious vegetarian menu with us and congratulations on being selected this week's Winner Dinner Winner. All the best to you and your family and I hope your summer is fun and relaxing.

And lastly, there is good news to celebrate. I recently received an invitation to prepare a Winner Dinner on the television program, "In Good Taste," for Livonia's municipal access channel, City Channel 8. The show airs every Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Be sure to tune in Thursday, June 20, to see me make a dinner.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words Winner Dinner Winner on it.

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder.

Recipes

CHEESY BEANS AND RICE

Loaded with fiber, this meatless dish is easy to put together, especially if the brown rice has been cooked in advance. This recipe serves 4-6.

1 cup uncooked brown rice
1 can kidney beans, 15-ounce size, rinsed and drained
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup onions, chopped
½ cup green pepper, chopped
½ cup celery, chopped
1 can tomatoes, 16-ounce size
2 teaspoons chili powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups cheese, cheddar or jack or combination of both, grated

Cook the rice according to package directions. Meanwhile, saute the onions, green pepper and celery in butter until tender, about 5-7 minutes. Stir in the tomatoes, chili powder and salt. Simmer uncovered for 5-7 minutes, chopping up the tomatoes.

Combine the cooked rice with the kidney beans. Place half the rice mixture in a greased 1½-quart casserole. Top with half the cheese and half the tomato mixture. Repeat the rice and tomato layers. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Top with the remaining cheese and bake again, just until the cheese melts.

ORANGE ALMOND SALAD

This recipe is Lewthwaite's version of a salad served at the Magic Pan restaurant.

1 head romaine lettuce
2 oranges, peeled and sectioned, or 1 can mandarin oranges, drained
½ cup sliced and toasted almonds
A few thin slices of red onion
Italian salad dressing

CHOCOLATE CHIP-PEANUT BUTTER BREAD PUDDING

This dessert offers a delicious way in which to add more protein to a meatless meal.

6 slices of bread, butter and cubed
½ cup flaked coconut
½ cup chocolate chips
½ cup peanut butter
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups milk

Place the buttered bread cubes in a 9-by-9-inch baking dish. Sprinkle coconut and chocolate chips on top. Cream together the sugar and the peanut butter with an electric mixer. Add the eggs and vanilla. Blend in the milk, pouring it over the bread. Place the baking dish in a shallow pan on an oven rack. Pour hot water in the outer pan to a depth of 1 inch. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until a knife inserted halfway between the edge and the center of the dish comes out clean. Serve warm with whipped cream or ice cream.

'The Antipasto Table' includes best offerings

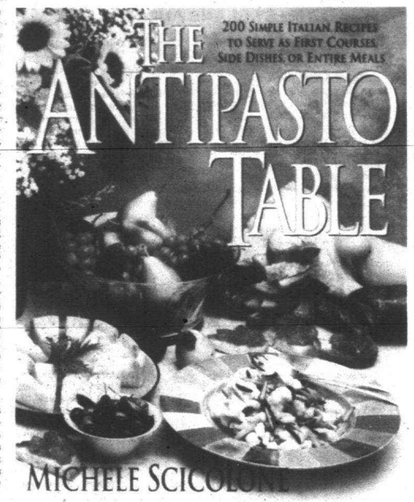
"The Antipasto Table" by Michele Scicolone (William Morrow & Co.; June 20, 1991; $20, hardcover) introduces American cooks to antipasti the way it was meant to be — fresh, flavorful, colorful and delicious.

Scicolone, who grew up in an Italian-American household, was inspired by the cooking of her grandmother as well as by her many travels in Italy. She has taken the best offerings of restaurants and trattorie and set them out on "The Antipasto Table."

One of the great appeals of antipasti is their versatility. As Scicolone explains, "Antipasti can be as simple or as elaborate as you want them to be. One antipasto can be served at the beginning of a meal or an assortment can be the meal. For example, a brunch or dinner antipasto party for a group of friends or family could be made of two or three cold vegetable antipasti, a rice salad, chicken salad and a platter of cold meats and cheeses. Antipasti are adaptable to all kinds of meals and snacks and work well as appetizers, first or second courses and side dishes."

The Italians know so many ways to prepare vegetables that "The Antipasto Table" includes two vegetable chapters — one that features vegetables as the main ingredient and the other on stuffed vegetables — to pay homage to the variety available.

There are also all-occasion menus complete with wine suggestions, so a variety of antipasti can easily be combined into a meal. "An Antipasto Brunch" features Roasted Asparagus, Pepper, and Potato Frittata, Sausage-Stuffed Tomatoes and Parmesan Bread. "A Buffet Supper for a Crowd" includes Olive Crostini, Seafood Salad with Pesto, Ligurian Chicken Salad, and Tomato, Arugula and Ricotta Salata Salad. "An Antipasto Cocktail Party" offers this array of appetizers: Electric Cheese, Wild Mushroom Crostini, and Olive and Rosemary Focacci.



Two hundred Italian recipes are included in "The Antipasto Table" by Micnele Scicolone.

WARM SHRIMP AND GREEN BEAN SALAD

At the Travaerna del Pittore in Arona on Lake Maggiore you can arrive in your speedboat and enjoy this pretty salad on the restaurant's sunny lakeside terrace.

¼ cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
¼ cup snipped fresh chives
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 pound tender green beans, trimmed
1 pound medium shrimp, shelled and deveined
Lemon slices

In a small bowl, whisk together the olive oil, lemon juice, chives, and salt and pepper to taste until well blended.

Bring a large saucepan of water to a boil. Add the green beans and salt to taste. Cook until the beans are tender, about 5 minutes. Drain well. Place the beans on a platter and toss with half of the dressing.

In the same saucepan, bring two quarts of water to a boil. Add the shrimp and salt to taste. Cook just until the shrimp are opaque, about 2 minutes. Drain well and place them in a small bowl with the remaining dressing. Let marinate for 5 minutes, stirrring occasionally.

Spoon the shrimp over the green beans. Garnish with the lemon slices.

Hospital food — it's better than you think kitchen witch

Gundella

Sooner or later, almost everyone has occasion to spend some time in the hospital. Recently, it was my turn to do so.

I was amazed at the patience of the people who worked there. The men and women who choose to be caretakers of the sick are truly a special breed of human beings.

Not only the doctors and nurses, but all the others — the technicians who drew blood and took various other specimens; those who administered breathing therapy; those who took chest X-rays at 6 a.m. every morning; and even the housekeepers — were the kindest and most pleasant people it has ever been my good fortune to meet.

None of us are at our best, personality-wise, when we are ill. I am ashamed to admit it, but I was crabby, self-pitying and not very well-behaved or pleasant to be around. Yet, never once did I hear a hospital employee speak sharply or critically to me, or any other patient.

Everyone has, of course, heard how terrible hospital food is. Well, let me tell you that just isn't so.

Right after surgery, I wanted to drink, but I was not allowed to. From time to time, a nurse would give me tiny bits of ice chips in a spoon.

THEN ONCE, when she was busy with something else, I grabbed the whole cup of ice and finished it off all at once. Oh, that cold wet ice felt good!

But a few minutes later, I was nauseated, and throwing up the water. I wasn't allowed to have it all because it wasn't good for me.

The same thing is true when you are first allowed to eat. Nothing on a liquid diet really tastes good. Nobody can do much to make bouillon and Popsicles taste like anything but bouillon and Popsicles.

But once you are put on a regular diet, it is a different story.

At Garden City Osteopathic Hospital, where I was fortunate to be, a dietitian visited me, and discussed my likes and dislikes. She went over menu choices with me, and really seemed to care about my enjoying the food. The trays sent to me were attractively arranged, and the food was hot and delicious.

IT IS ESPECIALLY difficult to cook eggs to please everyone. Personal tastes differ vastly. Even some of the best restaurants cannot fix eggs to please fussy customers. I told the dietitian how I liked my eggs, and every morning they were served hot and cooked to perfection, along with crisp bacon, toast or muffins, fresh fruit and cereal.

My other meals were equally well-prepared: turkey with homemade stuffing (not the kind from a box); and fresh vegetables that were colorful, flavorful and not over-cooked.

I had real potatoes, cooked a variety of ways, as well as cakes and cookies that tasted as if they were made at home in your own kitchen.

I talked with the people who prepared these meals and decided to include some of their patients' favorite recipes in this column (with a special thanks to Linda Main, R.D., production dietitian at the Garden City Osteopathic Hospital.)

All these recipes have been reduced in size to serve 6 people.

The stir-fried chicken and vegetables and the dilled vegetable salad were both as good as any dish I have ever eaten at the Whitney, or any other godrmet restaurant.

Try them yours[elf] at home, and let me know what you think of this hospital food. (Ca[ll] Gundella at 427-1072.)

Only 5 ingredients in Mexican dessert

AP — The Mexican custard called flan has all the elements of a great dessert. From a cook's point of view, it's simple to make (just five ingredients) and can be baked and chilled ahead of time. From a diner's perspective, the silky-smooth texture and caramel-rich flavor are sensuous. Serve your flan with fresh in-season fruit for a sparkle of color.

This recipe makes enough to serve 12 people, but it can be easily adjusted to serve six. Simply halve all the ingredients in the recipe and bake the flan in an 8-inch-round pan for 30 to 35 minutes.

FLAN

1¾ cups sugar
8 eggs
4 cups milk
2 inches stick cinnamon
1½ teaspoons vanilla
Fresh fruit such as orange sections, peeled papaya slices, strawberry slices and lime slices

To caramelize sugar, in a small heavy skillet heat ¾ cup of the sugar over medium heat until it begins to melt (do not stir). Cook and stir for 4 to 5 minutes more or until the sugar turns a rich brown color. Remove the skillet from the heat and immediately pour the caramelized sugar into an oval 3-quart shallow casserole (approximately a 13-by-9-by-2-inch oval dish.) Holding the dish with potholders, quickly rotate so the sugar coats the bottom and sides evenly. Cool.

Meanwhile, in a large mixing bowl beat eggs with a rotary beater. Gradually beat in the remaining 1 cup sugar.

In a large saucepan heat and stir milk and cinnamon over medium heat until milk bubbles. Remove cinnamon stick. Slowly add milk to egg mixture, stirring constantly. Stir in vanilla.

Place the caramel-coated dish in a 14-by-10-by-2-inch or 15¼-by-10-by 2-inch baking pan on an oven rack. Pour the egg mixture into the caramel-coated dish. Pour the hot-test tap water available into the baking pan around the dish to a depth of 1 inch.

Bake, uncovered, in a 325-degree oven about 40 minutes or until a knife inserted halfway between the center and edge comes out clean.

Carefully remove the dish from the hot water. Cool the flan on a wire rack. Cover and chill in the refrigerator up to 6 hours or until ready to serve.

To unmold, use a spatula to loosen the edges of the flan. Slip the end of the spatula down the side to let air in. Invert the flan onto a serving platter. Spoon any caramel mixture that remains in dish onto the flan. If desired, arrange orange sections, papaya slices, strawberries and lime slices beside the flan. Makes 12 servings.

If you knew a healthy, happy baby had died suddenly without reason, you'd want to help. There are over 7,000 babies who die from a cruel, mysterious killer. It's called SIDS: Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

Perhaps you've heard SIDS referred to as "Crib Death." But maybe you didn't hear that SIDS is the number one cause of death in infants from one week to one year.

babies of all races and religions. And it's not hereditary.

Ways to enjoy fruit desserts

"Fruit Desserts" by Lisa Yockelson (HarperCollins Publishers; May 8, 1991; $15.95) is a mouthwatering collection of recipes for pies, cobblers, puddings, mousses and other delectable desserts.

The cookbook offers home cooks more than 90 different ways to enjoy their favorite seasonal and dried fruits.

A basket of fresh-picked autumn apples calls for Apple Pie, studded with crunchy walnuts and fragrant with spices, or feathery Apple Snacking Cake, great for dessert as well as for breakfast, or any time.

A summer day's harvest of juicy peaches is an occasion to make a batch of fresh Peach Ice Cream or, for later enjoyment, Peach Butter.

FROM APRICOT Pudding to Gingered Pear Crisp to Berry Compote with Creamy Vanilla Sauce, "Fruit Desserts" is packed with ways to enjoy the best that the supermarket or the farm stand has to offer any time of the year.

The cookbook is divided by types of desserts: Compotes and Salads; Pies and Cakes, Tarts, Turnovers and Dumplings; Puddings and Shortcakes, Fools and Mousses; Cobblers and Crisps; Poached, Baked and Glazed Fruit; and Ice Creams and Sherbets, Floats and Sodas.

Oranges, grapefruit, bananas, strawberries, blueberries, peaches, rhubarb, pears, melons, prunes, cherries, kumquats, mangoes — all are given treatment in "Fruit Desserts" as the author demonstrates how to get the most out of the natural sweetness and goodness of fresh and dried fruits.

Also included are recipes for fresh fruit syrups, fruit butters, preserved fruit and scented sugars — perfect gift items for fellow fruit lovers.

FROZEN PEACH MOUSSE

This mousse is made from simple ingredients; egg yolks, sugar, cream and a fresh peach puree.

To make the puree, peel, halve and pit 3 large, ripe peaches; cut the fruit into chunks and process in the bowl of a food processor fitted with the steel blade.

Other purees, such as nectarine, mango or strawberry, are made in the same way. Apricots or pears, canned in natural juices and drained, can also be pureed to form a delicious fruit base.

Cooling spoonfuls of this mousse are delicious served with thin butter wafers.

⅓ cup granulated sugar
4 extra-large egg yolks, at room temperature
1 ½ cups light cream, scalded
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1 cup fresh peach puree
¾ cup cold heavy cream

Whisk the sugar and egg yolks in a heavy saucepan (preferably enameled cast iron).

Slowly stir in the scalded cream, set the pan over low heat and cook, stirring, until the mixture thickens, coats the back of a wooden spoon and registers 175 degrees on a candy thermometer.

Remove from the heat and stir in vanilla extract. Pour the custard mixture into a bowl, place a piece of plastic wrap directly over the top and cool completely.

Refrigerate the custard mixture, covered, until well chilled, about 8 hours. (The custard can be made up to 1 day in advance.)

Stir the peach puree into the custard mixture. Whip the cream until firm peaks form. Stir a large spoonful of the whipped cream into the fruit mixture, then fold in the remaining cream.

Pour the mousse mixture into a freezerproof bowl, cover tightly and place in the freezer to firm up, about 8 hours. (The mousse may be prepared up to 4 days in advance.)

Alternatively, the mousse may be spooned into individual bowls or ramekins and frozen; smaller portions will firm up in about 1 hour and 15 minutes.

Pepper Steaks are great for weekend

This recipe is from an article "A Delicious Weekend" in the June issue of Bon Appetit magazine.

GRILLED PEPPERED STEAKS

Offer with steamed green beans as part of supper Friday night. A rich Cabernet Sauvignon is a perfect accompaniment.

8 servings

¾ cup olive oil
⅓ cup red wine vinegar
4 ½ tablespoons Dijon mustard
4 large garlic cloves, minced
2 large shallots or green onions, chopped
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper
1 tablespoon minced fresh thyme or 1 teaspoon dried, crumbled
1 tablespoon minced fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried, crumbled
1 teaspoon salt
3 flank steaks (about 1 ¼ pounds each)
Fresh thyme sprigs
Fresh rosemary sprigs

Whisk first 9 ingredients in medium bowl to blend. Place steaks in single layer in large baking dish. Pour marinade over and turn steaks to coat. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

Prepare barbecue (medium-high heat). Remove steaks from marinade and season all sides generously with pepper. Grill steaks to desired doneness, about 4 minutes per side for medium-rare. Thinly slice steaks diagonally across grain. Arrange slices on platter. Garnish platter with thyme and rosemary sprigs and serve.

Ratatouille is special for dinner

The article 'An Elegant Stove-Top Dinner' in the June issue of Gourmet magazine includes this recipe.

RATATOUILLE

1 onion, sliced thin
2 garlic cloves, minced
5 tablespoons olive oil
One ¾-pound eggplant, cut into ½-inch pieces (about 3 cups)
1 small zucchini, scrubbed, quartered lengthwise, and cut into thin slices
1 red bell pepper, chopped
¾ pound small ripe tomatoes, chopped coarse (about 1 ¼ cups)
¼ teaspoon dried oregano, crumbled
¼ teaspoon dried thyme, crumbled
⅛ teaspoon ground coriander
¼ teaspoon fennel seeds
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup shredded fresh basil leaves

In a large skillet cook the onion and the garlic in 2 tablespoons of the oil over moderately low heat, stirring occasionally, until the onion is softened. Add the remaining 3 tablespoons oil and heat it over moderately high heat until it is hot but not smoking.

Add the eggplant and cook the mixture, stirring occasionally, for 8 minutes, or until the eggplant is softened. Stir in the zucchini and the bell pepper and cook the mixture over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, for 12 minutes. Stir in the tomatoes and cook the mixture, stirring occasionally, for 5 to 7 minutes, or until the vegetables are tender. Stir in the oregano, the thyme, the coriander, the fennel seeds, the salt and pepper to taste, and cook the mixture, stirring, for 1 minute. Stir in the basil and combine the mixture well.

The ratatouille may be made 1 day in advance, kept covered and chilled, and reheated before serving. Serves 4.

Commission emphasizes academics

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

The spotlight has been intense. For several years, intercollegiate athletics have been scrutinized and dissected by all sorts of commissions and in-depth studies.

What have they uncovered? Problems, to be sure — serious problems, in some cases.

William Shelton, the president of Eastern Michigan University, is the only NCAA Division I representative from Michigan on the President's Commission, a collection of 44 NCAA I collegiate heads-of-state. The commission's job wasn't clear at its inception, said Shelton, but it has evolved into "quite a powerful body."

It's purpose is now clear: Put perspective back into intercollegiate athletics and make sure the student part of student-athlete is emphasized.

ALTHOUGH THE three four-year institutions located within the Observer & Eccentric coverage area — Oakland University, Madonna University and St. Mary's College — aren't directly affected by NCAA I rulings, they will feel the ramifications.

They have already.

But not as much as one might expect. The smaller the school, the less chance there is for abuse. One reason is there isn't enough money involved to take the risk.

Another is that athletes at the NCAA II or NAIA level are generally more realistic about their chances of making a profession of their sport. They are in school to get a degree.

That is what the NCAA's presidents have been trying to push — academics over athletics. Proposition 48, which established criteria for prospective freshmen student-athletes, is a result of that effort. More are forthcoming.

"THERE'S BEEN a lot of attention given to the athlete portion of the student-athlete, but what about the student portion?" Shelton asked. Which is why the NCAA is currently contemplating moving up the minimum grade point average for incoming student-athletes and making eligibility requirements more rigid.

Other proposals include passing 24 credit hours a year and eight hours the previous semester to remain eligible.

While some may view the new standards as too restrictive, local schools greeted them with a shrug. The reason: They already have similar standards, in some cases more restrictive, in place.

In the NAIA, for example (Madonna and St. Mary's are both NAIA members), entrance requirements for freshmen athletes are fulfilling two of the following three: a 2.5 grade point; an 18 on the ACT exam; being in the top 50 percent of your graduating class.

ACCORDING TO Madonna athletic director Ray Summers, "Athletes must meet normal admission policies." The same is true at OU, said Glenn Jackson, the athletic department's faculty representative since 1974. Any exceptions "are made by the admission's office, not the athletic department."

Jackson has been attending NCAA conventions for 15 years; he's seen the changes. "There were hardly any presidents there (before)," he reflected. "And they were hardly noticeable."

That's not the case anymore. "There were at least 250 at the last meeting and they were definitely active. They were expressing their opinions, in several cases instead of their athletic department representatives."

Stressing academics over athletics is one way presidents plan to gain control of their athletic departments. At OU, said Jackson, that's never been a problem.

"Academics have always been stressed over athletics," he said. "We've been fortunate to have had two athletic directors, Corey Van Fleet and now Paul Hartman, who both firmly believe students are here to be students, not athletes."

AS PROOF, one need look no further than the Hilton Woods case. Woods was an Olympic-caliber swimmer (he competed in Seoul in 1988 for his homeland, the Antilles-Netherlands) who failed to pass enough credit hours last fall to remain eligible.

Through an agreement with faculty members, Woods — OU's top sprinter and the key to their NCAA II championship hopes — was to have completed the work in the winter, get a grade changed and regain his eligibility. But after examining the situation, it was ruled no such adjustment would be allowed.

Woods was ruled ineligible on the eve of the NCAA II meet; OU finished second.

At Madonna, academic restrictions have taken their toll as well,

Salem owns Class A baseball title

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Salem could finally let loose and celebrate its baseball successes Saturday afternoon.

The biggest prize of all — the state championship — belongs to the Rocks, who rallied to beat Rochester 4-1 in the Class A final at Bailey Park in Battle Creek.

Salem coach John Gravlin implored his team to remain focused on that ultimate goal throughout the tournament.

"I told them if we won our district, they'd win it all," Gravlin said. I said that to fire them up. We just believed it from that point.

"We've been very calm and matter-of-fact in our approach. We haven't really celebrated until the last out today."

THE ROCKS (27-6) used solid pitching by senior Jeff Belisle and a two-run homer by junior shortstop Ed Gundry to beat Rochester (28-6) and win its second state title, the first coming in 1975.

The Falcons advanced to their first championship game with a victory over Midland Dow in the semifinals Friday.

"We hit the ball, but they made some big plays defensively and shut down some of our rallies," Rochester coach Bob Dieters said. "They deserved to win the game, but there aren't many better than us."

Doing his part in the final, Belisle was the perfect complement to fellow senior Scott Rodgers, the winning pitcher in the semifinal game with Grosse Pointe North.

He gave up six hits in seven innings, didn't walk anybody and struck out five to finish the year with a 5-0 record.

"To win baseball games, you have to throw strikes and play defense more than hit," Gravlin said. "That's how Jeff Belisle got to be our No. 2. He throws strikes and makes them put the ball in play. He threw only 10 balls in the last four innings.

"EVERYONE thinks they can hit Jeff, but his fastball moves and is quicker than people think. I think Jeff was a well-kept secret.

"We heard talk about other pitching staffs around the state, but there's no doubt who's No. 1 now," he added.

Gundry's home run — an estimated 400-foot smash to straight-away center field — put the Rocks on top 2-1 in the bottom of the third inning after Rochester had taken a 1-0 lead in the top half.

"It totally turned me around," Belisle said. "I'm a totally different pitcher when I'm ahead. I turned from being uptight to being more loose and confident."

Belisle allowed only two hits and three baserunners, with one reaching safely on an error, over the last four innings.

"He seemed to get a little better," Dieters said. "At the start of the game, we were hitting him, but then he got some momentum. When you don't walk anyone and kids make the plays, it's tough to score."

Holding the championship trophy high, coach John Gravlin is carried off the field by his Salem players after they won the Class A title Saturday.

THE FALCONS also got a complete game from Pat Hachenski (5-2), who scattered seven hits, walked just one struck out two.

"Pat pitched well but we didn't make the plays," Dieters said. "The kids played hard right to the last batter, but you have to get some breaks and we didn't get any."

Rochester had half of its hits in the third inning, scoring on consecutive singles by Pat and Tim Hachenski and John Pikur after two were out.

The Falcons threatened in the second inning when Jim Peters got to third base, but he got caught in a rundown and was put out by Scott Bright and Scott Niemiec.

"It's a scenario we're used to seeing," said Gravlin of the one-run deficit. "We gave John Glenn (district), CC (regional) and Grosse Pointe North a run, too.

"At this level, when the play gets better and better, the game is waiting for something to break. When that happens, you have to seize the moment."

In the bottom of the third, Bright hit a leadoff single, and Gundry homered with one out.

SALEM GOT two more in the fourth. Tom Davey doubled and scored with the help of an overthrow at first on a grounder by Kevin Craggs, who came home on Bright's RBI single.

Hachenski's being a hard thrower actually helped the Rocks, according to Gravlin. Eric Nielson and Bright had two hits apiece, and Tim Hachenski had a pair for Rochester.

"Any time someone tries to throw it by us, we're happy about that," he said. "We are excellent fastball hitters but also disciplined hitters. We hit a couple shots at the third baseman off a guy throwing in the 80s, so you know we were on."

The state championship is the perfect culmination to a high school career for Rodgers and the nine other seniors on the team.

"This is the pinnacle," he said. "There's nothing left to reach, for now at least. I've been shooting six years for this."

"Every single day we talked about (staying focused)," Gravlin said. "I told them 'You've got from Sunday to the rest of your life to look back on it, but you only have today to play it.' "

Gundry HR was key hit

By Jim Toth
staff writer

Plymouth Salem junior Ed Gundry went a long way Saturday in making sure his name isn't mispronounced ever again.

The Rocks heavy-hitting shortstop — who heard his surname mispronounced by the public address announcer during the course of the game — became the talk of the Class A state finals during the third inning of their title-clinching 4-1 victory over Rochester.

With the Rocks trailing 1-0, Gundry jumped all over a Pat Hachenski fastball, drilling a shot over the 385-foot marking in straight-away center field at C.O. Brown Stadium in Battle Creek. The swing was good enough to produce two runs (Scott Bright came home to score after stroking a single) and send the Rocks on their way to capturing their first baseball title since 1975.

"It doesn't matter what they called him, they know who he is now," explained Salem coach John Gravlin after the game.

THE HOME RUN was the fifth of the season for Gundry, who, in addition to supplying the power, sparkled with the glove at short by successfully handling his four chances.

"As soon as it went up in the air, I saw the outfielder (Tim Hachenski) running after it and I thought it might have a chance," Gundry said of his estimated 400-foot clout. "I was running it out and then coach (Gravlin) just yelled to touch all four."

"It was a fastball over the plate," informed Hachenski, who suffered his first loss in three tournament decisions.

An interesting twist to the heroics was that Gravlin was going to allow Gundry only one shot at the fences before putting the bunt sign on.

"I had it in my mind that I was going to give him one swing at it (fences) and then I was going to have him bunt," Gravlin said. "The last few weeks in practice, Ed has hit probably 15 or 16 out. He's been swinging that way, so I figured I'd give him a chance."

The move payed off, lifting the spirits of all the Rocks, none more so than starting pitcher Jeff Belisle.

"When we're ahead, I'm a totally different pitcher," said Belisle, who tossed seven innings of six-hit ball to record his fifth win without a loss. "It totally turned me around."

Ocelots reload with freshmen

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

There was a lot for Schoolcraft College volleyball coach Tom Teeters to replace from last year. In addition to the five sophomores who graduated — Jennifer Sproul, Angelette Love, Elena Oparka, Laura Brown and Christy Clark — three others who would be sophomores this fall have opted not to return.

Kari Domanski has transferred to University of Michigan-Dearborn, Lisa Domke has transferred to Grand Valley State and Kim Laginess has left the team. Both Domanski and Domke have been given their releases and can compete for their new teams in the fall.

With eight players gone from a 43-6 squad (24-3 against junior college opponents), one might think Teeters is facing a major rebuilding job.

That isn't necessarily so, however. It's more restructuring than rebuilding.

WITH FIVE recruits already signed and a sixth in the works, SC should be as potent as ever next season — particularly with middle

Madonna inks five

There's been a change in direction — not unexpected — in Madonna University's volleyball program.

It's in recruiting. The Lady Crusaders are headed for their fourth season; they have surpassed the building-a-foundation stage.

When their season starts next fall, their aim will clearly be to capture the NAIA's District 23 championship.

Sure, it was always the goal in the past. But with everyone returning from last season's 30-16 squad (second place in the district), the 1991 Crusaders will expect to be champions.

It shows in coach Jerry Abraham's recruiting. He's not looking for franchise freshmen to transform his team.

"To be honest, we're looking to get some depth," he said before revealing his recruits. "We're just looking for some good athletes to fill in depth positions."

OF COURSE, Abraham didn't get what he wanted. The players he Rocks nip Norsemen 6-5 in semi

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Scott Rodgers was on the verge of pitching his fifth one-hitter in a tournament baseball game Friday, but he was content with a five-hit victory in the end.

The bottom line was that Plymouth Salem survived another last-inning rally by Grosse Pointe North in the Class A semifinals and earned a berth in the final Saturday, 6-5.

The Rocks, who clinched their second state title by beating Rochester the next day, seemed in control of the situation, leading 6-1 entering the seventh inning at Bailey Park in Battle Creek.

But the Norsemen (21-15), who scored six runs in the seventh to beat Royal Oak Dondero 10-7 in the regional final, scored four runs and nearly did it again.

Rodgers took a one-hitter into the finale but gave up four more before Eric Nielson silenced North by getting Tim Sacka to hit into a game-ending double play.

"I WAS getting tired, and I couldn't get my curveball over," said Rodgers, who struck out eight and walked five in 6⅓ innings to run his record to 13-2. "I was just trying to throw my fastball and get them to hit it on the ground but it didn't happen."

10-pin alley

Al Harrison

Bowling popular topic

BOWLING HAS ITS place in our society as a "culture medium."

To explain, it is a hot topic around the office cooler, the barber shops and beauty salons, the "bunch" down at the corner bar, the singles mingles and the early morning stop at the donut shop.

Wherever friends meet, the subject of bowling always gets its share of attention. Even the advertising media gets into the act occasionally. Noticed the new Amoco commercial with the bowling ball getting more energy to knock down the pins?

If you overhear what people are talking about now that the basketball season is finally over and done with, the subject quite often is about their average, or the new ball, or where the league is going to bowl next season, or joining a new league.

Bowlers are everywhere. They come in all shapes and sizes. At just about any age, both genders are about equally represented, and just about anyone can be a bowler. There are organized and sanctioned leagues for the blind, the deaf, the paralyzed in wheelchairs, the retirees, the little ones, all abilities from the classics to the duffers.

There is an abundance of tournament activity around, the big $50,000 first prize in the Hamtramck singles classic, or just some late-night action at the local lanes. Within our local counties, there are about 250,000 people who bowl, some only occasionally, others who are very active and compete in several leagues. It is in the organized league that bowling, the "culture medium" really takes form.

Anyone who bowls can think of all the people they have met in leagues. If America is the "melting pot," then it is the bowling leagues that really bring this out, as people who might not usually mingle, have a chance to get to know others of diverse ethnic or racial roots.

Most fraternal organizations have their own bowling leagues. The churches make up a large part of the bowling population, and there are many leagues formed within the business and industrial sector.

As an example, Ford Motor Co. has all kinds of leagues going on all over the area, sometimes, the entire plant. Or it may be a department. This community has workers competing with each other on the lanes, and getting acquainted through the common love of bowling. My wife wanted to join the mixed league with the idea that she might just make one or two new friends. As it turned out, she made a whole lot of new friends.

In this column, I never use the words "bowling alley." The bowling industry wanted to clean up the image of smoke-filled hangouts to a more upscale family-oriented recreational center. "Alleys" were replaced by "centers" or "lanes," and the "gutter ball" is now "in the channel."

By referring to bowling as a "culture medium" I mean to say that it is a part of our lives, as American as hot dogs and apple pie and accessible to just about everyone. You can go bowling year-round, in just about any kind of weather, and it is a relatively inexpensive form of entertainment and recreation.

● One of the all-time greats in local women's bowling, Helen Shablis, passed away last week at her daughter's home in Livonia. She was 78.

She won 13 individual championships, 12 doubles titles and 15 team titles spanning a 33-career which included election to the Michigan Women's Bowling Association Hall of Fame in 1978, a year after induction to the WIBC hall, and was elected to the Detroit Bowling Hall of Fame in 1965.

Salem wins 'A' crown

Terry Thomson and Gary Corona had back-to-back hits, and a walk to Jeff Jensen loaded the bases for Eric Merte, who singled home a run. Paul Straske followed with a three-run double to make it 6-5.

"The circumstances were identical to the regional final — the score of the game, the same batter leading off," North coach Frank Sumbera said. "It was deja vu."

Salem coach John Gravlin said the Norsemen reminded him of hard-hitting Westland John Glenn.

"People just don't hit Scott Rodgers," he said. "Nobody hits him hard and they did in the last inning. But we're here because of Scott Rodgers."

The Rocks lost some of their intensity in the last inning, according to Gravlin, who thought it wouldn't have happened if the final game was to follow immediately, as is the case in district and regional tournaments.

"AS FUNNY as it may seem, I thought we were pretty consistent," Gravlin said. "If anything we were too complacent in the last inning. We started thinking a little bit about (Saturday).

"If it had been the seventh inning of the state or regional final, I think we would have been sky-high to go out there and get the job done. We learned a lesson; fortunately, it was a lesson we survived."

North scored an unearned run in the third inning to lead 1-0. Jensen got aboard with a fielder's choice, stole second and scored on consecutive errors.

Salem tied it in the fourth an RBI single by Rodgers, and the Rocks scored three runs on two hits and four errors in the fifth to lead 4-1. Ed Gundry and Scott Bright scored on miscues, and Jeff Belisle's sacrifice fly scored Eric Nielson.

North committed seven errors altogether, including one that led to a Kevin Craggs run in the sixth. Salem scored twice in that inning, with Scott Niemiec hitting an RBI single. Craggs led off the sixth with a double.

"It's like 'If it's hit on the ground you're safe,'" Sumbera said. "There was a questionable call where they were late making the decision at first. But we definitely did not execute and we didn't make the plays, and that put pressure on (losing pitcher) Marc (Adams).

"IN THE regional final, we made only one error. We just couldn't pick it up. It could have been a little tightness."

Adams went 5⅔ innings, giving up nine hits and six runs. He struck out four and walked two. Jason Jaworski got the last two outs of the sixth.

"Marc pitched very well for us," Sumbera said. "The strain on him was more because of the defense than him. When things start to crumble around you, you start to get a little weary out on the mound."

Nielson, Rodgers and Bright had two hits apiece for Salem, and Gundry scored two runs. Straske had a pair of doubles for the Norsemen.

SC lands new volleyball recruits blockers Renea Bonser and Kari VanDeusen and outside hitter Stephanie Jandasek returning.

The biggest holes created by the losses were at setter, where Sproul dominated for two seasons, and at outside hitter, where Love and Oparka were overpowering.

Teeters' top two additions should help compensate for Sproul's loss (Sproul has signed with Central Michigan). Keli Haeger, 5-foot-9 from Livonia Ladywood, and Nancy Ehlert, 5-7 from Monroe St. Mary's, will both be setters in Teeters' modified 6-2 system, a switch from the 5-1 (one setter) he used the last two seasons.

Both have all-around ability that pleases Teeters. Haeger, who played for Teeters at Ladywood, has shown marked improvement since starting a weight-training program.

"THAT'S NOTHING compared to what she's given us lately," said Teeters of Haeger's impressive high school career. "She's become an awesome hitter. She's dominating as an outside hitter and setter for us.

"She has an average jump, but it's improving because of her work with weights. And she has a quicker arm swing from the added strength from weights."

Teeters said he had "always seen something in Keli others don't have, and it's just starting to come out." That "something" was her resiliency and a low injury factor; now, he said, there's a "new addition — her dedication to weights."

Ehlert comes to SC in the footsteps of her sister Jill, who starred for the Lady Ocelots from 1986-88 before playing two seasons at the University of Toledo, where she served as team captain. Nancy is a little smaller (than Jill) but has a much more aggressive personality."

NANCY, WHO — like Haeger — will be both setting and playing outside hitter, is an "extremely good defensive player. She's probably our most versatile player."

Two of Teeters' other three recruits will be counted on to help fill the team's greatest need — outside hitter. "I'm more worried about outside hitter than setter," the SC coach said. "We have six, but do we have someone like Elena (Oparka, who is headed for Madonna University) who can dominate out there?"

Teeters is hoping Haeger, Ehlert, 5-9 Julie Wood (from Harper Woods Lutheran East HS) and 5-7 Carmen Cupitt (from Ypsilanti HS) will offset the losses.

Wood is "a very strong athlete," said Teeters. "She has good upper body strength, and has the potential to be a very effective spin server, like Patti Konicki (a 1989 SC grad) and Alicia Love (class of '90). We didn't have that last year. And she has very good reaction time."

WHILE CUPITT has outstanding athletic ability, Teeters said she "needs work on her skills. But she can be an explosive outside hitter, an Elena Oparka type. In fact, that's what I would call her — a clone of Elena Oparka."

One recruit Teeters is counting on is Denise Walsh, 5-3 from Westland (Wayne Memorial HS). Walsh is very much like another former Lady Ocelot — Alicia Love, who although only 5-foot tall performed exceptionally well as an outside hitter.

"She's a great defensive player," Teeters said of Walsh, "and she's an unbelievable athlete."

signed won't want to be just fill-ins; according to Abraham, "We were fortunate to get some fine players who could play for us right now."

Leading his list is Schoolcraft College graduate Elena Oparka, a 5-foot-8 outside hitter from Madison Heights. Oparka will have junior eligibility.

His four freshmen signees are Farmington Hills Mercy graduate Maureen Paulin, a 5-9 outside hitter; Sue Bell, a 5-6 outside hitter from Livonia Stevenson; Julie Adams, a 6-foot middle hitter from Temperance Bedford; and Carrie Jenkins, a 5-7 middle hitter from Lapeer East.

Oparka "brings in a lot of experience," said Abraham. "She's a powerful outside hitter who can be a dominant force in our league.

"She's got a powerful right hand and a good arm swing. She'll be right up there with the starters, and will challenge for a starting spot."

The freshmen, Abraham believes, will need more time to adjust to college-level volleyball than Oparka. Schoolcraft College reached the National Junior College Athletic Association Tournament in both of her seasons there.

EACH OF the freshmen, however, have credentials strong enough to make Abraham believe they will push the current starters for playing time.

Paulin was first team all-Catholic League and all-Central Division, was a member of the all-Observer team and was second team all-state. She recently collected the Garn-Griffin Award, presented to Mercy's scholar-athlete of the year. Paulin also played basketball and softball for the Marlins.

Abraham, who coached volleyball at Redford Bishop Borgess before going to Madonna, has known Paulin since she was in the ninth grade. "She's a fierce competitor," he said. "She's very consistent, has a great work ethic, fine all-around skills and a great attitude. She was the best player on Mercy's team."

Considering the Marlins reached the Class A Final Four her junior year and were Catholic League champs the past two seasons, that says a lot. Abraham thinks Paulin will help Madonna at several spots — either right or left outside hitter and anywhere in the back row.

BELL WAS third team all-state, first team all-region, all-Western Lakes Activities Association and all-Observer. She, too, was recognized for her academic accomplishments when she collected the Briske Award, presented to Stevenson's top female scholar-athlete.

Bell "is another good all-around player. Her biggest qualities are her passing ability and tenacious work on defense. We'll probably rely on her more for her defense this year, only because of our depth at outside hitter."

Adams helped guide Temperance Bedford to the Class A state finals, where the Mules lost to Livonia Churchill.

but have still been adhered to. The softball team, embarking on its initial season this spring, lost its top two pitchers to academic-related problems.

"You have to have a sound academic philosophy," insisted Summers. "Each coach knows the purpose of the university is education."

STILL, MAKING more stringent academic requirements doesn't necessarily eliminate a problem. Indeed, it may create more.

"If you really look at it, athletes have many more demands than normal students," said EMU's Shelton. "They have to pass so many credits, plus they have to practice 12 months a year.

"I'm thinking what's most in need of attention is the demand on student-athletes' time. If I could give a student-athlete anything, it would be more time."

PARTNERSHIP FOR A DRUG-FREE AMERICA

'The play's the thing,' but not every thing

For the best selection of seats on busy weekends, we now order in February when the schedule is announced. One year our friends had a last minute change in plans, but the Festival was most accommodating and tickets were conveniently exchanged for another date. With a Detroit phone number (964-4668), orders and changes are quite convenient.

A variety of plays are scheduled each year. This year, in addition to the usual Shakespeare plays ("Hamlet, Much Ado About Nothing," etc.) we're sure you'll enjoys Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," and Rogers and Hammerstein's "Carousel." We know Stratford will put on Broadway-caliber performances. In fact, some of our warmest theater memories are of Stratford's performances of "Cabaret" and "Guys and Dolls."

reader's report

Lodging is perhaps the next most important consideration in planning your visit. Stratford is famous for its accommodations, all excellent for what they represent. In addition to the bed-and-breakfasts (which the Festival will book for visitors) several good hotels and motels come to mind.

We like the Queen's Inn. It has been completely remodeled in the last three years and is now owned and run by The Elora Mill Inn. It is well located and the rooms are comfortable. It is particularly convenient for its handicap access.

We also have enjoyed the Stone Maiden Inn on Church Street. It's really a charming bed-and-breakfast, and most of the rooms have private baths. (Some have whirlpools and canopied beds.)

You may also want to consider the loft studio rooms at the Jester's Arms over Bentley's Restaurant. Bentley's is a neat place with a lively crowd 'till late at night, so it may be a tad noisy.

The Festival Inn, just outside town, is really very nice and has an indoor pool. You'll have to drive to the theaters though, and that may be a drawback. Similarly, the Westover Park in St. Mary's (15 minutes from the Stratford theaters), is most charming since its refurbishment four years ago. And the dining room is very good.

In addition to the plays, there's much to do in and around Stratford. We still find the shopping very attractive.

There seem to be more interesting shops each year. Our favorites continue to be VS Galleries and Bradshaws. VS has a remarkable collection of Canadiana, from native carvings to wood and leather handmade crafts to interesting art prints. Bradshaws maintains an excellent collection of fine china and crystal and is always helpful in packaging it and preparing the paperwork to get the tax refunds that make the purchases so attractive. This year, Bradshaws has added a gourmet kitchen shop and a Crabtree and Evelyn collection.

There are many other good shops for Scotch woolens and china novelties, and several excellent and unusual bookstores. The Festival shop across from the theater has an excellent selection of Shakespearean stuff and a range of souvenirs for friends and family.

We also enjoy dining in Stratford. Our favorite for fine dining is Rundle's. But others we've met are equally fond of the Church and the Old Prune. None are inexpensive, but the quality is excellent; and compared to Detroit prices, we think they are excellent. We also enjoy The Keystone Alley and Woolfys, almost as good food, but with less service, they are more modestly priced. Bentley's and the Olde English Parlour are also worth noting. The crowd at Bentley's suggests that it's the favorite of locals.

If you're willing to take a 15-25 minute drive, we're sure you'll enjoy the Waterlot in Hamburg (Waterloo); and the Westover Park in St. Mary's. Oh yes. To assure seating, we suggest reservations. (Bentley's doesn't generally accept reservations.)

Last but not least, we hope you'll find time to take in some of the area's "tourist highlights." In Stratford, we recommend you book a Sunday morning tour behind the Festival theater stage. You'll be amazed at all that goes into great theater. The Stratford gallery is also worth a stop to see famous scenes, performers and costumes from past productions.

A picnic along the lake is delightful on a sunny day. Several local shops prepare excellent baskets to suit your budget. Also, depending on when you Stratford, there may be related events scheduled around the plays.

Outside of town, three side trips come to mind. There are many charming towns within a 30-mile radius Gene and Lynne Loren are West Bloomfield residents.

"We need all kinds of families," Elizabeth said. "More boys than girls come to the U.S., so we are always looking for homes for boys. That can be difficult because the American students who express interest are often girls!

"We also occasionally place a foreign student with a family that has no children, especially a student who grew up as an only child in an adult environment. Those families look to the children of their friends and relatives for companions."

Elizabeth also stressed that foreign students should be treated as members of the family. "Sometimes we have families that treat them as guests, and after a few weeks the family feels stressed.

"It really doesn't cost money or hard work to host a foreign student for the summer. Add another plate to the table, a few more dirty clothes to the laundry, and the rest takes care of itself."

Each foreign student brings his or her own health and liability insurance and spending money.

If you would like to host one of the 180 French, German and Spanish students, mostly boys, who want to spend four weeks experiencing American life this summer, call Evelyn or Julian Price at (313) 626-6641 or the national office toll-free at (800) 622-3533.

Better hurry up. French students arrive July 10, followed by a second group July 28; Spanish students July 5 and again July 30; German students will be here July 20. They all speak English.

Michigan law requires that safety chains be attached to the hitch in case of malfunction.

Before driving on the highway, however, even experienced drivers should maneuver the trailer at low speeds, preferably in an empty parking lot, remembering that it can take at least twice as long to stop, pass and pull into traffic.

Packing the inside of the car takes equal skill and, again, the owner's manual should be checked to determine the total weight capacity of your vehicle.

If you have a tall load in the car or are pulling a trailer, Cullen says it is imperative to have outside mirrors on each side of the car to "see the blind spots."

Routine maintenance calls for such things as removing snow tires and checking for tire wear and proper inflation; checking coolant and oil levels; replacing cracked or frayed hoses and belts; replacing dirty afr filters and streaky windshield wipers; adding windshield washer fluid, if necessary, and replacing broken headlights.

Cullen also recommends taking a first aid kit and emergency tools. "For example, in summer remove the snow shovel from your trunk and replace it with pliers, a screwdriver, signal flares and a flashlight," he said.

TRAVEL

IRIS SANDERSON JONES

Vacation at home with foreign guests

Some people travel by boarding a plane and flying across the world. Others travel by staying home and letting the world come to them. Both kinds of traveler are involved in "homestay" programs that encourage students to live in foreign homes and locals to host students from foreign lands.

These programs come under many names, but the name I am interested in at the moment is Nacel. What does it mean? I asked Evelyn Prince of West Bloomfield. She and her husband, Julian, coordinate Nacel Cultural Exchanges in Michigan.

"It's the short form of a French word, nacelle, that means the basket under a hot air balloon. It is our logo because it represents the adventurous spirit needed to explore new lands and cultures."

Jeanette Champine of Milford will be on her way to France and Jeffrey Harris of Howell will be on his way to Spain when the plane load of Michigan students takes off in July. There are still a few spaces for students who want to take part in a four-week summer stay in Europe.

Homestays have added new dimensions to the lives of Elizabeth Garvey of Howell and her two children. Susan was at Alma College and Christopher was still at Howell High School when they welcomed a Spanish student called Julen into their home five summers ago.

The following year, Susan visited Julen's family when she took the second semester of her sophomore year in Spain. "Julen warned his family to speak slowly, because Susan didn't speak Spanish well, but Susan had learned a lot of Spanish by then and she surprised them all," Elizabeth said.

Another Spanish student called Izaskun was the Garvey family's next guest. "She walked through the door and it was love at first hug," Elizabeth said. "Ten months later, Susan went to Madrid as a translator for an international law firm and spent the first month with Izaskun's family.

"Since then, several Howell students have been to those two Spanish homes."

Nacel was launched by language teachers in France in 1957 and came to America in 1969. The non-profit organization arranges 17,000 international exchanges a year.

That didn't surprise me. What did surprise me was the effect that Desert Storm has had on this year's arrangements. Everybody was canceling trips when the Scuds were landing in the Middle East last winter; families that planned to send their sons and daughters to Europe canceled their trips, too.

As a result, Nacel still has openings on flights leaving Detroit in July and August for France and Spain. Nacel organizes summer programs in Europe and West Africa. The cost for students leaving Detroit is $1,435 to $1,620; in France or Spain, optional sightseeing is offered.

Students age 13-18 are invited to participate in three- or four-week homestays in France, Germany, Spain or C'ote d'Ivoire.

Students age 16-19 can do homestay/study programs in Ireland and the Soviet Union. Language camps are offered in Paris and Madrid for beginning French and Spanish language students age 13-16.

Learn how to tow a trailer properly

It's about that time to pile the family, the dog and the golf clubs into the family car, attach the boat trailer to the back and take off.

Vacations beckon, but unless you want to spend hours standing around a repair shop instead of chasing golf balls, you'd better think about that trailer and how you pack the car.

And, while you're at it, AAA Michigan suggests some routine car maintenance tips to help ensure a trouble-free trip.

Towing a boat, camper or dirt bike on a trailer not only takes getting used to, but makes your car work harder.

Exceeding the maximum rating for towing capacity could mean more than damaging your car, it can void the warranty. Consult your owner's manual for specifics.

"Further, this could drastically change the steering characteristics, which can lead to fish-tailing and veering into the next lane," said Robert V. Cullen, AAA Michigan Community Safety.

Basically, there are three kinds of hitches: Class A attaches to the bumper and, generally, is capable of pulling up to 2,000 pounds. Classes B and C attach to the frame of the towing vehicle and can pull up to 3,500 pounds and 10,000 pounds, respectively.

Hitches that attach to the frame distribute the weight of the trailer along the frame, which permits better handling of both units. Excess weight in the rear can make braking or steering difficult in an emergency.

"Alas poor Yorick, I knew him well." Thousands will watch Hamlet say that on stage this summer at the Stratford, Ontario theater festival. Also to be performed are "Much Ado About Nothing, Our Town, Carousel" and others.

Discovering Stratford's Style

By Iris Sanderson Jones
special writer

"Annas Banahas is a great place for dessert after the theater." "We always stay at a bed-and-breakfast by the Avon River." "Buy your festival tickets in February for the best seats." "Village Studios has the best display of Canadian crafts in Stratford."

I heard those voices in my ear as our tour bus drove into Stratford, Ontario, recently and I loved it. If you want inside information on a travel destination, ask somebody who has been there. Friends who picnic on the riverbank. Neighbors who stay at a bed-and-breakfast farmhouse. Readers who send insider tips.

It was late afternoon and the lowering sun was backlighting the velvet-green grass, glowing on red barns and sculpting the horses, cows and farm silos that are common to southwestern Ontario.

By theater time, there was a glass gleam of setting sun on the Avon River, downhill from the famous tent-shaped roof of the Festival Theater. Four trumpeters stood on the roof to blow the signal: 10 minutes to showtime.

Most people in the lobby had tickets, but a few lined up for rush seats ordered that morning. Cary Gersh of Bloomfield Hills remembers when he traveled to Stratford as a high school student, slept in the car and bought $2 rush seats sold on the morning of the performance; they're $28 now.

"Rush seats were at the top of the house, so they gave us a great view of the empty seats below. We would rush down at intermission and fill them!"

Cary, a graphic artist at Skyline Studios in Southfield, comes to Stratford now with his wife Thomai, a Bloomfield Hills schools psychologist. They buy tickets as soon as sales open in February.

"You can see pretty well from most seats, but when we come this far and stay overnight we want the best seats. Shakespeare is esoteric sometimes and we like to see the expressions on the actors' faces."

The Festival Theater has 16 rows in a steep semicircle, with a seven-row balcony above it. There are no barriers, and you can see the stage quite well from any seat, but my experts favored the center seats downstairs and the front row of the balcony. Their least favorite were the least expensive seats on each end of the semicircle.

The lights went down and the audience hushed as a brace of lancers and laughing ladies began "Much Ado About Nothing" on the small circular stage.

Anastasia and Andy Morowski, who sat next to me in the front row of the balcony, were in Stratford for the first time. Stacy was one of the 10 winners of radio station WJR's Stratford Festival Contest. They were looking forward to exploring the town.

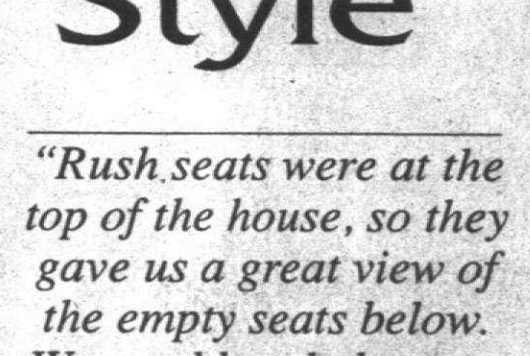
THE TOWN

It is easy enough to find your way around the well-known parts of Stratford, built around the city hall in Market Square. The city hall has been described as a great Victorian monster of red brick, frosted with white cupolas and a clock tower, but when developers tried to tear it down in the 1970s, the citizens threw them out of town.



SCOTT WISHANT

Many visitors to Stratford take time out between plays for picnic lunches by the Avon River.

From city hall you can see the Avon Theater, second of Stratford's three important theaters, the shops that circle the square and the park that fringes the Avon River at the end of Downie Street.

I followed the park path downhill past the flagged skyline of the Memorial Gardens and the bronze triumph and despair of the World War I memorial to the bright plastic colors of paddle boats on the Avon River.

Joggers, walkers and bikers have worn a path down both sides of the river. They photograph the 19th-century bridge and the courthouse reflected in the early morning sun, picnic and play on the riverbanks beside the Festival Theater. The Iris is the official Stratford flower, but foot soldiers explore the Shakespearean Gardens for the 60 varieties of flowers mentioned in Shakespeare's plays.

Thomai Gersh advises: "Get a picnic lunch and sit by the river. You can bring your own or order from a list of places supplied by the tourist bureau. I recommend a great bookstore called Fanfare Books in an old Victorian house. Sometimes they serve tea in the back."

There is a visitor center in the small round building that hangs over the river near the war memorials. Ask for a list of the bed-and-breakfasts in town or the popular b-and-b farms just out of town. Or write to Tourism Stratford, P.O. Box 1818, 88 Wellington St., Stratford, Ontario, Canada, N5A 6W1.

'The play's the thing,' but not every thing

By Lynne Loren and Gene Loren special writers

The high point of each of our visits to Stratford, Ontario since 1984 has been the Festival itself.

The first year we went somewhat spontaneously and purchased our tickets at the last moment. While we don't recommend that style, it will work in most cases.

MOVING PICTURES

As an outlaw, Robin Hood (Kevin Costner) and his friend Azeem (Morgan Freeman) take refuge in the forest from Gisborne's soldiers in "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves."

Costner's 'Robin Hood' is an entertaining adventure

No matter what role he plays, Kevin Costner always seems the same — but he does it so well that no one will mind that his Robin Hood sounds strangely like a midwesterner caught in a crowd of Englishman stranded in Sherwood Forest.

"Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" (A-, PG-13, 140 minutes) is a modern, upbeat version of the old legend which maintains an appropriate 12th Century flavor. It was a time when merry olde England suffered from the cruelty of the barons who exploited the country and its population while King Richard the Lionhearted was away from his throne fighting in the Crusades.

Chief among those evil fellows was the Sheriff of Nottingham, a black-hearted villain of the old school, played to the corny and very enjoyable hilt by Alan Rickman. He sneers, connives and really gets into evil with a capital "E."

Among his most dastardly deeds, he frames Robin's father, Lord Locksley (Brian Blessed), as a devil worshipper and destroys Locksley Castle — to say nothing of what he does to the good Lord Locksley.

MEANWHILE ROBIN languishes in a Turkish prison, a captured Crusader about to loose his hand for stealing bread. He escapes with a Moor, Azeem (Morgan Freeman), and they return to England. Their 20th Century repartee and sly glances throughout the film set the rather arch, wry tone of this "Robin Hood."

The film is tongue-in-cheek all the way and to take it any other way spoils the fun. Neither Errol Flynn nor Douglas Fairbanks could have swung from castle wall to castle wall with any more pizzazz than Costner does in this latest rendition of the old legend.

Naturally, we can't have old-fashioned romantic adventure without a love interest and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio is a charming Maid Marian who knows when to don armour and fight and when to shrink back against the wall and shriek.

"Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" never looses sight of the fact that 12th Century England was a brutal, medieval place, but it manages to avoid contemporary excesses in presenting that violence. Low light-levels and quick cutting maintain a refreshing, old-fashioned distance from the worst elements of reality.

It all adds up to a very entertaining, romantic adventure for the entire family.

STILL PLAYING:

"Backdraft" (C-, R, 130 minutes).

"City Slickers" (A-, PG-13, 108 minutes).

"Dances With Wolves" (A, PG-13, 180 minutes).

"Dice Rules" (F, NC-17, 87 minutes).

"Don't Tell Mom the Babysitter's Dead" (C, PG-13, 95 minutes).

"Drop Dead Fred" (B+, PG-13, 100 minutes).

"The Five Heartbeats" (A+, R).

"FX2: The Deadly Art of Illusion" (C+, PG-13, 105 minutes).

"Hudson Hawk" (A, PG-13, 97 minutes).

"Jungle Fever" (B+, R, 125 minutes).

Excellent performances combined with Spike Lee's fine writing and direction equal a compelling look at an inter-racial love affair.

"Mortal Thoughts" (B, R, 104 minutes).

Poorly structured plot detracts from excellent performances by Demi Moore and Glenne Headly as New Jersey beauticians.

"Only the Lonely" (B, PG-13, 105 minutes).

John Candy is a nice-guy Chicago cop who lives with his mother (Maureen O'Hara) and falls in love with Ally Sheedy.

"A Rage in Harlem" (C+, R, 110 minutes).

Just too much packed into this star-studded romantic, comic, adventure of southern gold in Harlem with all the greedy folks out in force.

"The Silence of the Lambs" (C-, R, 115 minutes).

Disgusting film about FBI Cadet (Jodi Foster) confronting cannibalistic psychiatrist and serial killer. Despite technical accomplishment, this film is only for those who take ghoulish delight in the suffering of others.

"Sleeping With the Enemy" (C+, R, 95 minutes).

Julia Roberts' excellent performance as battered wife who takes matters into her own hands can't

'Kane': It's still brilliant

By John Monaghan
special writer

"What's all the fuss over this 'Citizen Kane' thing?" someone asked me recently. "How great can a movie be made by a fat man best known for hawking Paul Masson wine on TV?"

A half-hour later, he was sorry he asked.

I'm not in the minority when I say that "Citizen Kane" is the best film ever made. Film critic polls often place it at the top of the list.

And with this year marking the 50th anniversary of "Citizen Kane," The Fox Theatre has gotten ahold of a pristine new print. A 10-day run begins Thursday night.

Two words sum up the greatness of "Citizen Kane:" Orson Welles. Though Pauline Kael, in her famous essay, "Raising Kane," insists that Welles took far too much credit for the production, it most certainly would not exist without him.

When RKO contracted him to direct, write and star in a picture, he was only in his mid-20s, fresh from setting the radio and theatrical world on its ear with his Mercury Theater productions.

Meetings with co-writer Herman J. Mankiewicz turned up the idea for a film about a yellow journalist named Charles Foster Kane, a character based freely on the life of William Randolph Hearst. They kept their ideas under wraps, knowing that RKO wouldn't scrap a project, even one this controversial, if it was far enough along.

WELLES BROUGHT several of his Mercury Theater cronies along to star in the film, including Joseph Cotten as Kane's friend and conscience Jed Leland, Agnes Moorehead as the mother who gives young

VIDEO VIEWING

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

The mid-June video releases selfconsciously are shooting for a masculine image befitting Father's Day festivities and recent celebrations of troops returning from the Middle East.

HBO Video re-released 60 titles in six different genres for the father who really takes his video collection seriously. Priced in the $10 to $30 range, there's sport videos, including "Boxing's Best Series" with 15 titles and "The Record Breakers of Sports" for those who want to see Hank Aaron's 715th home and other moments of competitive excellence.

"The Warlord Series" highlights seven major personalities of World War II while that period is dissected extensively in the 26-volume "World at War Series".

CONTINUING THE assumption that fathers are only interested in war and sports, RCA Columbia Pictures Home Video announces a seven-title military package for release this coming Wednesday. Six are rereleases but the seventh — "The True Story of GLORY Continues" (1990, NR, color, 45 minutes) — is of note.

"The True Story of GLORY Continues" is narrated by Morgan Freeman and recounts the history of the 54th Massachusetts Regiment, the first U.S. Army unit composed of African Americans. This documentary utilizes period photos and sketches, previously unseen footage from "Glory" and moving scenes from the 1989 re-burial and memorial service for members of the 54th Massachusetts Regiment.

"The True Story of GLORY Continues" is available as a single for $15 or in a special gift-pack with "Glory" for just under $30.

Another war and another returning hero, this one unwelcome, hits the video racks Thursday. "Welcome Home" (1989, color, R, 92 minutes, stars Kris Kristofferson as Jake, a Vietnam-era pilot who disappeared over Cambodia in 1970. Declared dead, he turns up 17 years later to find his wife (Jobeth Williams) remarried and the Army, as well, embarrassed by his return.

FIRST RELEASED in 1989, "Welcome Home" was Oscar-winning director Franklin J. Schaffner's ("Patton") last film and a long way from his best.

Finally, the ultimate insult for Father's or any other day, "One Night with Dice" is advertised as "guaranteed to offend" which is not exactly an innovative line when it comes to Andrew Dice Clay.

From the available descriptions, this sounds like a repeat of other Dice tapes and films. There's not much new a man like that can offer. Once you've heard his obscenities, you've heard his obscenities. Watching the paint dry is a more refreshing pastime.

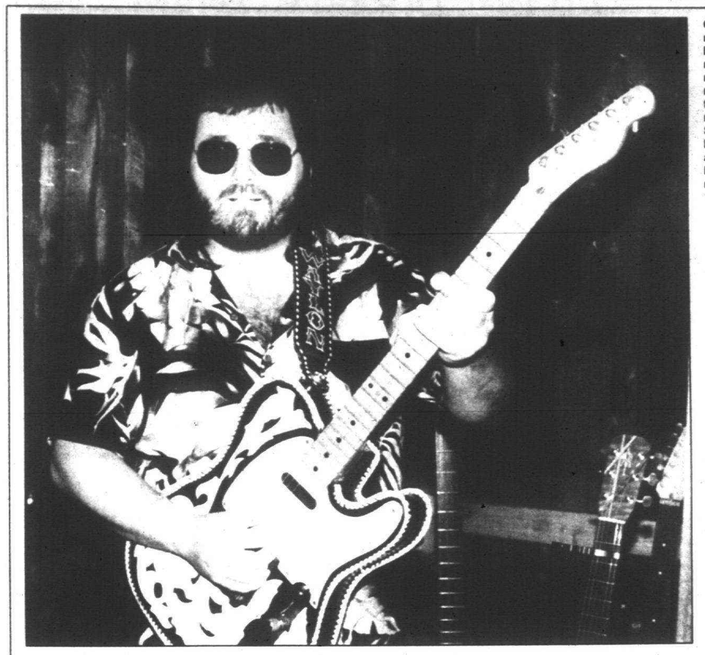
STREET BEATS



Carl Brouse's most well-known number, "American Hotel," a rather bitter factual narrative about Steven Foster's death, appeared on his first album, released in 1983.

Carl Brouse: Is anyone listening?

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

A songwriter sweats a little, bleeds a little and wonders a lot.

For instance, who will perform his song, who listens to his composition and whether they will like it. Once in a while, Carl Brouse has to find out for himself.

So Brouse and noted Austin, Texas, guitarist John Reed will perform Saturday, June 22, at the Birmingham Unitarian Church as part of the La Casa folk series presented by Dave Brogren.

The session will be recorded for a live album, a long-awaited follow-up to Brouse's highly acclaimed, difficult-to-find "American Hotel." That's only part of the reason Brouse is returning to Birmingham.

"The audience he's (Brogren) cultivated is really in tune to songwriters," Brouse said in a telephone interview from his home in New Hampshire. "It's like you're performing for other songwriters. They pick up on everything you do. They have trained ears."

Brouse describes the experience as a litmus test for his work, which is often filled with barren imagery and wanderlust. k.d. lang and the Reclines have recorded Brouse's "Wise Blood," but the song has yet to show up on an album.

HIS MOST well-known number, "American Hotel," is a rather bitter factual narrative about Stephen Foster falling out of bed drunk and accidentally cutting his throat and bleeding to death. The song is on Brouse's first album, which was released in 1983 on DTI.

"American Hotel" is up for an award in a Billboard magazine songwriting contest.

The song came out of a conversation between Brouse and fellow songwriter Tom Russell at an art exhibit in San Francisco. The discussion turned to the tragic death of Foster, who is considered this country's most prolific songwriter with "Oh Suzanna" and "Swanee River."

"I remember what Tom said when he dropped me off that night. He said, 'If you don't write it, I will.' The next morning I wrote it in about five minutes.

"It's easy to write a love song. It's harder to find other subjects like Stephen Foster to write about. I used his own imagery to tell his life story. Those only come along once in a lifetime."

ALONG WITH telling a sad story, the song also reveals part of Brouse's songwriting process. He remembers having an argument with Ian Tyson, with whose band Brouse performed along with Russell.

Tyson's contention was a songwriter should write what he knows.

Pining away for more of that jazz

By Ryan Tutak
special writer

British saxophonist Courtney Pine plays a cosmopolitan style of jazz at a time when the musicians who inspired him, the Marsalis brothers, are preaching a parochial return to jazz standards.

Pine, 26, was performing in reggae bands and just discovering jazz records when he saw saxophonist Branford Marsalis and trumpeter Wynton Marsalis on British TV in 1982.

"It was just a matter of, 'Well, if they can do it, so can I,'" Pine said in a conversation with Branford Marsalis in Interview magazine.

"This jazz thing was unlike anything that my friends knew about, but it just seemed to be right for me. And the more I listened to it, the more I wanted to play it."

The Marsalises heralded a jazz renaissance in the early 1980s with engaging covers of songs from the canons of bebop and swing. They sanctified their cause (gentlemen's wardrobes and self-righteousness).

Pine has retained the ethic of looking sharp — he appeared in an ad for the Gap in Rolling Stone this spring. And he has retained a third Marsalis brother, Delfeayo, to produce his latest and fifth album, "Within the Realms of Our Dreams."

BUT PINE has rejected the provincial repertoire of Branford and Wynton Marsalis. He invigorates his new record with strains of calypso,

REVIEWS

THE BEST OF THE WATERBOYS — The Waterboys

Usually greatest hits packages only deserve a cursory mention, but The Waterboys are a notable exception. And for many reasons.

First, this band's earlier work has virtually went unnoticed in the United States except by the most devoted of Waterboys zealots, including "This Is The Sea." Secondly, this compilation chronicles the evolution of a band and its enigmatic creator, Mike Scott, and his eventual reconciliation with what he called "demons . . . cursing in the cave of my skull."

The Waterboys have always been marked by transformation throughout their 10-year musical career. Band members have come and gone, most notably World Party leader Karl Wallinger and noted violinist Steve Wickham.

This constant underlying tension has been parlayed into some of the most soulful and bracing rock'n'roll of 1980s and, by contrast, later led to some stunning Irish folk ballads.

Scott's waxing of wistfulness, pain and metaphor along with Anthony Thistlethwaite's adroit musicianship (sax, mandolin and organ) have been a common thread throughout Waterboy works.

"A Girl Called Johnny," a saxophone-smoked number from the group's self-titled debut LP, kicks off the project.

A majority of the material is from the band's two most critically-acclaimed, not to mention completely divergent, efforts "This Is The Sea" and "Fisherman's Blues."

"The Whole of the Moon," "Spirit" and "Don't Bang a Drum," off of "This Is the Sea" are the most lethally charged, spiritualy rich songs ever recorded by The Waterboys. Also included is a live version of "Old England," in which Scott paints a desolate picture of a dying empire where "children stare with heroin eyes."

Once the band relocated to Galway from Dublin by way of London from Edinburgh, one could suspect Scott finally found an inner peace that is reflected in Cupid-inspired numbers such as "A Man Is in Love" off the band's most recent LP "Room to Roam." It should come as no surprise, incidentally, that the package includes only one song and parts of another (fragments of "In Search of the Rose") from that album. A happy and content Scott apparently doesn't make for many waves.

DON'T CRY TOO HARD — The Leslie Spit Treeo

The Leslie 6pit Treeo learned its trade in the streets of Toronto, busking for coins of appreciation from passers-by probably en route to Eatons or Tim Horton Doughnuts. But "Don't Cry Too Hard" is far from a pedestrian effort.

And this Toronto three-piece has certainly scored a silver dollar with this 12-song effort on I.R.S. Records. Plying excellent vocal harmonies — no doubt honed from its street performing days — with a rich pageantry of folk, country and rock and roll, the Treeo could be one of the year's best kept secrets.

"Don't Cry Too Hard" is buoyed by an unrelenting passion. Sometimes it borders on grungy with the fuzz of the electric guitar. On other occasions it can be downright soulful with Laura Hubert's evocative vocals yearning for a better time and place.

One of the highlights on the album is "Make Me Angel," which soars to considerable heights with Hubert's full range of vocal pleading. Lines such as "Make me an angel that flies from Montgomery/Make me a poster of an old rodeo" become declarations with Hubert's throaty yowl.

But The Leslie Spit Treeo displays its musical dexterity, quickly bringing things to a simmer with a hushed folk ballad such as "Moon at Noon."

Not surprisingly, many of the numbers here speak of personal liberation, a freedom that rekindles a restless spirit associated with the '60s. The Leslie Spit Treeo also backs up its publicized environmental stances with some cutting lyrics in the rhythm-kicked splendor of "Heat" and "Dust."

Sings Hubert in "Heat," "Live for the gold as though we'll never grow old/Build ourselves a town and then we'll watch it all come down/Live our lives like we're never been told."

The country side of The Leslie Spit Treeo is revealed in the kazoo and twang of "Talkin'," not the kind of stuff expected from a band in the cosmopolitan hub of Toronto. Then again, the Cowboy Junkies didn't exactly come from Nashville either.

STREET SENSE

Life has its painful realities

Dear Barbara,

My child is 2½ years old. Because I work, I must leave her at day care everyday. The day care center is a good one, but I am still in conflict about this arrangement. My feelings are intensified by Janie's reaction to being left. She is angry and shows it.

How can I best handle her? I wish I did not have to work, but I am divorced, and I am responsible for my own support. In reality, there is no other possible solution. My own feelings of guilt are as hard to live with as my daughter's anger.

Guilty Mother

Dear Guilty Mother,

The dilemma you describe is a common one. It may help you to realize that there is a long history of leaving our children in the care of others. Museums have been made of some of the plantations in the South. In them, there were day care centers for black infants and children whose mothers had gone off to take care of white infants and children.

Painful realities like this one are a part of everyone's life. There was no time in the history of man that this was not true. Even babies must tolerate not getting what they want.

Your daughter wishes she could be with you when she cannot. Accept and understand her unhappiness. You are doing the best you can. Accept that too.

ska, hip hop and music that helped shaped jazz.

"'Within the Realms' or 'Our Dreams' is a concept that has grown from the Afro-American art form known to many as jazz," Pine said on the album's liner notes.

"After meeting Malian vocalist Salif Keita, I felt a need to learn more about the function of rhythm in African society. Many of the polyrhythms and polymeters used in these percussion ensembles are part of the traditional jazz vocabulary."

The record also reflects Pine's eclectic taste in American jazz.

There are treatments of "Una Muy Bonita" by "free jazz"- patriarch Ornette Coleman, "Donna Lee" by seminal beboper Charlie Parker and "Delfeayo's Dilemma" by Wynton Marsalis.

DESPITE DIFFERENCE in recording objectives, Pine said, he admires the Marsalises and that they are vital to jazz.

"I like their viewpoints in getting jazz music across," Pine said in a telephone interview from New York.

"In England young people don't even know about Duke Ellington. I wish I knew something about jazz music when I was 12. I'd be a better player than I am now. If there are people now who are trying to get that message across to people, then great."

"Within the Realm's" strongest, original compositions are Pine's impressions of African music.

"Zaire" is bright and bouncy and features a pair of saxophone solos that are astonishing for Pine's sheer speed and command of his instrument.

Indeed, Pine's youth, rigorous practicing regimen and talent may someday make him the fastest sax in jazz. He injects all of the songs on "Within the Realms" with swirling, breakneck improvisations that are frequently punctuated with single-note screams.

And his ear for a memorable phrase has stayed with him since his first album, "Journey to the Urge Within," which was the first jazz record to crack the British Top 40.

A melodic current runs throughout "Within the Realms," most notably on the melancholic ebb and flow of "A Slave's Tale."

SOME JAZZ critics have assailed Pine when he indulges in unbridled grandstands with a fine set of side men that includes bassist Charnett Moffett, who has played with modern jazz drummer Tony Williams.

And when Pine really does blow his lungs out, on "A Raggamuffin & His Lance," Jeff Watt's relentless drum rolls only make the song kick harder.

PINE BEGAN his ninth tour of the States June 2 with Moffett, pianist Cyrus Chestnut and drummer Rodney Barrage.

"It's been quite successful so far," Pine said about his shows in West Virginia and Philadelphia.

"It's been quite surprising. The people in England don't seem to understand what I'm trying to do. They look at me as if I'm some kind of alien. I've been introduced as a cabaret band from time to time.

"Americans are more informed about jazz. They come but expecting to hear something, and if they get it, they express themselves."

AFTER THE tour ends, Pine intends to continue bringing music from other cultures onto his records and into his performances.

"I'd like to incorporate an Indian sound into two or three albums.

"I'd like to play to more people in different parts of the world that I haven't touched on yet. I haven't been to India, China, Singapore or Greenland. And I haven't been to Africa which is most important to me.

ALTERNATIVE MOVIE

Charlie up for adoption; and George Coulouris as the legal guardian he despises.

Welles, of course, stars as Kane. He follows the character from a brash young man taking over a newspaper to a political hopeful rocked by scandal to an embittered old man locked away in his custom-built castle, Xanadu.

"Kane" is perhaps best known for its technical wizardry and camera work. Cinematographer Gregg Toland kept everything in deep focus and sometimes shot from a low angle, shooting toward visible ceilings for added realism.

Mark Robson and Robert Wise, later important directors themselves, used creative jump cuts to move from one scene to another. In one of the most startling, an exotic bird squawks into the frame for no apparent reason, segueing into an interview with one of Kane's former servants.

Countless sequences attest to the film's brilliance. The opening montage shows a glass snowfall scene, big-scale newsreel footage and dream-like images, dropping from the dying Kane's hands. Another scene shows Kane and his first wife, over the course of several years, growing physically and emotionally apart at the breakfast table.

"KANE" ORIGINALLY opened to mix reviews. Louella Parsons, a famous Hollywood columnist employed by the Hearst organization, lampooned the film any chance she got. More unbiased critics recognized its importance, while audiences remained aloof.

When the Academy Awards rolled around, "Kane" took a deserved award for Best Screenplay. The Best Picture statuette went instead to "How Green Was My Valley."

Welles never enjoyed the artistic freedom offered by "Citizen Kane" and much of his later work was marred by low budgets, unsympathetic studios and his own difficult ego.

"Citizen Kane" remains the high-water mark in Welles' career and for movies in general. For those who have seen it in film classes or on video, "Citizen Kane" at The Fox shouldn't be missed.

Brouse brings songs to Birmingham

"I said, 'You can write what you know, but take it to another back yard.' "

THIS WAS learned through years of constant writing and performing. Originally from the New England area, he ventured to Austin, Texas in the early '70s.

The place was rich with talented songwriters at the time with the likes of Jimmie Dale Gilmore and Butch Hancock.

"That's where I got going."

But it was in San Francisco where Brouse really made an impact. He performed the club circuit and most of the work that appears on "American Hotel" was written and recorded during that period. He eventually returned home to New Hampshire in 1986.

BROUSE TENDS to write songs in batches, he said. Some of the new material will be recorded Saturday at Birmingham Unitarian Church along with songs off of "American Hotel." Sometimes the difficult part is to get others to record them.

k.d. lang performed "Honky Tonk Hearts" at an Amnesty International benefit a few years ago. Brouse happened to see it on television.

"It made me feel strange. I was sort of taking a nap at the time . . . and all of a sudden you're hearing your song. The down side of it was I didn't receive a dime for it. I heard it was watched by millions of people. I figure if everyone chips in a cent . . .

THAT COULD all change with a new album. Brouse plans to release Saturday's live recording independently. Sound Moves in Royal Oak is doing the remote recording.

The reason for choosing Birmingham to record the album stems from a Brouse appearance in March 1990. He performed in Brogren's living room when the singer/songwriter forum took place there. He found the atmosphere inspiring.

"I was telling Dave, 'I wish there was one of these in every city.' I'd be going to all of them."

Mary Miller: Making the most of her role as an emcee

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

'After you do it so many times, you say to yourself, 'Hey, I know this worked last night.' A lot of comedy is sticking with it.'

— Mary Miller

Mary Miller had one of those the other evening. It's a night when comedians, if given the choice between break dancing on a floor with a slithering pile of cobras or taking the stage, rubbing elbows with snakeskins doesn't seem so bad.

"It was," says Miller, "a horrible hell gig."

The term is common among comedians. Her comedic equivalent of purgatory came recently headlining for a one-night engagement in a small bar with an audience of men, 99.9 percent of whom were drunk.

Now, Mary, what was that line about PMS and its male alternative of DGA (Didn't Get Any)? Or how about the one about your ex-husband and the stripper?

Well, needless to say, that sort of female stuff doesn't play in a sea of stale beer and Old Spice.

"You learn not to take it personally," says Miller, 33, a former Farmington Hills resident. "After you do it so many times, you say to yourself, 'Hey, I know this worked last night.' A lot of comedy is sticking with it."

Such Miller has learned after two years of toiling on the comedy club circuit. The experience embosses one with a thick coat of rejection repellent, the kind of stuff that comes only after performing more than a handful of shows.

AND THESE things cannot be taught in school. Not that Miller didn't try, though.

She is one of several graduates of the Jonathon Round Laugh Academy, an intensive 10-week course for aspiring comedians.

Students were assigned to write up to 20 jokes a week and perform the material in front of classmates. Miller found the course enriching, launching her into comedy.

Miller has since been busy performing at area clubs, such as Chaplin's, Joey's and the Comedy Castle. Mostly, it's come in the role of an emcee. Lately, she has been appearing as a feature act.

"The thing about being an emcee is that you have to go up there and you have a cold audience. And, if you can't break the ice, it's more difficult for the headliner."

But in Miller's case, the 15-20 minute spots allow her to showcase some vibrant material that ranges from spiked girl talk to self-effacing humor. Miller pokes fun at her marriage of six years ("One year he got me a stripper for my birthday. Ya, she was really nice.")

The bit draws laughs, but one night Miller was leery using it. Her ex-husband turned up at the comedy club to see her perform.

"He thought it was funny," she said.

Miller's also good at interacting with an audience, trading a repartee or two when need to be.

SOMETIMES, SHE has to stretch her act a bit. One night, the headliner was late and the feature act didn't go beyond 25 minutes. So Miller was left to fill the gap. She ended up singing "Rocky Top."

Which wasn't as difficult as it sounds. Miller spent time in her hometown of Alexandria, Ohio, in Licking County, performing as a country singer.

Comedy came as a natural outgrowth, going back to childhood. She used humor to cope with growing up overweight.

"When you're a little fat kid, you're not the most popular girl in school. A lot of it (humor) was to make friends. If you're fun to be around, you're more likely to make friends."

Her 5-foot-10 frame carried 210 pounds at one time. She has since shed 50 pounds through dieting and aerobics.

Miller will shed more than that in March 1992. Then she'll leave her daytime job as a secretary to pursue comedy on a full-time basis.

"It's a little scary . . . You have this cushion of a daytime job. If your depending on it to pay your bills, you'll work a lot harder."

Mary Miller appears along with Keith Ruff and Danny Ballad Thursday through Saturday, June 20-22, at the Holly Hotel, 110 Battle Alley, Holly. For information, call 634-5210.

A graduate of the Jonathon Round Laugh Academy, Mary Miller has been polishing up her routine at Chaplin's, Joey's and the Comedy Castle, mostly in the role of emcee.

INDUSTRY

Inside Industry, patrons are treated to diversity — a relentless flashing of lights on the dance floor, a sound system that pulsates and a diversity of music.

A dance club that boasts of a new attitude

The people who visit Industry are as diverse as the music played there. The dress can range from semi-formal to T-shirts and jeans.

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

A NIGHT OF INDUSTRY can leave one tired.

Situated right in the heart of downtown Pontiac, at 15 S. Saginaw, is a visual assault as much as it is a dance club. In the hallway are four video monitors flashing non-stop images. Inside the double doors is a menagerie of catwalks, tucked away staircases, an unrelenting flashing of lights on a dance floor and sound system that pulsates.

Undoubtedly, such attributes would appeal to the dance club set who tend to be easily dazzled by sight and sound.

But Industry could be more about an attitude, a place where diversity and open-mindedness conquer restless spirits.

"It's what we're going to do here that will make the difference," says Amir Daiza of Keego Harbor, who is a local rock promoter and partner in the club.

Aside from catering to rhythmic impulses, Industry will highlight the arts, architecture and jewelry. Already, the club hosted an exhibition featuring the nouveau photography of Lisa Spindler.

"Right now, the styles are so diversified," Daiza says. "If you look at music, it's real diverse. If you look at art, it's real diverse. If you look at architecture, it's real diverse.

"People are not into one style anymore. They're real flexible."

ALREADY, INDUSTRY is appealing to a multitude of tastes by offering theme nights.

John Coltrane-Dizzy Gillespie devotees are in nirvana on Wednesdays when the Wednesday Night Jazz series takes place. Either a live band or a deejay performs. Admission is free and doors at 5 p.m.

Still have a pair of those bellbottoms, black patent leather platform shoes? Blow the dust off them and trundle down Sunday for "1970s Disco Party."

But for those who prefer to live in the present, or rather, the future, "Alternative Dance Party" on Thursday nights caters to the Doc Marten boot crowd.
crowd. Dee jays spin tunes by Front 242, Soundgarden, Happy Mondays, Charlatans UK, etc . . .

Or like recently, Industry lends itself to be a concert venue such as when Mute recording artists Renegade Soundwave performed there.

On this night, people mill around the stage as Renegade Soundwave lead singer spews out some programmed poetry.

Everyone moves to the vibrant dance tunes, except for the lead singer who sips Heineken and drops such lines of inspiration as "We going to have some fun?"

WHEN FINISHED, the lead singer spontaneously drops his microphone and walks off stage. The audience doesn't seem to notice, swaying to the beat the remaining band members lay down.

As a concert venue, Industry passes the test. The club holds 1,000 for acts who lend themselves to extraneous movement from the audience.

"We're not going to book punk bands like Butthole Surfers in here," Daiza says.

For those who don't wish to participate in the dance ritual, catwalks and back stairwells offer a bird's eye view to the stage.

When Blair McGowen, Charlie Gates, Vince Bannon and Daiza conceived the idea for Industry, they wanted more than just a dance club, more than just a place to swivel a drink and listen to music. For one, the group believes a club's got to have art.

Using the theme of architect Victor Saroki's deconstructivism, Industry is more about rebuilding. Several items, like ornate railings and portholes, were pulled out of the basement of the club that has operated under several names, most recently Isis.

THESE ARE augered with post modern features such cold metallic walkways and strobe lights.

Saroki's vision is paid tribute by Industry's Saroki Room. The enclave offers a respite from the technodance assault, sometimes featuring music from a harpist and other soloists. Imported wines, liqueurs, beer along with non-alcoholic drinks such as juice or cappuccino are offered at the bar.

The furnishings throughout Industry make an artistic statement as well.

Ceiling lamps are by Massimo Losa Ghini, who is the architect and creator of the Bolidist movement in Italy; Laminates and furniture are by Ettore Sottsass and Michele De Lucchi, pioneers of the Memphis Milano movements.

Heck, even the bar stools are artsy, designed by Philippe Starck, creator of the interiors of the Royalton and Paramount hotels in Manhattan.

"I want to reach an artsy crowd here," says Daiza, understating things a bit. "Most clubs are offering dancing and drinking. There's nothing really like this anywhere."

Anthony Richardson and Keshya Anthony listen to the music, unaware that the furniture they're sitting in is by Ettore Sottsass and Michele De Lucchi, pioneers of the Memphis Milano movements.

West influences fantasy in his Chinese art

By Virginia Lee Clark
special writer

In 1944, when he was 6, Jiang Tiefeng drew a horse's head on a wall in his parents' house.

"His mother didn't punish him," said Zhaolin Tiefeng, who acts as her husband's translator. "She praised him."

Her wisdom and insight were the encouragement he needed to know at that early age he wanted to be an artist.

It was prophetic that young Jiang should draw a horse. In Chinese art, it symbolizes speed, strength and endurance. He was going to need all these qualities in the ensuing years to bring his dream to fruition.

The exhibit of serigraphs, paintings and sculpture at Park West Galleries, 29469 Northwestern Highway, Southfield, through June 21 shows what grand dimensions that fruition has attained.

BORN IN Ningbo, Zhejiang Province in the People's Republic of China, Jiang studied with the famous Chinese artist Huang Yong-Yu in the traditional light wash and ink paintings of nature and landscapes.

He went on to the Central Art Institute in Beijing, receiving a bachelor of arts degree. His was to be the last class schooled in this centuries-old style.

About the high craft of repeating what has been done in the past, "The Chinese artist believes in the expediency of copying not only as a learning device, but also as a means of perpetuating ancient rules and techniques which might otherwise be lost," Diana Kan said in her book, "The How and Why of Chinese Painting."

While in art school, Jiang was exposed to examples of such Western artists as Picasso, Matisse, Chagall and Miro. He was captivated by the vibrancy of their colors so different from the pale values of the historically accepted art of his homeland.

JIANG OFFERED to work in Yunnan after graduation. He viewed this primitive province with its tribal residents and thick jungles as the "land of eternal spring."

He lived with three others in a 15-by-15-foot room. While he was there in 1966, the cultural revolution began. Mao Tse-tung dictated all artistic endeavors and viewed art as a perfect propaganda tool for his government.

During the day, Jiang produced the posters officially assigned to him, but by night met in secret with six other artists to explore their individual creative vision and to paint experimental works reflecting their fledgling theories.

They felt if technology could change almost daily, art should be allowed the same freedom.

Their subject matter was still anchored in the ethnic and geographical folklore of the ancient traditions of Chinese life, but they breathed a vitality into them with their brilliant colors and strong compositions.

Suppression had become the catalyst for a whole new school of art.

"My husband was the founder of the 'Yunnan School,' the first new art movement in our country in over 700 years," Zhaolin said with quiet pride.

THE REVOLUTION ended in 1976. Jiang came out of his artistic isolation and his life moved into fast-forward.

He was commissioned to paint a mural for the Great Hall of the People of Beijing. It was a representational piece capturing the essence of the Yunnan Province. At the same time, he was an associate professor at the Yunnan Art Academy.

He also served as an officer in the Chinese National Art Association and became a member of the Chinese Woodblock Association. He won second place in an international United Nations competition.

Jiang had exhibitions in Kunming, Beijing and Hong Kong and was gaining a reputation as a children's book illustrator.

His wry imagination and whimsical drawings used in "The Ugly Duckling," "Little Red Riding Hood" and Chinese fables are evident in his current work. He was invited to display his work in the International Exhibition of Illustrated Children's Books in Italy in 1983.

In that same year, he immigrated to the United States through a cultural exchange program with the University of Southern California.

Jiang Tiefeng's "Blue Lady" is a serigraph. Its strong primary colors, with red and yellow horses, create energy.

JIANG WAS the proverbial overnight success in America after painting for more than 20 years.

"In a show at the Fingerhut Galleries in Minneapolis, he sold 30 works in 15 minutes," Zhaolin said.

Allen Fingerhut became his agent. Jiang has had exhibitions nationwide in both galleries and museums.

"We are pleased to be able to present the most complete and important exhibition of Jiang Tiefeng's work since his August 1989 exhibition at the New England Center of Contemporary Art," said Albert Scaglione, president and founder of Park West Gallery.

It's hard to remain objective when describing Jiang's paintings and bronze sculptures.

His colors are dazzling. He imports his gouaches, acrylics and pure stone ground colors from China and uses them on rice paper. He completes his work and then reinforces his hues by painting the back of the paper so the color bleeds through.

The soft blues and lavenders placed in mosaic style in "Praise of the Big Leaf Hydrangea" create a dreamy mood. Outlines of birds, flowers and a woman emerge as the painting is viewed from a closer perspective. Shapes interlock.

The strong primary colors in "Blue Lady," with its red and yellow horses, create energy. Jiang orchestrates his palette to evoke an active response to his work.

JIANG CREATES a fantasy world, weaving in the lore of 1,000 years of Chinese art with western techniques. His calligraphic use of lines lends a rhythm to his work.

Women and women with children are found in almost every piece representing purity, fertility and nurturing. Each painting tells a story, and the longer it is looked at, the more there is to see.

Jiang shows his mastery of three-dimensional forms in his small sculptures. He combines many textures from the highly polished bodies of the women to the harsh scales of the dragon, for instance, in "Dragon Bride." The female figures are art deco in feeling but with finely wrought details.

The mermaid in "Pipa Melody" holds a lotus blossom in long, delicate fingers while the wind blows the rough, separated strands of her hair. The folds and ripples in the scarf in "Ribbon Dancer" make the metal seem as fluid as silk.

THIS PROLIFIC outpouring of Jiang's art, with its multi-layered designs and appealing colors, leaves the viewer in awe of both his work and his courage to change a historical art culture under the most adverse of circumstances.

Emotionally, his pieces arouse feelings that range from wanting to shout "yes, yes" to a quiet peace and confidence that "the sun will come out tomorrow." It is an art experience that the whole family can enjoy and appreciate.

"My husband works from morning until night," Zhaolin said. "He loves what he is doing, and it is very hard for me to get him to take a break."

They live in southern California now, a long way from the house where a little boy painted a horse's head on the wall.

organizing

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Today's column is a continuation of information found in ORTHO Products' "Straight Talk" booklet, along with local recycling information:

Smelling strong or offensive vapors or "fumes" does not mean you're exposed to toxic levels of chemicals, and should not cause poisoning or illness. But it's wise to open a window or turn on a fan to circulate fresh air until the odor is gone. Pregnant women, children and pets should stay away from treated areas until the product has dried.

If products are used in accordance with directions, pets licking their feet after walking across a treated lawn, after most sprays have dried, should be fine. Watch labels for warnings. Remove toys and food from treatment areas before application. Any toys accidentally sprayed should be washed thoroughly with soap.

Lawn, garden or other dangerous chemicals should never be poured on the ground, flushed down the toilet, or thrown in the trash. In fact, certain chemicals (such as DDT, 2-4-D, Chlordane and Silvex) have been withdrawn from the market. They are legally banned from landfills because of potential groundwater contamination.

Plan ahead when buying and mixing pesticides. Buy only what you will use within a year or two, and mix only the amount of diluted spray you need then. If you mix too much, dispose of the excess by spraying other plants that are listed on the label. Don't pour any pesticides down the drain as most pesticides are harmful to the beneficial organisms that work in septic tanks and sewage treatment plants.

For accidental spills, block access to the spill to prevent accidental contact. Ventilate the area (if necessary, use a fan for liquids, but never for powders or granules) and never hose down the spill. Extinguish all nearby pilot lights, and don't light matches or smoke while cleaning.

Wear protective clothing and sweep spilled solids into a plastic bag. Soak up spilled liquids with an absorbent material such as cat litter, paper towels or old rags. Place contaminated material in a plastic bag and seal. Scrub the floor with a mixture of water and household detergent. Absorb that solution as previously described. Repeat the process until all visible traces of the chemical are gone. (Call ORTHO's hot line 1-800-457-2022 for complete cleanup instructions.)

To dispose of unwanted chemicals, wait until your local hazardous waste collection program. If your community doesn't provide a program for disposal of hazardous wastes, contact local authorities to ensure a program is set up.

I'm 33, have 2 children, and want the better things in life. My career rewards me well for my efforts. I work between 42 and 46 hours in a well-displayed showroom. I enjoy ~~people and get~~ great personal satisfaction from knowing their lives will be better for having purchased my product. I presently earn in excess of $2500 a month salary plus commission and I'm not the highest paid salesperson in my company. 'Bob Barker emcees Daytime Emmys in first-ever prime-time slot'

'Twelfth time may be the charm for Susan Lucci'

By AMY SCHMIDT

A couple of firsts marks this year's Daytime Emmy Awards, airing Thursday, June 27, live from New York City: One, the ceremonies will be presented during prime time for the first time in the show's 18-year history; two, "All My Children" star Susan Lucci will compete for an unprecedented 12th time in the Outstanding Lead Actress category.

CBS leads the field with 78 nominations. ABC trails with 37 — less than half. NBC scored 29, PBS 22, Cable 14 and Fox 3.

Not new to the show is this year's repeat-host, Bob Barker ("The Price Is Right"). Barker, a five-time winner, could win his sixth game-show trophy during Thursday's CBS telecast.

What does Barker think of Lucci's chances? "If I were Susan Lucci," says Barker, "I would be sitting around hoping I did not win, because she gets more publicity for not winning the Emmy than the winner gets for winning the Emmy."

"Cheers" Ted Danson had been running neck-in-neck with Lucci for winless Emmy nominations until pulling away last season with a victory in prime-time Emmy competition.

Far from bitter about her dubious honor, Lucci has, in fact, capitalized on the scenario. Most recently she appears on a Nutrasweet commercial as a pampered, powder-puffed star who gets everything she wants — "except the Emmy!" she suddenly shouts, throwing an on-set temper tantrum. The creative spot also copped a Clio nomination.

The actress has also introduced a new line of hair-care products known as The Susan Lucci Collection with the help of Rodeo Drive salon owner Fernando Romero.

"If she (Lucci) wins an Emmy," says Barker, looking at the contest from all angles, "it's going to end her commercial career. Once she's won, well, then she's just another actress with with an Emmy. But as long as she doesn't win, she's an actress with 12 or 13 nominations."

But Barker is upbeat about his own prospects of winning. "I have five trophies. I think a half-dozen would be a nice number, don't you?" he goads in his optimistic "Price-Is-Right" tone of voice.

"Someone asked me, 'Have you ever hosted the Emmy Awards when you were nominated,'" tells Barker. "I have not only hosted when I was nominated, I've hosted the Emmys when I've won, I've hosted the Emmys when I lost, and I've hosted the Emmys when I was disqualified. So I don't think they'll have any surprises for me, but if I have my choice, I'd prefer to do it when I win."

And if Barker's competition, Alex Trebek ("Jeopardy!"), should win? Well, Trebek can just "come on down," says Barker. "I think that if I don't win, and Alex is there, I'm just going to say, 'All right, if you're so good, you just do the rest of the show,'" he chuckles.

The Daytime Emmy Awards honor excellence in network, cable and syndicated programs in diverse areas such as drama series, game/audience participation shows, talk/service shows, children's and animated series and specials.

Besides best drama series and lead actor and actress honors, a plethora of other technical and creative crafts comprise the total number of Emmy Awards — everything from Outstanding Achievement in Lighting Direction to Outstanding Achievement in Hairstyling, and Graphics and Title Design honors. Winners in some of those categories, primarily in the creative arts, were announced Saturday, June 22, in Los Angeles.

Outlaws' woes can't keep country down

By Dan Rice

Progressive country music's seminal Outlaws Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Johnny Cash and Kris Kristofferson stand and deliver in the Disney Channel's exclusive June 16 premiere of Highwaymen Live! After their respective IRS problems, heart surgeries and bad movies, it's a kick to see the ol' boys together on stage again. Filmed last year at Long Island's Nassau Coliseum, the performance special is peppered with candid moments and anecdotes.

Recounting why presidents are dangerous company, Without Warning: The James Brady Story depicts the White House press secretary's struggle to recover from wounds sustained during the assassination attempt on President Reagan. Starring Beau Bridges and Joan Allen, the HBO original movie debuts on Sunday, June 16.

There will be fireworks, flag-waving, and former President Ford scheduled for the 1991 Crosby Clambake, opening day of the fund-raising Crosby National Celebrity Golf Tournament. On June 17, The Nashville Network will present highlights of the festivities, featuring appearances by Bob Hope, Johnny Mathis, Gary Morris, Pat Boone, Norm Crosby, Vince Gill and Joe Williams.

Still controversial after all these years, Hitler's dreaded Protection Squad is examined on Sunday, June 16, on The Discovery Channel's History of the S.S.

Hale Irwin shoots for fourth U.S. Open win

By Steve Paschal

Defending champion Hale Irwin will be trying to link his name with some of golfing's great legends this week, when he goes after his fourth U.S Open championship.

ABC Sports will be broadcasting live from Chaska, Minn., as Irwin attempts to become only the fifth golfer to win the granddaddy of American professional tournaments four times since Horace Rawlins captured the first U.S. Open in 1895. Willie Anderson dominated the event between 1901 and 1905 when he won four titles. Since then, only Bobby Jones, Ben Hogan and Jack Nicklaus have duplicated that remarkable feat.

However, Irwin, who narrowly missed winning his first tournament of the year when he lost to Kenny Perry on the first hole of sudden death at the Memorial Tournament in May, could crack that elite foursome with a victory at Hazeltine Golf Club. Irwin won the Open twice in the 1970s, but it was more than a decade before he broke out of the pack to become a three-time champion.

A victory by Irwin, a former All-American defensive back at Colorado, would also make him only the fourth player ever to win two U.S. Opens back-to-back.

Jim McKay, Roger Twibell and Jack Whitacker will anchor the nine-person team that will provide stroke-by-stroke coverage of Sunday's final round.

STAR NOTES

Rob Morrow rides 'Northern' winds

By Lisa Otoupal

Rob Morrow rides a fresh Alaskan wind to success as one of the stars of CBS' surprise hit Northern Exposure.

Morrow's character, Joel Fleishman, is a New York doctor honoring his commitment to Alaska. The state agreed to finance his education if he would spend his first four years out of school practicing there. He agreed, thinking he would be based in one of the larger cities. Much to his shock and dismay, he was assigned to a remote village where he couldn't get his bagels, the Sunday New York Times on Saturday night or a decent game of golf.

Morrow was born in New York. He left school at 17 to pursue acting, motivated by his desire to avoid a conventional career. While sweeping the stage at a theater, he was offered his first part, and suddenly, what had been the pursuit of a good time became a serious artistic endeavor.

Between his film debut in Private Resort, a leading role in the television series Tattingers, and appearances on such shows as Fame and Spenser: For Hire, Morrow returned again and again to theater. He's been in more than 35 plays, having played the lead in Chaim Potok's musical adaptation of The Chosen.

The lack of violence and sensationalism in Northern Exposure brought Morrow back to television in what he feels is a positive role on a unique show.
